THE Consideration of the Difficulties, which for a long Time had attended both the Master and Scholar, in teaching and learning the Latin Tongue, hath of late so effectually engaged the Attention of several able and learned Men, that many noble Endeavours have been made, to promote the Advancement of Learning, by a rational Method of Education. And, amongst other Expedients, that of Translations, especially literal ones, has been found of such prodigious Efficacy and Use, to contribute equally to the Ease and Interest of the Master, and the quick Improvement of the Scholar, that the Authors usually taught in Schools are accompanied with such Translations.

Indeed, this Method has at length so deservedly prevailed, as to become almost universal, few Men, who are entrusted with the Education of Youth, either in a publick or private Capacity, having at this Day any reasonable Objection to raise against it, those which were made, when Translations were first introduced, having been fully considered and answered.—Wherefore, every Attempt, (as our Translator observes in his Preface to the Work at Large) to make Ovid plain, must be acceptable to the Publick; which he has endeavoured to do, by the Order of Construction in Ovid's own Words, by his excellent Translation, and most useful Notes.

This Work the Bookseller, from the Reputation and Credit it had obtained in England, was advised to reprint here, which he has done Page for Page with the English Edition, at the Price of 6s. 6d. and to accommodate others, who may think that Price too great, has here selected the Books usually taught in Schools, and contracted the Price proportionably.

N. B. He has also printed a very correct Edition of Ovid, cum Notis Delphini, for the Use of such Schools, as continue to teach without English Translations.

N O T E S:

The Metamorphoses of Ovid may be considered as a Collection of the chief of those Fables which Epic and Dramatic Poets had introduced into their Works in order to gain attention from their Readers, and raise their Admiration. These Fables are for the most Part founded in History. How they came to be chang'd in their Circumstances, so remote from credibility, will be taken Notice of in the Remarks upon each Fable in the Course of the Work. It is sufficient to observe at present, that Poets, to give their Subjects a greater air of Dignity, affected to relate every Thing with extraordinary Circumstances, and make the Gods interpose in all that concerned their Heroes. This Humour of the Poets, join'd to the superstitious Notions of those Times, produc'd an infinite Number of Fables, which Ovid has here connected together in one continued Poem, of which the whole Universe is the Scene, and that takes in all the Times from the Beginning of the World to the Age in which he wrote. This first Book begins with the unravelling of the Chaos, and distinguishing it into four Elements, to each of which are assign'd proper Inhabitants, and last of all Man is created. After this follow the four Ages of the World, the War of the Giants against Heaven, and the universal Degeneracy of Men. Jupiter finding that the Example of Lycaon changed into a Wolf was not sufficient to reclaim them, sends an universal Deluge, from which only Deucalion and Pyrrha escape, who repair the Loss of their Kind by throwing Stones behind them. Apollo kills the Python, falls in Love with Daphne, who is changed into a Laurel. The other Rivers assemble, uncertain whether to congratulate, or condole with her Father upon this Event. Inachus alone is absent, anxious for his Daughter, whom Jupiter had changed into a Heifer. Mercury kills Argus, whom Juno had appointed her Keeper. Soon after which Io, restor'd to her former Shape, bears a Son to Jupiter nam'd Epaphus, who is worshipped jointly with her by the Ægyptians. The Poet then, by a very natural and easy Transition, enters upon the Story of Phaeton.

1. In Nova fert.] Ovid follows here the Example of the Epic Poets, who always begin by a Proposition of their Subject, and invoking the Aid of the Muse. The Rules laid down by the Criticks for Exordiums are here strictly observed, both with Respect to Simplicity and Brevity.

1. Mutatas dicere formas corpora.] Some Commentators make this an Hypallage, instead of corpora mutata in novas formas; and find a Beauty in it, that the Proposition of a Subject which regards the Changes and Variations of Bodies should be fram'd with a Transposition of Words. But it may be explain'd also without an Hypallage, as forma is often us'd to signify the Thing itself: Thus formæ deorum, ferarum, pro ipsis diis, feris. And our own Poet, Trist. 1. 7.

Carmina mutatas hominum dicentia formas.

4. Perpetuum carmen.] Perpetuum carmen is the same with what was also known among the antients by the Name of poemâ cyclicum. It was of several Kinds; as when a particular Subject and Action were pitched upon, of a reasonable Length, but to be included in a determined Number of Lines; or when a Poet gave the entire History of a Prince. But the principal Kind of Cyclic Poem was, when the Poet carried his Subject from one fixed Period of Time to another, as from the Beginning of the World to the Trojan War, and connected all the Events together in a continued Train. It is in this last Sense that Ovid calls his Metamorphoses perpetuum carmen; all the Parts being connected together by the most natural and easy Transitions: For a certain Unity of Story is preserved through the whole, and he has managed his Subject with that happy Address, as to slide from one Circumstance into another without violating it. The Texture, as an excellent Critic observes, is so artful, that it may be compar'd to the Work of his own Arachne, where the Shade dies so gradually, and the Light revives so imperceptibly, that it is hard to tell where the one ceases, and the other begins. Deducite perpetuum carmen must therefore mean, carry down my Cyclic Poem, (i. e. the Chain, the Connexion of my Poem) from the Beginning of the World to the present Time.

5. Ante mare & tellus.] Ante is not here a Preposition governing a Case, as according to some Readings; ante mare & terras; but is to be taken adverbially, for primò, principio, "at first, in the Beginning:" Mare, tellus, & cælum erat unus vultus naturæ.

7. Quem dixere Chaos.] The ancient Philosophers, not being able to conceive how any thing could be produc'd out of nothing, laid it down as a Principle, ex nihilo nihil fit, & in nibium nil posse reverti. Therefore in their Accounts of the Creation of the World, they always suppose some pre-existing Matter, out of which Things were form'd, and rank'd in that orderly Disposition in which they now appear. The System here followed is that of Hesiod, the most ancient Poet now extant, that treats of the Origin of Things. For first he supposes a Chaos or pre-existing Matter, out of which the World and four Elements were form'd; and then describes the Manner in which these Elements were disposed; as that Æther possess'd the highest Place, Air the next, then Water, and Earth, on Account of its Gravity, the lowest. This Doctrine, monstrous as it appears, is no other than a disfigur'd Tradition of the Creation. Hesiod seems to have copied from Sanchoniathon, who undoubtedly drew his Ideas from the Writings of Moses, since in some Places he uses his very Expressions.

Thing but a lifeless lump, and the disagreeing Seeds of jarring Elements, confusedly jumbled together in the same Heap. No Sun as yet gave Light to the World, nor did the Moon in a Course of regular Changes repair her pointed Horns. The Earth was not hung self-bal-lanced in the surrounding Air, nor had the Sea stretch'd out her Arms to embrace the distant Coasts. For wherever there was Land, there too was Sea and Air : Thus was the Earth unstable, the Sea unnavigable, and the Air destitute of Light ; nor did any Thing appear in its real Form. For one constantly obstructed the Course of the other ; because in the same Heap, cold struggled with hot, moist with dry, hard with soft, and heavy Bodies with light. But God and kind Nature put an

10. Titan.] The Sun ; so call'd on Account of his supposed Father Hyperion, who was one of the Titans. This Hyperion was the first who by his assiduous Observations discovered the Course of the Sun, Moon, and other Luminaries. By them he regulated the Times and Seasons, and transmitted that Knowledge to others. No wonder then if he, who was the Father of Astronomy, has been also feign'd by the Poets to be the Father of the Sun and Moon.

11. Phæbe.] The Moon : so called, because supposed to be the Sister-of Phæbus or the Sun.

13. Ponderibus librata suis.] It is plain from this that the Poet had a very distinct Notion of the Gravitation of Bodies. All the Parts of Matter attract, and are mutually attracted, and consequently must hold one another in a perfect Equilibrium or Balance.

This Power of Gravitation is not only constant and universal, but acts always in Proportion to the solid content of Bodies, and with a Force which is in a direct simple Proportion of the Quantity of the Matter, and an inverse duplicate Proportion of the Distance.

14. Amphitrite.] The Daughter of Oceanus and Doris, and Wife to Neptune, God of the Sea : Hence she is here made to stand for the Sea itself. Some take her to be no more than a poetical Personage, whose name, derived from the Greek, signifies to surround.
According to this we may easily conceive how she came to be call'd the Wife of Neptune, or of the sea, which encompasses the Earth.

End to this intestine Discord ; for he separated Earth from Air, and Water from Earth, and distinguished between the grosser Air and the Æthereal Heaven. When he had thus unravelled the whole System of Things, and extricated them from their State of Confusion, he assign'd to each its proper place, and combin'd them in harmonious Order. The light fiery Element of vaulted ætherial Heaven shone out, and mounted to the highest Region. To this the Air succeeds in Lightness and Place. The Earth still heavier, drew along with it the more ponderous Elements, and was press'd together by its own Weight. The circling Waters sunk to the lowest Place, and begirt the solid Orb.

II. When thus he, whoever he was of the Gods, had divided the Mass, and by that Division form'd it into distinct Members ; first of all, that

NOTES.

21. Deus & melior natura.] Nature is a Word often us'd without any determined Signification, and in general we are apt to ascribe to it all those Appearances which we find it hard to explain upon established and known Principles. In its most proper Acceptation it means the invisible Agency of the Deity, in upholding the present Frame of Things. Et is therefore here, as Grammarians call it, an expositive Particle. Deus & natura ; as if the Poet had said, Deus sive natura.

31. Ultima possedit.] Sink to the lowest Place. This is not to be understood in a strict philosophical Sense, for that were to contradict the Doctrine of Hesiod and all the ancient Sages, who make Earth the heaviest of the four Elements, and place it in the Center : Nay, it were to contradict himself, seeing he says circumfluus humor coërcuit solidum orbem. The Waters possessing the lowest Place, is therefore only meant in respect of the Earth whereon we tread, not of the ponderous central Earth. For the external Surface of the Earth rises considerably, and suffers the Waters to flow round it in hollow deep Channels. This I take to be the true Meaning of the Passage. To say with some that Ovid calls Water the last of the Elements because it surrounds and encompasses the Earth, is just nothing at all ; he might for the same reason have done so of the Air. Some explain ultima extrema, that no Inequality might be found on either Side, he roll'd up the Earth into the Figure of a spacious Globe. He then commanded the Seas to flow round, and swell with raging Winds ; and to mark out Shores upon the encompass'd Earth. He added also Springs, and immense standing Pools and Lakes, and bounded the running Rivers by winding Banks. These, different in different Places, are swallowed up by the Earth itself ; others, carrying their Waters forward to the Sea, are there receiv'd into the Plains of the ample Ocean, and beat the Shores instead of Banks. He commanded likewise the Plains to be extended, the Vallies to sink down, the Woods to be covered with Leaves, and the rocky Mountains to rise. And as Heaven is divided on the Right by two Zones, and by a like Number on the Left, between which there is a fifth hotter than these ;

N O T E S.

40. Partim sorbentur ab ipsâ.] This is meant of those Rivers that, at some distance from their Fountains, disappear, and continue their course under Ground. Such Virgil tells us was the Alpheus in Peloponnesus. Such still are the Anas in Spain, and Rhone in France. Yet they are not so wholly swallowed up by the Earth, but that they appear again, and carry their Waters forward to the Sea.

43. Jussit & extendi campos.] This jussit is truly sublime, and serves admirably well to express the Ease wherewith an infinitely powerful Being accomplishes the most difficult Works. Let him but speak the Word, and it is done. There is the same Beauty here that is long since remark'd by one of the most celebrated Criticks among the Ancients, in the fiat of the Hebrew Law-giver.

45. Utque duæ dextra.] Astronomers take Notice of five Parallel Circles in the Heavens. First, the Equinoctial, which lyes exactly in the Middle between the Poles of the World, and has obtained its name from the Equality of Days and Nights all over the Earth, while the Sun is in its Plane. On each side of it are the two Tropics, at the distance of twenty three degrees and thirty Minutes, and describ'd by the Sun when in its greatest declination North and South, or at the Summer and Winter Solstices. That on the North Side of the Equinoctial is called the Tropic of Cancer, because the Sun describes it when in that Sign of the Ecliptic : And that on the South Side is for the same Reason call'd the Tropic of Capricorn. Again, at the distance of twenty three Degrees and a half these ; in like Manner did the Care of God distinguish this inclosed Mass by the same Number, and five corresponding Tracts are impress'd upon the Earth. half from the Poles of the World, are two other Parallels call'd the Polar Circles, either on Account of their Neighbourhood to the Poles, or rather because if we suppose the whole Frame of the Heavens to be turn'd round in the Plain of the Equinoctial, these Circles are mark'd out by the Poles of the Ecliptic. By Means of these Parallels Astronomers have divided the Heavens into five Zones or Tracts. The whole Space betwixt the two Tropics is the Middle or Torrid Zone, which the Equinoctial divides into two equal Parts. On each Side of this are the Temperate Zones, which extend from the Tropics to the two Polar Circles. And lastly, the Spaces inclosed by the Polar Circles make up the Frigid Zones. Now as the Planes of these Circles produc'd 'till they reach the Earth, will also impress similar Parallels upon it, and divide it in the same Manner as they divide the Heavens, hence Astronomers also conceive five Zones upon the Earth corresponding to those in the Heavens, and bounded by the same Circles.

49. Quarum quæ media est.] The Understanding of this depends upon knowing the Course of the Sun. The Ecliptic in which he moves, cutting the Equator in two opposite Points, at an Angle of twenty three Degrees and a half, runs obliquely from one Tropic to another, and returns again in a corresponding Direction. Hence the Sun, who in the Space of a Year performs the Revolution of this Circle, must in that Time be twice vertical to every Place in the Torrid Zone, except directly under the Tropics ; and his greatest Distance from their Zenith, at Noon, cannot exceed forty seven Degrees. Thus his Rays being often perpendicular, or nearly so, and never very oblique, must dart more forcibly, and in greater Numbers, and occasion intense Heats in that Tract. The Ancients believed it uninhabitable, being but little acquainted with the Extent and Situation of the Earth, Course of the Winds, &c. But later Discoveries have not only found it stock'd with Inhabitants, but also a rich fertile Soil, abounding in every Thing needful for the Support and Pleasure of Life.

50. Nix tegit alta duas.] viz. The two Polar or Frigid Zones. For as the Sun never approaches nearer these than the Tropic on that Side, and is, during one Part of the Year, remov'd by the additional Extent of the whole Torrid Zone, his Rays must be very oblique and faint, so as to leave them exposed to almost perpetual cold.

51. Temperiemque dedit.] The Temperate Zones, lying between the Torrid and Frigid, partake of each, and are of a middle Temper between hot and cold. Here too the Distinction of Seasons is most manifest. For in either Temperate Zone, when the Sun is in that Tropic, which borders upon it, being nearly vertical, the Heat must be very considerable, and make its Summer : But when he has got to the other Tropic, being now further remov'd from the Zenith by an Arch of forty seven Degrees, his Rays will strike but faintly, and occasion Winter. The intermediate Spaces, while he is moving from one Tropic to the other, make Spring and Autumn. To prevent Mistakes we must observe, that Ovid, considering the Torrid Zone as the Air, which is by so much heavier than Fire, as the Weight of the Water falls below the Weight of Earth. Here he ordered Clouds and Storms to engender, and Thunder that fills with Terror the human Breast, Lightning, and the Winds that bring on Winter Colds. Nor did the great Contriver of the World leave these to take an uncontroll'd Possession of the Sky. Even now (though each Wind governs his own Blasts in the Tract assigned him) they can scarce be hindered from rending the World to Pieces; so great is the Rage and Discord of the Brothers.

North Quarter the right Side of Heaven, and the South the left.

61. Eurus ad Auroram.] The Poet, after observing that the Air is the proper Region of the Winds, proceeds to take Notice that God, to prevent their making Havock of the whole Creation, subjected them to particular Laws, and assigned each the Quarter from whence to direct his Blasts. Eurus was sent towards Aurora and the eastern Regions. Eurus is the East-wind, so called by a Greek Derivation, because it blows from the East.
And as Aurora, or the Morning, was always ushered in by the Sun, who rises eastward, hence she was supposed to have her Habitation in the eastern Quarter of the World, and often stands in the Language of Poetry for the East.

61. Nabathæaque regna.] The Realms of the East: For we learn from Josephus, that Nabath, the Son of Ismael, with his eleven Brothers, took Possession of all the Country from the Euphrates to the Red-Sea, and called it Nabathæa. Pliny in his natural History speaks of the Nabatheii in Arabia Felix. Persia was a noted Kingdom of Asia, Eastward of Italy.

63. Vesper & occiduo.] The Evening Region and Coasts where the Sun sets, that is, the Western Part of the World, was assign'd to the Zephyrs, or West Winds, so call'd by a Greek Derivation, because they cherish and enliven Nature.

The Region opposite to this is wet with continual Clouds, and the rainy South-Wind. Over these he placed the liquid Firmament of Heaven, a light æthereal Substance, void of Gravity, and purg'd from all the gross Dregs of Earth.

Scarce had he distinguish'd all these by their assign'd Limits, when the Stars, that had hitherto lain hid under the lumpish Mass of the Chaos, began to shine out, and enlighten the whole Expanse of Heaven. And that no Region might be without its proper Inhabitants, he fills the empty Tract of Heaven with Stars and the Forms of Gods. The Waters

NOTES.

64. Scythiam septemque trionem.] Scythia, a Northern Region of Asia. Septentrio, the North Quarter of the World, so called from the Triones, a Constellation of seven Stars, near the North Pole, known by the Name of Charles's Wain. Boreas was the Son of Astræus, or, according to others, of Strymon. His name is derived from a Greek Word, signifying an Eddy, Vortex: Hence probably the Poets use it so often for the North Wind, which, in its Violence, rages sometimes to that Degree as to occasion Whirl-winds.

65. Contraria tellus.] That is, the South Quarter of the World, for the South Pole is directly opposite to the North. The South Wind is here call'd rainy, because blowing upon Italy from the Sea, it always brings with it Clouds and Rain. The intermediate Winds are omitted, as being only Subdivisions of the four Principal here describ'd.

67. Hæc superimposuit liquidum & gravitate carentem Æthera.] Here we have the Poet spreading a thin Veil of Æther over his infant Creation, which is agreeable enough to the late Discoveries in Philosophy. His Notion indeed of its being entirely void of Gravity is not strictly true. But the Error is so small as not to deserve Notice, since from Dr. Halley's Discourse of the Barometer it appears, that if, on the Surface of the Earth, an inch of Quicksilver in the Tube, be equal to a Cylinder of Air of 300 Foot, it will be, at a Mile's Height, equal to a Cylinder of Air of 2,700,000 Foot. And therefore the Air, at so great a Distance from the Earth as the Poet here supposes his Æther, must be rarify'd to so great a Degree, that the Space it fills will bear but a very small Proportion to that which is entirely void of Matter.

73. Formæque Deorum.] It is not easy to understand what the Poet means by the Forms of the Gods. Some refer it to the Stars, as if he would be understood that they were Images of the Gods. But I am rather apt to think that formæque Deorum is only a poetical Expression for the Gods themselves; and that he assigns the Heavens as the Habitation of the Gods and Stars: These last, according to the Notion of the Platonists, being a Kind of intelligent Beings, or, at least, guided and actuated by such.

ters fell to be the Habitation of the smooth Fishes ; the Earth is peopled with wild Beasts, and the yielding Air with Birds.

But a more noble Animal, and capable of still higher Faculties, form'd for Empire, and fit to rule over the rest, was yet wanting. Man was design'd : whether the great Artificer of Things, who created the World in a better State, form'd him at first of a divine Principle ; or the infant Earth, newly divided from the high Æther, still retain'd some Particles of its kindred Heaven : which the wise Son of Japetus tempering with living Streams, fashioned after the Image of the Gods who rule over

N O T E S.

78. Natus homo est.] We have here another Proof that the ancient Poets, in their Accounts of the Creation of the World, followed a Tradition that had been copied from the Writings of Moses. The Formation of Man in Ovid, as well as in Genesis, is the last Work of the Creator.

79. Mundi melioris origo.] The Author of a better World. So I have translated it : taking the Meaning of the Poet to be, that God created the World in a better State than that in which it now appears. Man at first was perfect and untainted with Vice : The Earth too yielded every Thing better, and in more Abundance, of her own Accord. I am the more confirmed in this, because in the Account of the four Ages of the World, which immediately follows, he speaks of Man as gradually degenerating from State of perfect Simplicity and Innocence.

82. Quam satus Japeto.] The Story of Prometheus will require to be explained somewhat largely. He was, according to the most received Account, the Son of Japetus and Clymene. I shall pass over that Part of his History which relates to his deceiving Ju- pter, and refusing to espouse Pandora, and only observe that he is fabled to have form'd Man of temper'd Clay, whom Minerva, the Goddess of Sciences, animated. There are two Ways of explaining this History. First, that the Inhabitants of Scythia being at that Time extremely savage, and without Laws, either written or traditional, Prometheus, a polite and knowing Prince, taught them to lead a more humane Life, and instructed them in Agriculture, Physic, and other Sciences. This, in the hyperbolical Language of the Poets, was call'd, his having formed a Man whom the Goddess of Sciences animated. But there is still another Explanation of this Fable, given by Lactantius. He takes it to have no other Foundation, but that Prometheus was the first who taught the Art of making Statues of Clay. This Conjecture is greatly strengthened by a fine Monument still extant, and that may be seen in the first Volume of Montfaucon's Antiquities. It represents Prometheus forming a Man, and there you may see him working with a Chissel, a plain Indication that the Art of Statuary is intended by it. This Image, besides, is very singular ;

NOTES.

Minerva there appears, because, according to Lucian, it was she that animated the Work of Prometheus. There you likewise see Psyche with her Wings, riding in a Chariot, because she was the Symbol of the Soul. 'Tis plain that all this was intended to signify to us, that the Statues of Prometheus were so perfect, that they wanted nothing but a living Soul to be self-mov'd. Without giving into some such Explication as this, how shall we account for what the Poet says here and afterwards, that Man being not as yet created, Prometheus mixed Clay, and moulded him into his present Figure, since he was a Man himself, and Antiquity gives us the History of his Father and Ancestors. So far with respect to the Formation of Man. Other Particulars in the History of Prometheus will come in more properly afterwards.

89. Aurea prima fata est ætas.] After the Formation of Man follow the four Ages of the World, which are denominated from four Metals, in a Succession from better to worse, answering to the gradual Degeneracy of Mankind. The golden Age comes first, and is a Continuation of the same Tradition we have mentioned before. Truth in the Poets is always disguised under a Veil of Fiction. They had heard that the first Man liv'd for some Time in perfect Innocence, that the Ground, in the Garden of Eden, yielded all kinds of Fruit, without being cultivated, and that the inferior Animals, submissive to his Commands, paid him all due Homage: But that after his Fall, all Nature revolted against him. Hence this Age of Gold, so celebrated by the Poets, the Innocence of Manners, the spontaneous Production of Fruits, and the Rivers of Milk and Honey. The Ancients refer to Italy and the Reigns of Saturn and Janus, what the Scripture relates of Adam and the terrestrial Paradise: For Antiquaries seem now to be agreed, that Saturn was Adam, and Janus, Noah. Would the short Compass of these Annotations permit me to enter into a particular detail, I might, from a great Number of parallel Circumstances, make the Thing appear extremely probable. But I shall content myself with referring those who have a Curiosity to know more of this, to the first Book of Bochart's Phaleg. Vossius's Treatise of Idolatry, and the first Volume of Banier's Mythology.

91. Verba minacia fixo ære legebantur.] It was the Custom among the Ancients to grave their Laws on Tables of Brass, and fix them up in some conspicuous Places, that they might be open to the View of all. This whole Description Nations, peaceable and secure, liv'd in soft Tranquillity without the Help of the Soldier. The Earth too of herself, untouch'd by the Harrow, nor wounded by Plow-shares, plentifully furnished all Kinds of Fruit, and Men, contented with the Food which Nature freely gave, gathered the Fruit of the Strawberry Bush, and the Wildings growing on the Mountains, and Cornels, and Black-berries sticking among the thorny Brambles, and the Acorns that fell from the spreading Oak of Jove. There an eternal Spring reign'd, and gentle Zephyrs cherish'd by fostering Breezes the Flowers that grew unsown in Fields and Meadows. Soon too the Earth unplow'd, yielded also Crops of Grain, and the Land, without being renew'd, whiten'd with heavy Ears of Corn. Rivers of Milk and Nectar ran through the Plains, and yellow Honey distill'd from the young Oak.

IV. But when the World came to be under Jupiter, (Saturn being driven into the dark Realms of Tartarus) the Silver Age succeeded, excelled by Gold, but more precious than that of Brass. Jupiter shortened the Duration of the ancient Spring, and divided the Year by four Seasons, appointing Summers, unsteady Autumns, Winters, and a short Spring, in constant Succession. Then first the parch'd Air began to glow with sultry Heats, and Ice and Snow hung, bound up by the cold Winds. Then first Men sought shelter in Houses; their Houses were Caves, and thick Shrubs, and Twigs ty'd together with Bark. Then were

NOTE.

113. Saturno tenebrosa in tartara misso.] The Fable of Jupiter's dethroning his Father Saturn, is to be found at large in all the Writers of Mythology. The Poets, who had plac'd the golden Age under Saturn, refer the silver Age to Jupiter. It was by him that the Year was first divided into four Seasons, for before there had been a constant Spring. This Notion prevails universally among the Poets, but probably had no other Foundation, than their fancying that this Image agreed perfectly to their Ideas of those sweet and happy Times. For how the Ecliptic, if it had ever co-incided with the Equinoctial, should change its Situation so much, as to cut it now at an Angle of twenty three Degrees and an half, is not easy to be conceiv'd. Some modern Astronomers indeed pretend to have discover'd something of this Kind; but besides that their Observations are very uncertain, supposing them even true, this Declination of the Ecliptic is so very inconsiderable, that many Millions of Years must have pass'd before it could change from a perfect Parallelism to its present Degree of Obliquity; unless we will suppose, with Mr. Whiston, that the Earth, by the sudden and violent Shock of a Comet, was jolted out of her natural Position, and had her Poles driven at once to the Distance of twenty three Degrees and a half from the Poles of the Ecliptic. Whatever may be in that, according to our Poet, after the Age of Gold, comes one of Silver, then one of Brass, and last of all the Iron Age. All this well understood implies, that Mankind did not at once degenerate from their primitive Innocence, but that it was by several Steps and Gradations they arrived at that Height of Impiety, so pathetically lamented by the ancient Historians. We may observe that this System in the poetical Account is but ill put together. For even in the Age of Saturn, which according to them was that of Gold, we read of bloody Wars, and dreadful Crimes. Saturn, to mount the Throne, drove his Father from it: Jupiter us'd his Father precisely as he had done Uranus, and established his Empire in the Destruction of his whole Family. Jupiter enjoyed little more Tranquillity, than had Saturn or Uranus; the Combination of the Titans and Giants is a Proof of it.

Tradition of the Fall of the Angels, and their Rebellion against their Creator. But the more general Opinion makes it a true History of some Enterprize against Jupiter, who was a powerful Prince, beset with many formidable Enemies. There were several Princes distinguish'd by the Name of Jupiter, but the present Fable is to be understood of him who divided the Empire with his two Brothers, Neptune and Pluto; which by the by we may observe, was what gave Occasion to the famous Partition of the Government of the Universe, so celebrated by the Poets. Jupiter had Pbyrgia, the Isle of Crete, and many other Provinces. He built a Palace on Mount Olympus, which the Poets regard as Heaven; the Attempt of his Enemies to drive him from

When these huge Bodies of Giants were thus buried under the Ruins of the Mountains they had themselves heap'd together, 'tis said, that the Earth, impregnated with the Blood of her own Sons, became very moist, and animated the warm Gore; and that all monuments of that daring Race might not be wholly extinguished, shap'd them into the Figure of Men. to the Palace of the great Thunderer. On the Right and Left are the Courts of the nobler Deities, with crowded Gates. The Gods of inferior Rank fix in different Places, as they can. Facing the Palace itself are the Houses of the more potent and illustrious Inhabitants of Heaven : This is the Place which, if Boldness may be allow'd to my Expressions, I'd dare to call the Grand Court of Heaven. When therefore the Heavenly Powers were thus assembled, and all seated in Chairs of Marble, he, the Father, exalted on his Throne, and leaning upon a Scepter of Ivory, shook thrice his awful Locks : Earth, Sea, and Heaven tremble at the Almighty Nod. At length, full of Indignation, he thus address'd the attentive Powers :

“ I was not then more concerned for the Empire of the Universe, “ when each of the Snake-footed Monsters endeavoured with his hundred “ Hands to embrace the captive Skies. For although that was a potent “ and fierce Enemy, yet the War was with but one Race, and sprung wholly

180. Cum qua terram, mare, sidera movit.] This awful Nod of Jupiter, the Sanction by which he confirms his Decrees, is an Idea taken from Homer, by whom it is so well painted towards the End of the first Book of the Iliad, that Phidias in his Statue of that God, particularly admir'd for a certain awful Majesty in its Looks, is said to have taken the Hint from that Description. Virgil has the same Idea, Æn. x.

 “ the Gods ?”

Upon this a general Murmur ran through the Assembly ; and with ardent Zeal they demanded Vengeance on so daring a Criminal. Thus, when an impious Band of Traitors fought to extinguish the Roman Name, by shedding the Blood of Cæsar, Mankind was astonish'd at the Terror of so mighty a Ruin, and the whole Earth trembled with Horror of the Attempt. Nor was the affectionate Concern of your Subjects less grateful to you, Augustus, than that of the Gods was to Jupiter; who signifying to them with his Voice and Hand, to suppress their Murmurs, they were all silent. How soon the Clamour ceas'd, check'd by the Authority of their Sovereign; Jupiter resuming his Speech, thus broke Silence.

“ He indeed, (cease your Cares) has already suffered the Punishment due to his Crimes; but 'tis fit that you know what was his Guilt, and what Vengeance followed it.

“ The Cry of Iniquity had reach'd my Ears, which wishing to find false, I descend from the Top of Olympus, and, disguis'd in human Shape, traverse the Earth. It were endless to repeat the aggravated Guilt that every where prevail'd: Report had fallen far short of the Truth. I had now pass'd Mænalus, infamous for its Caverns fill'd with Beasts of Prey, Cyllene, and the piny Shades of cold Lycæus. Hence I enter the Arcadian Realms, and unhospitable House of the bloody Tyrant, just as the late 'Twilight drew on the Night. I gave the Signal, Cruelty, that he murdered his Guests, and caus’d them to be serv’d up at Table. Jupi- ter hearing of it, went to his Palace, and finding the Report true, changed him into a Wolf, and reduc’d his Palace to Ashes. But to come at the true History, we must observe, that the Ancients distinguish two Princes of this Name. The first was the Son of Phero- neus, and reigned in that Part of Greece, which was afterwards call’d Arcadia, and to which he communicated the Name Lycænia, about 250 Years before Cecrops. The second, who is the Subject of the present Fable, succeeded him, and was a Prince equally polite and religious ; but by an Inhumanity which was

Some by Words approve the Words of Jupiter, and add Spurs to his Indignation; others by Assent declare their Concurrence: Yet the total Destruction of Mankind is Matter of Grief to all. They enquire what Form the Earth would assume, when no longer a Habitation for Men: Or who would burn Incense upon their Altars? Whether he intended to give up the Nations of the World a Prey to wild Beasts? The Sovereign of the Gods counsels them to cancel these unnecessary Fears, and trust to his Care, promising to raise up a new Generation different from the former, and propagated by a miraculous Power. to scatter his Thunder, and discharge it on Seas and Land; but stopt, fearing lest the sacred Æther might catch the Flame from so many Sparks, and the long Axle-Tree of Heaven be set on Fire. He remembers too, that it was in the Decrees of Fate, that a Time should come, when Sea, Earth, and the Battlements of Heaven, seiz'd by the Flames, should burn; and the curious Frame of the Universe perish, in a general Conflagration. This dire Artillery, forg'd by the Hands of the Cyclopes, is therefore laid aside, and he resolves upon another Method of Punishment; to drown Mankind by an universal Deluge, and pour down Rain from all Parts of Heaven. Immediately he shuts up the North-Wind in the Caves of Æolus, with all the Cloud-dispelling Blasts; and then sends out the South-Wind. The South-Wind flies abroad, scattering Fogs from his moist Wings: His Countenance is covered with thick and horrid Darkness; his Beard loaded with Showers; and the Water flows in Streams from his hoary Locks: Dark Clouds gather round his Forehead; his Wings, and the Plaits of his Robe, distil in Drops: And still, as sweeping along, he squeez'd the hanging Clouds with his broad Fist, a Noise was heard, and redoubled Showers came

255. Longusque ardesceret axis.] The Axis of the World, according to Astronomers, is an imaginary right Line passing through the Center of the Earth, and upon which the whole Frame of the Heavens was supposed to turn round; though latter Discoveries tell us, that only the Earth moves round its Axis, and causes that Appearance of the Heavens.

259. Manibus fabricata Cyclosum.] The Cyclopes, according to Hesiod, were the Sons of Cœlus and Terra, they had but one Eye in their Forehead, and were employed by Jupiter in forging his Thunder-bolts.

The Corn is laid flat, beneath the impetuous Rains, and the Husbandman, defrauded of his Hopes, laments to see the Labour of the long Year perish. Nor can the Floods pour'd down from Heaven satisfy the Vengeance of Jove: Blue Neptune aids him with his auxiliary Waves. He calls together the Rivers; who when assembled in the Palace of the watery Tyrant: "I have not now Time (says he) for a long Exhortation; pour out all your Rage, so Jove requires; open your Sources, bear down every Obstacle, and with unbridled Course, hurry on your Waves."

He said: They return, and opening wide the Mouths of their Fountains, roll on their Streams with impetuous Rage to the Sea. The God himself struck the Earth with his Trident; she, with inward trembling, open'd her deep Caverns, and pour'd out the gushing Floods. The expanded Rivers, with spreading Waves, rush into the open Plains, and bear away

NOTES.

270. Nuncia Junonis Iris.] Iris, or the Rainbow, was a Divinity purely physical; But Greek Mythology, which personify'd every Thing, made her a young Woman, cloathed in a habit of different Colours, always seated by the Throne of Juno, and ready to execute her Orders. Hence she was feign'd to be the Messenger of that Goddess, as Mercury was of Jupiter. They have fram'd a Genealogy for her too; and we are told that she was the Daughter of Thaumas, a poetical Personage, whose Name is deriv'd from a Greek Word that signifies to admire; which, after all, is proper enough to denote the Quality of the Meteor they design'd to describe, there being nothing more admirable than that Bow, which are borne up by the Deep. The Boar finds no Safety in the resistless Force of his Tusks; nor the Stag in the Swiftness of his Legs, now borne away by the Stream: And the wandering Bird, after having long sought for Land, whereon to rest, his Wings at length failing, drops into the Sea. The unbridled fury of the Sea had now overwhelm'd the highest Hills, and the unusual Waves beat against the Tops of the Mountains. The greater Part are buried in the deep; such as the Waters spar'd perish at length for Want of Food. Phocis separates the Boeotian from the Athenian Lands; a fruitful Country while it was a Country, but now a Part of the Sea, and a wide Plain of suddenly collected Waters. Here a Mountain, Nam'd Parnassus, advances with two Tops towards the Stars, and, with its lofty Front rises above the Clouds. When here Deucalion, (for the Sea had covered all the rest) carried in a little Bark with the Partner of his Bed, first rested, they adore the Corycæan Nymphs, the Deities of the Mountains, and prophesying Themis, who at that Time gave Oracles. He the most upright of Men, and greatest Lover of Justice, she the most pious of Women, and the sincerest Worshipper of the Gods.

When Jupiter beheld the World thus buried under a Lake of Waters; and that of so many thousands lately, only one of either Sex remain'd; both guiltless, both devout Worshippers of the Gods; He dispers'd the Clouds, and driving away the Rain by the Northwind, discovered Earth to Heaven, and Heaven to the Earth. The Rage of the Sea too abated; for the Governor of the Deep, laying aside his three-forked Spear, smoothes the furrowed Waves, and calls upon Triton, who instantly mounts from the Bosom of the Ocean, having his Shoulders adorned with the finest purple Shells. The God commands him to blow his sounding Trumpet, and give the Rivers and Billows the Signal to retire: He immediately takes up the hollow writh'd Shell, whose narrow Mouth widens by Degrees to a large Extent, and urging as he stood amidst the Waves the repeated Blasts, fills both Regions of the Sky with the spreading Sound. Then too when it touch'd the Mouth of the God, dropping with his wet Beard; and, fill'd with his Breath, sounded the bidden Retreat, it was heard by all the Waters both of Earth and Sea; the Waters, obedient to the Call, retire within

NOTES.

333. Cæruleum Tritona vocat.] The Tritons are represented by the Poets as Monsters, having the half of their Bodies human, and the other half Fish, with Shell Trumpets in their Hands, whereby they make the Shore to resound. When this Name was used in the singular, as here by Ovid, it denoted that one of the Tritons, who always preceded Neptune, whose Arrival he proclaim'd by the Sound of his Shell, and was therefore taken for that God. Hesiod, who has given his Genealogy, says he was the Son of Neptune and Amphitrite.

the Heavenly Powers in pious Prayers, and seek Relief from the sacred Oracles. They repair therefore without Delay to the Banks of Cephisus, whose Waters, though troubled, were yet gliding along their wonted Channel; and after besprinkling their Head and Garments with the consecrated Stream, direct their Steps towards the Temple of the sacred Goddess, whose Roofs are defil’d with Moss, and the desert Altars void of holy Fire. As soon as they reached the Steps of the Temple, they fell prostrate on the Ground, and with trembling Lips kiss’d the cold pave-to Pity by just Prayers; if heavenly Minds are capable to relent: Tell Prayers, and thus graciously answered: Depart from the Temple, veil your Heads, and loosening your Garments, throw behind you the Bones of your mighty Mother. Long they stood amaz'd, 'till Pyrrha first breaks Silence, and refuses to obey the dire Commands of the Goddess. With trembling Mouth she implores Forgiveness, and dreads to offend her Mother's Shade, by throwing behind her these holy Relicks. In the mean Time they revolve again and again the Words of the Oracle involv'd in deep Mystery, and ponder them with themselves. At length the Son of Prometheus thus, with mild Benevolence, addresses his Spouse: Either my Discernment fails, or the Oracles are just, and advise no Sacrilege. Our mighty Mother is the Earth, and the Stones in the Body of the Earth are, as I imagine, call'd her Bones: These we are commanded to throw behind us. Pyrrha, though pleas'd with the Solution of her Spouse, yet fluctuates between Hope and Fear: So much do both distrust the Commands of Heaven: But where is the Harm to try? They descend from the Mount, veil their Heads, and unbind their Vests, and, as commanded, throw Stones behind them. The Stones, (who could believe it, did not a kindly Womb, swell'd, and in Time took on a regular Shape. Thus when seven-channel'd Nile forsakes the oozy Fields, and recalls his Waters to their ancient Bed, and the fresh Mud is warm'd by the Sun's æthereal Rays: The Labourers, in turning up the Glebe, find innumerable Animals, among which are some just begun, and in the first Rudiments of Organization; some imperfect, and short of their Limbs: Nay, it often happens, that in the same Body one Part lives, the other is a Lump of Earth. For when the Heat and Moisture are mixed in due Proportion they conceive, and all Things arise from these two. For though Fire and Water are repugnant to each other, yet a moist Vapour gives Birth to Things, and this friendly Discord is the Source of Generation. When therefore the Earth, covered with Mud by the late Deluge, was thoroughly heated by the glowing Rays of the Sun, she produc'd innumerable Species of Creatures, and partly restor'd the former Shapes, partly gave Birth to new and unknown Monsters. Unwillingly indeed, yet she produc'd thee also, enormous Python, a Serpent of an unusual Kind, and the great Terror of this new Race of Mortals; so vast and Mountain-like thy Bulk.

Joys of the married State. Oft her Father said, Daughter, you owe me a Son-in-Law; often he said, Daughter, you owe me Grand-Children. She, abhorring the Nuptial Torch as a Crime, has her lovely Cheeks covered with Blushes, and hanging upon her Father's Neck, with fawning Arms, "Grant me, (says she) dearest Parent, to enjoy a perpetual Virginité; 'tis no more than what Diana's Father granted before." Pe-neus yields to her Request; but her Beauty contradicts her Wishes, and the Charms of her Person are an Obstacle to her Desires. Phœbus loves, and aspires to the Marriage of Daphne. He vainly too hopes to enjoy what he seeks, and is betray'd by his own Oracles: And as light Stubble burns in the naked Fields, or dry Hedges set on Fire by the Traveller's Torch, if by Chance held too near, or left now about Day break; so the God burns, and nourishing in his Breast the Flames of Love, feeds with Hope a fruitless Fire. He views her Neck, round which her Hair waves in careless Ringlets. How graceful, says he, must it appear were it comb'd? He views her Eyes sparkling like the Stars, and her Lips, which it is not enough barely to view. He praises her Fingers, Hands, and Arms,

The Daughter of Peneus still flies, nor regards him, as he thus continued his Complaints, and the imperfect Accent dies on her Ear : Then too she appeared lovely ; the Winds exposed her Body to View, the meeting Blasts tofs’d back her flowing Robe, and the gentle Gales spread her carelets Locks behind : Thus her Flight increased her Beauty. But the youthful God, too eager to lose his Time in empty Compliments, and urg’d by Love, pursues his Steps with quicken’d Pace. As when a Greyhound has spied a Hair in the open Plain, and with redoubled Speed pursues his Prey, she with equal Speed eludes his Steps : The one just ready to fasten, 533. Ut canis in vacuo.] The Simile is here drawn with all the Strength and Colouring of Poetry, and admirably fitted to give us an Idea of the Eagerness wherewith the God pursued on the one Hand, and the Anxiety wherewith the Nymph endeavoured to escape on the other. Mr. Pope, in his Windsor-Forest, has imitated this Passage, where he describes the Nymph Lodona pursued by Pan, and transform’d into a River. As the whole Passage in the English Poet is inexpressibly beautiful, and wrought up with all the interesting Circumstances that can engage the Attention of the Reader, I shall transcribe it here entire, and compare it with Ovid.

Not half so swift the trembling doves can fly,
 When the fierce eagle cleaves the liquid sky :
 Not half so swiftly the fierce eagle moves, When thro’ the clouds he drives the trembling doves ;
 As from the God she flew with furious pace, Or as the God more furious urg’d the chace.
 Now fainting, sinking, pale, the nymph appears, Now close behind his sounding steps she hears ;

And now his shadow reach’d her as she run, His shadow lengthen’d by the setting sun :
 And now his shorter breath with sultry air, Pants on her neck, and fans her parting hair.

The short Compass of these Notes will not allow me to illustrate similar Passages by comparing them minutely with each other, tho’ perhaps nothing could contribute more to form the Taste, and give the Mind a right Tincture. I shall therefore sometimes, tho’ not so often as I could wish, take that Liberty. The Simile of the Greyhound in Ovid, and of the Eagle in Mr. Pope, are both finely imagined, and receive a considerable Beauty from the Repetitions, I mean the marking distinctly the Eagerness and Swiftiness wherewith the one pursues, and the other flies ; for by that Means their mutual Struggles are more strongly represented to the Fancy ; and it would be hard to say which has succeeded best. But in the descriptive Part, where the God gains upon the Nymph, and at last comes up with her ; the English Poet has manifestly improv’d upon the Hint here given him. He enters into a

Such was the God, and such the flying Nymph: He urg'd by Hope, and she by Fear. But the Pursuer, wafted by the Wings of Love, gains upon her, and denies her Rest; and now she hears his Steps close behind her; now his Breath fans her parting Hair. The Nymph (her Strength failing) grew pale, and spent with the Labour of so long a Flight, cast a mournful Look upon the Streams of Peneus: "O help me, Father, in this extreme “ Hand the Scepter of Heaven, and temper the awful Thunder. Oh fly “ not,” (for she fled). Already she had pass’d the Pastures of Lerna, and the Lyrcean Plains planted with Trees, when Jupiter covered the Earth for a great Way with thick Darkness, stopt her Flight, and enjoy’d, by Force, the wish’d-for Happiness.

Mean time Juno look’d down from on high upon the Arcadian Fields, and wondering that the floating Clouds should have the Appearance of Night, under a bright Day, was soon sensible that these were not exhal’d from Rivers, or marshy Fens : She therefore looks round every Way for her Husband, as being no Stranger to his Artifices, whom she had so often detected. Finding him not in Heaven, either, says she, I am deceiv’d, or injur’d ; and descending from the Height of Heaven, alighted upon the Earth, and commanded the Clouds to withdraw. Jupiter had foreseen the Descent of his Spouse, and had transform’d the Daughter of Inachus into a lovely Heifer ; who still, under that Shape, retains her former Beauty. Juno, though with Reluctance, praises the Make and Sleekness of the Cow, and, as if ignorant of the Truth, enquires whose she was, whence, and from what Herd. Jupiter, to prevent any more Questions about the Owner, feigns that she was produc’d out of the Earth.

The Daughter of Saturn begs her of him: What could he do? It was cruel to give up his Mistress, and suspicious to refuse her: Shame urges on the one Hand, Love dissuades on the other; but Shame would at last have yielded to Love, had he not fear'd that by denying so slight a Present to the Partner of his Race and Bed, he would encrease her Suspicions, and make her imagine it must be something more than a Cow. The Goddess, possess'd of her Rival, did not however immediately drop all suspicion: She distrusted Jupiter, and was apprehensive of Treachery; till at length she commits her to the Care of Argus the Son of Aristor.

Argus had a Head compass'd with a hundred Eyes, of which two slept in their Turns, the rest watch'd, and kept always on Duty in their Station. In whatever Way he stood, his Looks were directed to Io: Io was before his Eyes, even when he turn'd from her. In the Day Time he suffers her to feed, but when the Sun retir'd under the Earth, he shut her up, and ties a Cord round her Neck, too delicate for such rough Usage. She feeds upon the Leaves of the Strawberry Tree, and bitter Herbs. Instead of a Bed, the unhappy Io sleeps upon the Ground, often too in Places that were not covered with Grass, and drinks of the muddy Rivers. When she wanted to stretch out her suppliant Arms to Argus, she had no Arms to stretch out to Argus, and endeavouring to com-was terrified with the Noise of her own Voice. She came too to the Banks where she was often wont to sport, the Banks of her Father Inachus, where when she discovered her new Horns in the Stream she started, and would have fled from herself. The Naiads know her not, even Inachus himself knows her not. She follows her Father and Sisters, suffers herself to be touch'd, and offers her Neck to their stroaking Hands, as they stood admiring her. Aged Inachus, having pull'd up some Grass, holds it out to her ; she licks his Hands, and gives Kisses to her Father's Palms ; nor does she restrain her Tears, and could she make Words follow, would beg for his Help, and acquaint him with her Name and Misfortunes. Instead of Words, Letters which she printed with her Foot in the Sand, made a mournful Discovery of the unhappy Change.

“ Ah wretched me ! cry'd the disconsolate Father ; and hanging upon the Neck and Horns of the snow-white Cow, again exclaims, wretched

While he thus lamented, starry Argus removes her from him, and carries the Daughter, thus cruelly torn from her Father, into other Pasture. He himself retires to the Top of a Hill at some Distance, whence he might with Ease look round on every Side.

XII. But the Sovereign of Gods can no longer bear the Sufferings which he sees the Grand-Daughter of Phoroneus expos’d. He therefore calls his Son, whom the bright Maia bore to him, and charges him to lead Argus to Death. But small Delay was made in fastening his Wings, taking the soporiferous Rod in his powerful Hand, and the Cap for his Hair. When all was ready the Son of Jove leaps down from his Father's Palace upon the Earth : Here he dismiss'd his Cap and Wings, and only retains the mysterious Rod. With this, as a Shepherd, he drives some She-Goats through the pathless Plains; taken up as he came along, and plays upon a few oaten Straws he had artfully join'd together. Argus, charm'd with the Voice of this new Contrivance, Whosoever thou art, Friend, says he, thou may'st sit down by me upon this Stone ; for neither will you find a Place more fertile in Grass, and there is moreover here a convenient Shade for Shepherds. The God sat down, and in various Discourse prolong'd the flowing Hours ; and by playing on his Pipe of Reeds, endeavours to conquer the watchful Eyes of the Keeper. He on the contrary struggles hard to shake off the soft Fetters of Sleep ; and though Part of his Eyes were lull'd in gentle Slumbers, yet with the other Part he watches : He enquires too how the Pipe was first invented, (for it was then but a late Discovery.)

and by her fellow Nymphs called Syrinx: She had often eluded the swiftly pursuing Satyrs, and all the Train of lustful Deities that inhabit the shady Woods, or fertile Plains. Devoted to the Ortygian Goddess, she rivall'd her in her rural Exercises, and unsullied Virginité. Clad too like Diana, she might have pass'd for the Daughter of Latona, but that she wore a Bow of Corneil Wood, and the Goddess one of Gold: Nay, even thus she deceiv'd. Pan saw her returning from Lyceus, and having his Head adorn'd with a Crown of Pine Leaves, thus address'd her: It remain'd for Mercury to repeat the Words, and how the Nymph, despising his Address, fled through pathless Ways, till she came to the gentle Stream of sandy Ladon; and that here the Current stopping her Flight, she pray'd to the watery Sisters to change her Shape; that Pan imagining he had now caught Syrinx, instead of the Body of the Nymph laid hold on some marshy Reeds. Here while he sigh'd, the Winds moving along the Reeds, made a murmuring Noise like the Voice of one complaining; and that the God, pleas'd with this new Musick and harmonious Din, said: This Manner of Converse between us shall always remain: And that hence some unequal Reeds, join'd together with Wax, still retain the Name of the ungrateful Fair. The Cyllenian God (I say) was about to relate this, when he perceived all the Eyes of Argus sunk in Sleep, and his Eye-lids covered with drowsy Slumbers: Immediately he suppress his Song, and with his Magic Rod, stroaking his languid Eyes, confirms their Rest. Then drawing without Delay his crooked Faulchion, wounds him nodding, just where the Head is join'd to the Neck, and threw him down bloody from the Rock, staining the craggy Steep with his Gore. Argus thou art no more, and the Light taken in by so many Eyes is extinguished; one Night has seiz'd them all. These Saturnia takes, and spreads in the Feathers of her favourite Bird, filling its Tail with starry Gems.

XIV. But burning with Rage, and impatient to revenge the Injury, she presents a dreadful Fury to the Eyes and thoughts of her Grecian Rival, and hides invisible Stings in her Bosom, and drives her an Exile round the World. Nile remain'd the utmost Boundary of her long wandering; where as soon as she arriv'd, she fell with bended Knees upon the bordering Bank; then raising herself up with her Neck aloof, and casting to Heaven those Looks which then she only could, with Sighs and Tears, and mournful Lowings, she seem'd to complain of Jupiter, and beg an End of her Misfortunes. The God, throwing his Arms round the Neck of his Spouse, requested that she would at length end her Punishment. Henceforth, says he, cease your Fears, she shall never more be the Cause of Pain to you ; and calls to the Stygian Waves to hear his Oath. How soon the Goddess was pacified, She recovers her former Looks, and again appears what before she had been : The Hairs begin to fall away, her Horns decrease, and the Orb of her Eye is contracted ; her Mouth becomes less, her Arms and Hands return, and her Hoof vanishing is parted into five nails : Nothing of the Heifer now remains but the Whiteness of her Skin ; and the Nymph, contented with the Service of two Feet, raises herself upon them, yet fears to speak ; and mindful of her former Lowings attempts, with trembling Lips, the long-interrupted Sounds. Now she is worshipped as a Goddess by all the Ægyptian Throng, and serv'd by Priests clad in white Linen.

ing of his Sire the Sun, the Grand-Son of Inachus could not bear, but said, You are silly enough to believe your Mother in every thing, and are swell'd with the Conceit of an imaginary Father. Phaeton blush'd, but Shame suppress'd his Rage ; He went to his Mother Clymene, and told her of the Insults of Epaphus ; “ And Mother, says he, to grieve you the “ more, I, the bold and dauntless Phaeton, was silent at his Reproaches. “ I am asham'd that such Outrages can be offered us, while it is not “ in my Power to contradict them : But if I am really Heaven-begotten, “ give some sure Mark of this my Race divine, and assert me to the “ Skies.” He said ; and throwing his Arms round his Mother's Neck, he conjur'd her by her own and Merops Head, and the Nuptial Torches of his Sisters, that she would give some undoubted Tokens of his true Father. 'Tis hard to say whether Clymene was more mov'd by the Prayers of Phaeton, or Resentment of the Crime charg'd upon her : She stretch'd out both her Arms to Heaven, and fixing her Eyes upon the Sun : “ I swear, says she, by this Beam which darts round its shining “ Rays, which both hears and sees us ; that you are descended of that “ Sun whom you behold ; that Sun who regulates Times and Seasons. “ If I speak falsely, may he ever after deny himself to my Sight, and now, for the last Time, shine upon me with his Rays : Nor will it be “ any great trouble to visit your Father's Dwelling ; the Place where he “ rises

We have seen in the former Book, that Phaeton had been insulted by Epaphus, which occasioned his applying to his Mother Clymene, to know the Certainty of his Birth. After saying every Thing in her Power to convince him, she at last advises him to repair to the Palace of his Father, and have it confirm’d there. This Book begins with a Description of the Palace where Phaeton is supposed to have arrived, Apollo receives him kindly, and owns him for his Son : But he begging for some particular Pledge, by which others also might be induced to believe it ; the God swears by the River Styx, that he will refuse him nothing : upon which he desires to conduct the Chariot of the Sun for a Day. Apollo endeavours in a long Speech to dissuade him from so rash and hazardous a Design ; but finding all his Arguments vain, is at last forced to submit. After giving him all necessary Instructions, the Youth sets out ; but not being able to command the Horses, they forsake the beaten Path, and hurry him away through unknown Tracts.

Upon which Jupiter, to prevent an universal conflagration, hurls his Thunder against Phae-ton, who tumbling headlong from the Chariot,

had graved the Sea circling round the encompass'd Earth ; the Earth itself and the Heaven which hangs over this Orb. The Waves are grac'd by the blue Deities: Triton with his sounding Shell, changeable Proteus, and Ægeon embracing with his Arms the immense Bulk of Whales ; Doris and her Daughters: Part of whom appear swimming in the figured Main, Part, sitting on a Rock, divide their dropping Locks, and some glide through the Waters on Fishes. The Features were not the same in all, nor yet remarkably different ; a Sister Likeness might be observed in every Face. The Earth is covered with Men, Cities, Woods, wild Beasts, Rivers, Nymphs, and all the Train of rural Deities. Over these is plac'd the Image of refulgent Heaven, where are represented the twelve Signs of the Zodiac, six on either Gate.

Whither when the Son of Clymene had arrived by an ascending Path, and entered the Habitation of his suspected Sire, instantly he directed his Steps towards where he saw his Father ; and stood at some Distance, for he was not able to bear a nearer Approach to the Light. Phœbus, array'd in Robes of Purple, was seated on a Throne that sparkled with bright Eme-

NOTES.

9. Proteaque ambiguum.] Proteus a Sea God, celebrated chiefly among the Poets for his Power of assuming what Shape he pleas'd.

10. Ægeonaque.] Ægeon is spoken of by Homer only as a Giant, and made the same with Briareus. But Ovid here follows the Tradition of those who say he was one of the Sea Gods.

11. Doridaque & natas.] Doris was a Sea Nymph, the Daughter of Oceanus and Tetys, and Wife of Nereus.

18. Signaque sex foribus.] The Poet speaks here of the twelve Signs of the Zodiac, six of which were engraven upon the right Gate, and six upon the left.

ralds. On either Hand were the Days, Months, Years, and Ages, and the Hours plac'd at equal Distances: Here stood the Spring crown'd with a Chaplet of Flowers; here the Summer naked, and adorned with Garlands made of the Ears of Corn: Autumn too stood besmear'd with the rich trodden Grapes; and icy Winter, rough with Hhoary air. The Sun from the Middle of his Palace beheld with those Eyes, wherewith he surveys all Things, the young Man surprized, and struck with the unusual Appearance of so many Wonders: "What, says he, is the Cause of your Journey hither? What wants my Son in this Palace? For know, Phaeton, that you are my Son, and worthy to be own'd such by your Father.

"Publick Light of this vast Universe, replies the Youth, Father Phœbus, if you permit me to call you by that Name, and Clymene does not conceal a Crime under a false Pretence, give, Father, some certain Token, by which it may be known that I am your Son, and free my Mind from this cruel uncertainty." He said: When his Father, putting off the Rays that shone all round his Head, commanded him to advance, and embracing him: Yes, says he, you are my Son; you deserve that Name, nor has Clymene deceived you in the Account of your Birth. To remove all further Doubt, make what Request you please, “ my Promise the Lake by which the Gods are wont to swear, that is “ hid even from my piercing Sight.” Scarce had Phœbus’ ended his Speech when he asks his Father’s Chariot, and to command and guide the wing-footed Horses for a Day.

The Sire repented of the Oath he had taken, and shaking thrice his radiant Head: “ Alas, my Son, the Promise I made you is become rash by “ your Request; I wish it were in my Power to recall what I have said: “ I own this is the only Thing I am unwilling to grant. It is still

Here the Father ended his Admonitions : But Phaeton regardless of what he said still holds to his Purpose, and burns with Impatience to mount the Chariot. Wherefore the Father, having delayed as long as he could, brought at length the young Man to the stately Chariot, the Gift of Vulcan. The Axle-tree was of Gold, the Pole also was of Gold, and the Wheels were edged round with a golden Rim. The Range of Spokes was Silver. The Yoke was covered with Rows of Gems and precious Stones, that darted a clear Light by reflecting the Sun. And while magnanimous Phaeton admires all these, and views with Attention the Elegance of the Work, lo, watchful Aurora opens the purple Gates of the East, and her Courts strewed with Roses. The Stars disappear, Lucifer drives them before him in Troops, and moves himself the last from his Station in the Heavens. Soon as the Father saw the Earth and Sky covered with a rosy Blush, and the blunted Horns of the Moon just ready to vanish, he commands the nimble Hours to join the Horses to the Chariot. The swift Goddesses instantly obey, and lead from the high Stalls the glowing Steeds, snorting Fire, and satiated with the Juice of Ambrosia ; then add the sounding Reins. Mean time

120. Ambrosiæ succo saturos.] Ambrosia was, according to the Poets, the Food of the Gods ; in like Manner as Nectar was feign'd to be their Drink, though we find them often con- founded.

129. Nec tibi directos placeat via quinque per arcus.] There is a considerable Obscurity in this Passage, arising from the Manner of Expression. Phœbus is here counselling Phæton what Tract to follow, and tells him that he is to pursue his Way through an oblique Path, and not directly in the Plane of the Equator. This last is what he calls the Via per quinque arcus directos. The five Bows are here no other than the five parallel Circles by which Astronomers distinguish the Heavens. These are the two Polar Circles, the two Tropics, and the Equinoctial. The Equinoctial runs exactly in the Middle between the other Circles : So that Nec tibi directos placeat via quinque per arcus must be here understood to mean, Pursue not your Way directly through that Circle which is Middle-most of the five, but observe the Tract that cuts it obliquely.

132. Junctamque Aquilonibus Arcton.] By Arctos, or the Bear, a Constellation in the Northern Quarter of Heaven, we are to understand the Arctic Pole.

and mounted upon their Wings, out-strip the eastern Wind arising from the same Parts. But the Weight appeared small, and what the Horses of the Sun could scarcely feel, nor was the Chariot pois'd by its wonted Weight. And as hollow Ships, when wanting due Ballast, totter in the Deep, and are tofs'd to and fro, the unstable Sport of Winds and Waves; in like Manner the Chariot, destitute of its usual Weight, is tofs'd on high, and bounding through the Air, is hurried on like one empty; which when the eager Steeds perceived, they rush on, and leave the beaten Tract, nor follow the stated Course in which they ran before. The Youth trembles, nor knows which Way to turn the Reins, or how to pursue his Way; nor, had he known, were the Horses under Command. Then did the cold Triones first feel Apollo's Ray, and strove in vain to dip in the forbidden Sea. Then too the Serpent that borders upon the frozen Pole, before stiff and benumb'd with cold, nor formidable to any, rous'd by the new Flames, began to rage with inward Heat. 'Tis said, moreover, that you, Bootes, fled in a mighty Alarm, though naturally slow, and cumbered with thy Wain. But when the unhappy Phaeton beheld from the Height of Heaven, the Earth spread out far, very far beneath him, he grew pale, and his Knees trembled with sudden Fear, and his Eyes were darkened by the too great Light. And now could he wish that he had never try'd his Father's Steeds. He repents of having known his Race, or that he prevail'd in his Request: and willing now to pass for Merops's Son, he is hurried along like a Ship toss'd by the stormy North Wind, when the despairing Pilot has abandon'd the Helm, and puts all his Confidence in the Gods and Prayer. What could he do? He had already left a long Tract of Heaven behind him. If he looks forward, a still longer Path meets his eyes. He measures both in his Mind; and sometimes casts an Eye upon the forbidden West, sometimes looks back towards the East; and full of Amazement, is uncertain what to resolve upon: for neither does he quit the Reins, nor can he hold them right, nor does he know the Names of the Horses. Now too in his Fright, he sees all Parts of the Heavens fill'd with Objects of Horror, and the monstrous Forms of huge wild Beasts. There is a Place where Scorpio bends his Arms on each Side in two wide Curves, and with his Tail and Limbs inclosing a vast Circuit, stretches himself through the Space of two celestial Signs. Soon as the Youth beheld him sweating Steams of black Poison, and threatening Wounds with his forked Tongue, bereft of his Wits at once he dropp'd the Reins in a cold Fright: Which, when the Horses felt lying loose upon their Manes, they rush out, and finding themselves without without Check or Controul, hurry on through unknown Regions of Air, and regardless of the Way, run wherever their Fury drives, rush against the Stars fix'd in the high Firmament of Heaven, and drag the Chariot through pathless Wilds. Sometimes they mount aloft, again they descend, and precipitating their Course, bring the Chariot still nearer to the Earth.

The Clouds vanish in Smoke, and the Moon wonders to see her Brother's Steeds beneath her own. The Land, in every Place as it rises higher than the rest, is seized by the Flames, and rending, breaks in Chasms, and is drain'd of its Moisture by the scorching Heat. The Grass is burnt up, the Trees are consum'd with their Leaves, and the parch'd Corn furnishes Fewel to the spreading Conflagration. But I complain of trivial Ills. Great Cities with their Walls perish, and the Flames turn whole Nations with their People into Ashes. The Mountains and Forests are set on fire. Athos burns, and Cilician Taurus, and Tmolus, and Oete. Ida too, formerly famous for her Fountains, but now dry in spite of all her Springs; and Helicon, the darling retreat of the Muses, and Hæmus,

And now he cannot longer bear the Showers of Ashes, and the glowing Sparks that break round him, and is on every Side involv'd in thick Clouds of Smoke. the Tagus carries in its Stream, is melted by the Flames. The Swans, which had so often sung on the Banks of the Mæonian Rivers, in vain sought to avoid the Heat in the Middle of Cayster. The frightened Nile fled to the extreme Parts of the Earth, and hid his Head, which yet lies conceal'd: His seven dusty Channels are now changed into seven Vallies, destitute of Water. The same Fate also pursues the Ismarian Rivers, Hebrus with Strymon; and the Western Rivers, the Rhine, the Rhone, the Po, and Tyber, to which the Sovereignty of the Universe had been promised.

The Ground is deep cleft in all Parts, and the Light penetrating through the Chinks into the dire Regions of Tartarus, startles the infernal King and his Spouse. The Ocean contracts, and what lately was Sea, is now a naked Plain of Sand. Nay, 'tis said, that Nereus and Doris, with their whole Train of Daughters, were pursued by the Heat into the deepest Caverns of the Main. Thrice Neptune with a stern Countenance ventured to thrust his Arms out of the Waters, and thrice was unable to sustain the raging Heat of the Air.

At length the bountiful Earth, as she was surrounded by the Sea ; amidst her circling Oceans, which now dried up on all Sides, were retired within the dark Caverns of her hollow Womb ; uplifts her all-bearing Head, and scorched by the sultry Heats, covers her Face with her Hand ; when shaking all Nature with a sudden Trembling, she sunk down a little, and retired below her wonted Seat ; whence with awful Voice she thus broke Silence.

“ If you approve, and I have deserved the Fate that threatens me, why, O why, Sovereign of the Gods, do your Thunders cease ? If I must perish by the Force of Fire, let it be by Fires darted from your right Hand ; nor let me suffer by any other Power than that of Jupiter. Scarce can I open my Mouth to pronounce these Words ; (for her Face was now wrapt in Clouds of Smoke.) Behold my sing'd Hair, my Eyes hid in thick Vapours, and the Heaps of Cinders that fly round my Temples. And is this the Honour and Recompence of my Fertility and Service ; that I am torn up by the crooked Plow-share, and tortur'd with Rakes and Harrows all the Heaven, whence he was wont to spread over the spacious Earth the gathering Clouds ; whence he rolls his Thunder, and darts the brandish'd Lightning. But then neither had he Clouds to spread over the Earth, nor Showers to pour down from the Vault of Heaven. He thunders, and with lifted up Arm hurls against the Charioteer the forked Brand, driving him at once from Life, and his Seat, and extinguishing the Fires by Fires still more cruel. The Horses affrighted start with a sudden Bound, shake the Yoke from off their Necks, and disengage themselves from the broken Harness. Here lie the Reins, there the Axle-tree, torn from the Pole ; on one Side the Spokes of the Wheels dash'd in Pieces, and all around the Fragments of the shatter'd Chariot. But Phaeton, his yellow Hair seiz'd by the Flames, tumbles headlong, and shoots through a long Tract of Air, as when in a serene Sky a Star falls, or seems at least to fall. Him the mighty Po receives, in a Region of the World far distant from his native Home, and with rolling Waves washes his glowing Face.

323. Quem procul à patria--excipit Eridanus.] The Eridanus, otherwise the Po, is a river of Italy, and of Consequence far removed from Ethiopia, the Country of Phaeton.

We have thus gone through the Story of Phaeton, and taken notice of what seem'd most necessary for the understanding of the Poet's Expressions. It is thought by some to represent the Enterprize of a rash head-strong Youth, who hearkened rather to his Ambition and Courage, than the Suggestions of Wisdom and Prudence. But Phaeton is moreover a real Person ; Apollodorus has preserved his Genealogy, and Eusebius, after Africanus, makes Use of it to fix the Epoch of Cecrops. But not to enter too far into this Discussion, we shall be satisfied with observing that he was commonly reputed to be the Son of Phœbus and Clymene. The Fable before us in all Probability relates to some remarkable Conflagration that happened in his Time. Aristotle believed upon the Faith of some ancient Writers, that in the Age of this Prince, Fire fell from Heaven, and destroyed Cities and Kingdoms.

II. The Hesperian Naiads commit his Body, smoaking from the thrice-forked Flame, to a Tomb, and inscribe these Verses upon the Tomb :
“ Here lies Phaeton, who attempted to drive his Father’s Chariot, which, if he could not skilfully guide, he yet miscarried in a great Attempt.”
The mournful Father hid his Countenance, over-spread with dismal Sorrow ; and if we can but credit it, ’tis said, that the space of a whole Day pass’d without any Sun : The Flames serv’d to furnish Light, and thus some Benefit arose from this mighty Disaster. But Clymene, after saying whatever the Grief arising from so cruel a Cause could inspire, mourning and distracted, and tearing her Bosom, ran over the whole World ; and first seeking for the lifeless Limbs of her Son, then his Bones, found at length his Bones upon the Banks of a foreign River. She hangs over the Place, and bathes in Tears the Name graven upon the Marble, and warms it with her naked Breast. The Daughters of the Sun are no less o’erwhelm’d with Grief, and lament in Tears (a fruitless Tribute) the Death of their Brother ; and beating their naked Bosoms, lie round the Sepulchre, and call Night and Day upon Phaeton, who was not now capable to hear their mournful Complaints.

The Moon had four Times join’d her Horns in a full Orb. They, according to custom, (for use had now made it habitual) uttered their Lamen-Lamentations ; when Phaethusa, the eldest of the Sisters, willing to lie down a little upon the Ground, complain'd that her Feet were on a sudden become stiff ; to whom, as the fair Lampetie endeavoured to come, she found herself kept back, and rooted to the Ground. A third, as in Excess of Grief she was going to rend her Hair, tears away Leaves. One grieves that her Legs are held fast by a lumpish root, another that her Arms branch out into long Boughs. And while they stand wondering at so unusual a Prodigy, the Bark closes upon their Groins, and by Degrees encompasses their Bellies, and Breasts, and Shoulders, and Hands : Their Mouths now only remain'd uncovered, calling to their Mother for Aid. What can the Mother do, but run to and fro as Frenzy guides ? and kiss her sprouting Daughters while yet she may. That is not enough, she tries moreover to tear their Bodies from the Trunks where they were inclosed, and strip the tender Leaves from their Fingers : But thence Drops of Blood flow as from a Wound. Forbear, cries she who feels the Smart, forbear, mistaken Parent ? you tear a Daughter's Body in every Tree : And now farewell. Here the Bark closing upon their Faces, suppress'd their farther Words.

III. Hence Tears flow, which distilling in Drops of Amber from the new-form'd Boughs, harden in the Sun, and receiv'd below by the limpid Stream, are thence sent to shine in the Dress of the Latian Dames.

IV. Cycnus, the Son of Sthenelus, was present at this amazing Prodigy, who, though nearly ally'd to you, Phaeton, on the Mother's Side, was yet nearer in Affection. He leaving his Kingdom, (for he reign'd over the People, and mighty Cities, of the Ligurians) fill'd with his Complaints the verdant Banks of the Po, and the Woods now increas'd by the Sisters; when he perceives his Voice to lessen and become shrill; white Feathers conceal his Hair: A long Neck is stretched out from his Breast; and a skinny Film ties together his red Toes. His Sides are covered with Wings, and his Mouth shoots out into a blunted Beak. Cycnus becomes a new Bird; nor trusts the Heavens and Jupiter, as mindful of the Fires by him unjustly darted at his Friend. He frequents the Pools and spreading Lakes; and hating Fire, delights in Rivers, as opposite to the Flames.

V. Mean time the Father of Phaeton, disfigur'd, and destitute of his wonted Comeliness, as when his Orb is hid by an Eclipse, hates the Light, himself, and the Day, and gives up his Mind to Grievs, and joins Resentment to his Grievs, and denies his Service to the World. "My Lot, next surveys the Earth, and the Works of Men. But above the rest his own Arcadia engaged his Care. He restores her Fountains, and Rivers not yet daring to glide. He cloaths the Earth with Grass, and the Trees with Leaves, and commands the desolate Forests to recover their former Verdure. While he thus often walks to and fro, he chanc'd to fix his Eyes upon an Arcadian Virgin, and the Fires receiv'd within his Bones gather'd fresh Strength. Her Employment was not to draw and soften the Wood, or vary her divided Tresses; but her Gown was fastened with a Clasp, and a white Fillet binds her unadorned Hair. Now she bears in her Hand a slender Spear, now is arm'd with a light Bow. She was a Companion of Phœbe; nor did any Nymph frequent Mænalus, dearer to the Goddess than she. But Favour lasts not long. The Sun had now pass'd his middle Space in the high Heavens, when, urg'd by the Heat, she entered a shady Grove, which no Art or Age had form'd: Here she put her Quiver from off her Shoulder, and unbrac'd her yielding Bow, and laying herself down upon the Ground that was cover'd with Grass, gently repos'd her Neck upon the painted Quiver. Jupiter when he saw her thus fatigu'd, and without a Keeper, Sure, says he, my Wife will never know of this stolen Embrace; or if by Chance she should come to know of it, is her Rage so terrible to make me forego a Bliss like this. Straight he assumes the Shape and Habit of Diana. "Fair Nymph, said he, who make

"one of my Train, over what Mountains have you pursued the Chace?" The Virgin starting from the Turf, "Hail, Goddess, in my Opinion greater than Jove, were Jove himself present to hear." He smiles, and hears, and is pleas'd with being preferr'd before himself. He then embraces her, and with an Eagerness not to be expected in a Virgin. As she was about to tell him in what Wood she had been hunting, he stopp'd her by his Caresses, and discover'd himself to her by his Crime. She on the other Hand, as much as a Woman could, (O Daughter of Saturn, would you had seen her, sure you would have been more gentle!) she, I say, strove with all her Might; but what Maid or Mortal can contend with Jove. The God, exulting in his Success, returns to Heaven. She detests the Grove and Wood that were Witnesses of her Crime, and retreating from them with Precipitation, almost forgot her Quiver, Arrows, and Bow which she had hung upon one of the Trees.

proud of the Slaughter she had made of wild Beasts, and how soon she espies the Nymph, calls her to her: She at first drew back, trembling, lest Jove might be also disguis'd in her. But when she saw her surrounded with her Nymphs, she knew there could be no Deceit, and immediately join'd them. Alas! how hard is it not to betray Guilt by our Looks. She scarce lifted her Eyes from the Ground, nor walk'd as usual close by the Side of the Goddess, nor appear'd the foremost of the Train; but she was silent, and by her Blushes gave plain Signs of her injur'd Honour; insomuch, that Diana (had she been ought but a Virgin) might by a thousand Tokens have discover'd the Crime. Her Nymphs, 'tis said, suspected it. The Moon had now nine Times renew'd her Orb, when the hunting Goddess, faint by her Brother's Beams, entered a cool Grove, whence a gentle Stream flow'd in soft Murmurs, along a smooth Bed of shining Gravel. The Goddess after praising the Place, touch'd the Surface of the Waters with her Foot; pleas'd with them also, here, says she, no Spies are near, let us strip, and bathe ourselves in the crystal Stream: Callisto blush'd, all the Nymphs, pleas'd with the Motion, undress, she only forms Delays. Her Fellows press round her, and obliging her reluctant to comply, discover her Crime with her naked Body. Confounded, and endeavouring to conceal with her Hands her pregnant Womb; "Be gone, cries the Goddess with Indignation, nor dare to pollute the sacred Stream." And immediately banished her from her Train.

The Spouse of the great Thunderer had perceived this some time before, but deferr'd the Punishment her Vengeance prompted her to take, till a fit Opportunity offered ; but now there is no farther reason for Delay ; for young Arcas (a fresh Ground of Resentment to Juno) was born to her Husband of Callisto. The Goddess regarding the Child with a stern Look, cried ; " It is enough, base Adulterers ; this one Thing only was wanting, that a fruitful Womb might proclaim the Injury you had done me, and the Baseness of my Husband : But you shall not escape my Vengeance ; I will destroy that Beauty which rendered you so lovely in the Eyes of Jove." She said, and seizing her by the Hair, dragg'd her to the Ground. The suppliant Nymph stretch'd out her imploring Hands. Her arms began to grow rough with black shaggy Hairs ; her Hands are bent, and shoot into pointed Claws, and serve her instead of Feet ; her Mouth, formerly admir'd by Jupiter, becomes now deform'd by a wide Opening ; and lest Prayers or Intreaties might reach the Ear of Jove, she was depriv'd of Speech. A surly threatening Voice, savage and full of Terror, issues from her hoarse Throat. But though thus changed into a Bear, she still retain'd her former Understanding, and expressing her Sorrows by unceasing Groans, rais'd her new unwieldy Paws to Heaven, and though she could not call Jove ungrateful, she thought him so. Ah, how often, not daring to remain by herself in the solitary Woods, did she approach towards her Palace, and haunt the Fields and Meadows once her own. How often was she driven over the craggy Steeps by the cry of her Dogs, and though herself a Huntress, frightened by the Pursuit of the Hunters. Oft forgetting what she was, she hid herself upon seeing her fellow Brutes; and trembled at the shaggy Bears though she too now was one; nor dreaded less the Sight of the rugged Wolves, although her Father was of the Number.

VII. Mean time Arcas, who had now compleated his fifteenth Year, being a Stranger to the Fate of his Mother; while he is intent upon the Chace, while he chuses apt Forests, and incloses the Erymanthian Woods with his plaited Nets, chanced to rouse his Mother, who stopp'd upon seeing Arcas, and look'd at him like one who knew him. He drew back, nor knowing what it meant, was frighted to observe her Eyes immoveably fix'd upon him, and as he perceived her about to approach, was going to pierce her Breast with his wounding Spear. The Almighty forbid it, and carrying off both them, and the Wickedness intended, snatch'd them in Whirlwinds through the Air, and plac'd them in Heaven, where they form two neighbouring Constellations. Juno swell'd with Rage, when she saw her Rival shine among the Stars; she descends to the Sea to hoary Tethys, and aged Ocean, both greatly re-

The Sea Deities consented ; the Daughter of Saturn cuts the liquid Air in her elegant Chariot drawn by painted Peacocks : Peacocks lately painted upon the Killing of Argos, when at the same Time the Raven, formerly white as Snow, was for its Babbling chang’d into a black feathered Bird : For once the Raven was silver’d o’er with snowy Plumes, white as the fair and spotless Dove, nor yielded to the sacred Bird whose watchful Voice guarded the Capitol, or soft Swan that delights in Rivers. His Tongue occasioned the Disgrace, his prattling Tongue, I say, was the Cause that his Colour, formerly the purest white, is now directly contrary to white.

IX. There was not in all Thessaly a more beautiful Nymph than Coronis of Larissa : The Delphic God lov’d her, while she yet continued chaste, or while he thought her so. Pinions, to learn from him the Secret of his Journey ; and having heard all, you are the bearer, says he, of an unwelcome Message ; despise not the Presages of my Tongue.

Consider what I was, and what now I am ; examine into my Story, and you will find that my Honesty was my Ruin. For upon a certain Time Pallas had shut up Erichthonius, sprung from the Earth without a Mother, in a Basket of woven Aëtæan Twigs, and committed him to the Care of three Virgins, the Daughters of two-shaped Cecrops ; but without letting them know what the Chest contain'd ; nay, and expressly commanded them not to look into her Secrets. I stood on a thick Elm, hid among the Leaves, to observe how they behaved. Two, Pandrosus and Herse, guard their Trust without Fraud : The other, Aglauros, reproached her Sisters with Cowardice ; she unties the Knots with her Hand ; within they behold a Child, and a Dragon laid along by him. I acquaint the Goddess with what had been done ; but instead of a Recompence I was banish'd her Protection, and saw the Bird of Night preferr'd to her Favour. My Punishment ought to warn Birds not to tempt Dangers by an indiscreet Tongue. But perhaps you'll think that she never of herself desir'd my Service, and that I importun'd her to the Choice. Ask of Pallas herself, though angry, yet her Anger will not prompt her to deny me Justice here.

For Coroneus, a Prince famous in Phocis, (I speak of Things well known) begot me; I was a Virgin of Royal Birth, and courted (despise me not) by rich Wooers. My Beauty was the Cause of all my Misfortunes; for as I was walking in my usual Manner with slow steps along the Shore, and lightly treading upon the Top of the Sand, Neptune saw and fell in Love with me. And as he found that he only lost Time in soliciting me by fine speeches, he resolves upon Violence, and accordingly pursues me: I fly, and leaving the firm Shore, vainly fatigue myself among the sinking Sand. I call'd upon Gods and Men to assist me; but my feeble Voice reach'd no mortal Ear. Happily a Virgin Goddess was mov'd by a Virgin's Prayers, and came to assist me: For as I stretch'd out my Arms to Heaven, my Arms began to grow black with light Feathers. I strove to throw back my Garments from off my Shoulders, but they were now chang'd to Feathers, and had taken deep root in my Skin. I try'd to beat my naked Breast with my Hands, but had now neither Hands nor naked Breast. I run, nor were my Feet, as before, retain'd by the Sand. I was lifted up from the Ground, and still rising on my Wings into the Air, became the faultless Companion of Minerva. But what does this avail me, if Nyctimene, changed into an Owl for her horrid Crime, has succeeded to my Honour.

X. Can a Story so well known over all Lesbos, have fail'd to reach your Ears; that Nyctimene defil'd her Father's Bed? She is a Bird indeed, but conscious of her Crime, shuns the Light, and conceals her Shame in Darknes, and is driven from the Air by all the other Birds.

While thus the Daw is repeating her Tale, the Raven offended, replies, May these boading Presages light upon yourself; I despise the vain Omen, nor does he drop his intended Journey, but acquaints his Master that he saw Coronis in the Arms of a Thessalian Youth. The God upon hearing his Mistress's Crime, drops the Laurel Crown. At once his Colour, Harp, and gentle Looks forsake him. Inflam'd with Rage, he takes his wonted Arms, and bending his Bow from its Extremities, transfix'd with an unerring Shaft that Breast which had been so often join'd to his own. The wounded Nymph gave a deep Groan, and drawing the Arrow from the Wound, her hands are stain'd with Streams of purple Gore; expiring, she said, Ah, cruel God, I have justly deserved Punishment, but should first have brought my Child into the World; now two are destroy'd in one. Thus far she spoke, and, faint with Loss of Blood, expir'd. A mortal Coldness spread itself over her lifeless Body.

The Lover alas, too late repents of his cruel Revenge. He hates himself, that he had listened to the Raven, and given way to the Violence of his

He hates the Bow, and the Hand which had touch'd the String, and with his Hand the rash Arrows that had inflicted the Wound ; and cherishes her as she lay upon the Ground, endeavouring by late Applications to revoke her severe Doom, and tries in vain the whole Compass of his Art. But when he found all his Endeavours without Success, saw the Pile made ready, and her Body going to be consumed by the funeral Fires, he then fetched Groans from the Bottom of his Soul ; (for it is not allowed to the Gods to shed Tears.) Just as when an Ax poised from the right Ear of a Butcher, dashes to pieces with a clear Stroke the hollow Temples of a sucking Calf, in Sight of its complaining Dam. He then poured upon her Breast the ungrateful Perfumes, embrac'd her Corpse, and solemnized the funeral Rites hastened by his unjust Anger. Phœbus did not suffer his Offspring to mix with the same Ashes, but delivered his Son at once from the Flames and his Mother's Womb, and carried him into the Cave of double-form'd Chiron. The Raven, who expected a Reward for his faithful Discovery, was forbid any more to associate with white Birds.

XI. Mean time the Centaur rejoiced in his Pupil of celestial Race, and was proud of the Honour joined to his Trouble. His Daughter too, with yellow Hair falling loose upon her Shoulders, came to see the Child. The Nymph Chariclo, who bore her to the Centaur upon the Banks of a rapid River, had named her Ocyrrhoe : She, not contented with her Father's Arts alone, sung the Secrets of the Fates. Once, as her Mind was fill'd with the prophetic Transport, and she felt the God kindled in her Breast, surveying the Infant she cried ; " Grow, Child, the sovereign Restorer of Health to the whole World. To thee shall mortal Bodies often owe their continuance in Being ; nay, your Skill shall reach to the recalling of Souls from the Empire of the Dead. But when, by once daring to give Proof of this thy Power, you have rais'd the Jealousy of the Gods, disabled by your Grandfire's Bolts, you shall no more confer this mighty Benefit ; but from a God be changed into a lifeless Carcass, and again resuming the Figure of a God, shall twice renew your Destiny. Not to trouble the Reader with the Moral Lessons which Mythologists draw from them, I shall content myself with observing, 1st. That often a bare Resemblance of Names has given Rise to these fabulous Metamorphoses. 2dly, That the Adventures which happened in the Courts of Princes were often the Subject of poetical Songs, where the marvellous was not spar'd. On these Principles it may be conjectured, that the two Fables under Consideration, include the History of two Persons entirely unknown, but which however probably refers to the Times of the Daughters of Cecrops, with whom it seems to have some Connection. 638. Ocyroen.] Ocyrrhoe was the Daughter of Chiron, and the Nymph Chariclo.

Her Fingers grow together, and a smooth Hoof of one continued piece of Horn binds together her five Nails. Her Face and Neck are lengthened, her Train becomes a Tail, and the Hairs, that lay scattered upon her Neck, pass into a right-Side Mane. Her Voice and Shape at once are finish'd, and the new Form gave her also a new Name.

XII. The Philyreian Hero wept ; and in vain implor'd thy Aid, O Apollo : For neither was it in your Power to reverse the Decrees of Almighty Jove, nor had this been permitted, wast thou present. Thou wast then in Elis, and the Messenian Fields. This was the Time when you was covered with a Shepherd's Cloak, and wore a Club of Oak in your right Hand, and in your left a Pipe of seven unequal Reeds. And while Love is all your Care, while you attend only to the Musick of your Flute, some Cows are said to have stray'd unobserved into the Plains of Pylos. The Son of Maia perceived them, and driving them away, artfully concealed them in the Woods. This Theft had been taken notice of by no-body but an old man well known in that Country, whom all the Neighbourhood called Battus. He kept the Forests and flourishing Pastures, with some Sets of fine Mares, belonging to one Neleus, a rich Pilian Lord. Him the God fear'd, and taking him aside, with a mild Air, says; "Whoever thou art, Stranger, if any should by Chance inquire after these Herds, deny that you have seen them; and that your Discretion mayn't go without a Recompence, take for a Reward this beautiful Heifer; and gave him one:" The Stranger, as he received it, made this Reply; "Go secure, that stone shall sooner speak of your Theft," and withal pointed to a Stone. The Son of Jupiter feigns to withdraw himself, but straight return'd; and changing both his Shape and Voice; "Shepherd, said he, if you saw any Cows, pass along this Way, help me to discover them, nor screen the Theft in Silence; your Reward shall be a Heifer with her Bullock." The old Man when he found the Reward doubled; you will find them, says he, under these Mountains; and indeed they were under the Mountains. The Grandson of Atlas smil'd; And dost thou then, perfidious, betray me to myself? Dost thou, I say, betray me to myself? This said, he turn'd his perjur'd Breast into a hard Stone, which is now call'd the Touch-stone, and imprints his Infamy upon the undeserving stone.

XIII. Hence the Wand-bearing God wafts himself upon equal Wings, and as he flew look'd down upon the Plains of Munychia, and the Land grateful to Minerva, and the thick-planted Groves of Lyceus. By chance on that Day the Athenian Virgins, according to Custom, were carrying upon their Heads, to the joyful Citadel of Pallas, mystic Presents to the Goddeß, in Baskets crown'd with Flowers. The winged God observes them as they are returning from the Temple, nor shapes his Flight directly forward, but wheels round and round in the same Circle. As the swift Kite, who smells at Distance the slaughter'd Victim; while yet she fears, and sees the Priests stand thick around, wings her Flight in winding Circles, and greedily hovers about her Prey, not daring to go far away. So the active Cyllenean God bends his Course over the Actæan Towers, and with wheeling Flight circles round the same Air. As much as Lucifer exceeds in Brightness the other Stars; and as much as the golden Moon shines brighter than Lucifer, so much did Herse surpass all the other Virgins, and was an Ornament to the Solemnity and all the Virgin Train. The son of Jupiter was astonished at her Beauty, and hovering in the Air, he burns, no otherwise than when a Balearick Sling throws out a Lead through the Clouds, the Fires which it had not in the Beginning. He changes his Course, and leaving Heaven, makes towards Athens; nor does he disguise his Appearance, so great Confidence he had in his Beauty, which though every way compleat, he yet strives to better by Art. He smooths his Hair, and adjusts his Mantle, that it might hang aptly, and set to shew the golden Fringe that run along its Edge; and carrying with an air in his right Hand the Staff that procures and drives away Sleep, advances with the waving Pinions ty'd to his Feet. In the more retir'd Part of the Palace were three contiguous Rooms, adorn'd with Ivory and Tortoise-shell: Pandrosos possess'd the right, Aglauros the left, and Herse grac'd the middlemost. Aglauros first descry'd the Approach of Mercury, and ventur'd to ask the Name of the God, and the Cause of his Coming. To whom the Grandson of Atlas and Pleione thus reply'd: "I am he Gold as the Reward of her Service, and in the mean time obliges him to leave the Palace. The warlike Goddess turns upon her the Orbs of her stern Eyes, and express'd her inward Rage in such big-swoln Sighs, as at once heav'd her Breast, and the Ægis wherewith it was covered. And now remembering also, how with impious Hand she had laid open her Secrets, when contrary to express Injunctions she saw the Son of Vulcan, born without a Mother ; reflecting moreover, that by this Means she would gain the Favour of Mercury and of her Sister, and be enriched with the Gold which her Avarice had prompted her to demand ; the Goddess therefore repairs immediately to the dark Retreat of Envy, hideous with black Gore. Her House lies hid in the deep Recesses of a Cave, where no Ray of Light, nor Gale of wholesome Wind, can enter ; dismal and full of listless Cold, ever without Fire, ever buried in Darkness. Here, when the Goddess dreadful in War had arrived, she stood before the Cave, (nor was it lawful for a Goddess to enter these Abodes) and raises the Point of her Spear against the Gates : The Doors fly open. Envy appeared within, devouring the Flesh of Vipers, the Nourishment of her Vices. Minerva, when she saw her, turn'd away her Eyes ; but she, the Fiend, rises heavily from the Ground, and leaves the mangled bodies of the half-devoured Serpents, stalking forward with a sullen Pace.

When she saw the Goddess of surpassing Beauty, and clad in bright Armour, she fetched a deep Groan, nor could restrain the Sighs at an Appearance so serene. Paleness sits upon her Countenance, her Body is wasted to a Skeleton, her Eyes are turn'd awry in distorted Glances, her Teeth are black with Rust; her Breast o'erflows with Gall, and Poison hangs upon her Tongue. Smiles are ever banished from her, unless when caused by the Miseries of others; nor, prey'd upon by watchful Cares, does she taste the calm Delights of Sleep. She beholds with Regret the Successes of Men, and pines away at the Sight; she torments, and is tormented, and bears her Punishment in her own Breast. The Goddess, though she extremely abhorr'd her Sight, yet briefly address'd her in these Words: Taint with your Poison one of the Daughters of Cecrops; for so it is needful; Aglauros is she. She said no more, but flew off to Heaven, pushing her Spear against the Ground. She regarding the Goddess as she fled with an oblique Eye, uttered a few Murmurs, and grieved at the Success of Minerva; then takes her Staff wreathed round with Thorns, and veil'd in black Clouds, blasts the flourishing Fields o'er which she directs her baneful Course, burns up the Grass, defaces the fairest Flowers, and with her poisonous Breath pollutes Men, Cities, and Houses. At length she descries the Citadel of Athens, flourishing in Wits, Wealth, and joyful joyful Peace; and scarce restrain'd the Tears, because she saw nothing that deserved a Tear. But now she enters the Apartment of the Daughter of Cecrops, to execute the Commands of the Goddess, and stroaks her Breast with a canker'd Hand, and conveys into her Heart the jagged Thorns. She then inspires the subtle Venom, and spreads the Poison through her Bones, and lodges it in her Bowels. And that these Causes of Mischief might not wander through too wide a Space; she places her Sister before her Eyes, and the fortunate Marriage she had in view; the God too in a most amiable Light; and magnifies every Thing to her Fancy. Aglauros, full of these Thoughts, pines away in secret Anguish, and groans, anxious by Night and by Day, and dissolves by slow Degrees, as Ice feebly smitten by a distant Sun. She burns at the good Fortune of her happy Sister, just as when Thorny Weeds set on Fire emit no Flames, but gradually waste away in Smoke. Often she wish'd for Death, rather than be a Witness of the happy Marriage; often resolved to represent all as a Crime to her rigid Father. At length she seated herself upon the Threshold, to deny the God Admittance when he came. Mercury endeavour'd to soften her by Caresses, Prayers, and soothing Speeches, but in vain. Cease, replied she, for I am determined not to stir hence till you are re-

She strove to rise, but the Parts which we bend in sitting were become immoveable by their unwieldy Weight; still she attempts to raise herself upright, but the Joints of her Knees are stiff, a Coldness runs through her Nails, and her Veins destitute of Blood look pale. And as an incurable Cancer commonly spreads wide, and adds the sound Parts to the tainted; so a deadly Cold by Degrees creeps along her Breast, stops up Respiration, and all the Passages of Life. She never attempted to speak, nor, had she attempted it, was there any Conveyance for her Voice. Her Neck was now turn'd to Stone, her Face become hard, and there she sat a bloodless Statue. Nor did the Figure retain ought of Whiteness; for the Envy, that had tainted her Mind, appeared also in the newly-form'd Statue.

in his Forehead; his Eyes have nothing in them formidable, but every Look expresses Peace. The Daughter of Agenor admires his Beauty, and wonders that he threatens no Battles. At first she is afraid to touch him, though so gentle; but soon adventures nearer, and holds out the Flowers to his white Mouth. The Lover rejoices, and till he can enjoy the hop'd for Pleasure, kisses her Hands; scarce, ah scarce does he defer the rest. And now he exults and wantons in the green Meadows; now rolls his white Body on the yellow Sand: and observing that her Fears were gone, sometimes offers his Breast to be stroak'd by her Virgin Hand, sometimes stoops his Horns to be dress'd in flow'ry Wreaths. And now the Royal Maid, not knowing whom she press'd, boldly ventures upon his Back. The God by gentle Steps advances from the Land and dry Meadows towards the Sea; and first with deceitful Steps dips his Hoofs in the Waves. Thence stealing further, suddenly plunges in, and carries his Prize thro' the Middle of the Sea. The frighted Nymph looks back to the Shore she had left behind. With her right Hand she grasps his Horn, the other is plac'd upon his Back. Her ruffling Garments, swell'd by the Wind, hover in a Train behind her.

AND now the God, having put off the Image of the fallacious Bull, discovered himself, and had reach'd the Dictæan Shore ; when the Father of Europa, ignorant of her Fate, commands Cadmus to go in quest of his ravish'd Daughter, and threatens perpetual Exile as the Punishment of not finding her ; thus pious and unnatural in the same Action. The Son of Agenor having in vain wandered the World around, (for who can pretend to discover the stolen Delights of Jove ?) avoids, by a voluntary Banishment, his Country and the Resentment of his Father, and in suppliant Manner consults the Oracle of Apollo, to know what Land was allotted him to dwell in. N O T E S.

1. Jamque Deus, &c.] Europa being carried off by Jupiter in the Manner related in the preceding Book, Agenor her Father sent his Sons in quest of her, with strict Charge not to return till they had found her. Cilix, after long wandering, settled at last in Cilicia, to which he gave his Name. Cadmus too, finding his Enquiry vain, and abandoning all Thought of returning to his native Country, consults the Oracle of Apollo, where he should settle ; he receiv'd for Answer, that he should build a City where he observed a Cow with such and such Marks to stop, and that he should name the Country Bœotia. Finding Things succeed according to the Advice of the Oracle, and resolving to return Thanks to the Gods by a solemn Sacrifice, he sends his Companions to a Fountain, that had been consecrated to Mars, to draw some Water for Libations : There they are devour'd by the Dragon that guarded the Fountain. Wondering at their long Stay, he goes himself ; and seeing the Havock made by the Serpent, encounters and kills him. Afterwards, by the Advice of Minnerva, he sows the Teeth of the Dragon, whence spring Troops of armed Men, who falling into fight with one another, five only are left alive, who assist in the building of Thebes.

The more common Explication of this Fable is, that the Dragon was a King of the Country, nam'd Draco, the Son of Mars, and that the mysterious Teeth were his Subjects, who rallied after his Defeat.

the Weight of the crooked Plough : Follow her Steps, and in whatever Pastures she first lays her down, there build your Walls, and call it the Bœotian City.

Scarce had Cadmus well got down from the Castalian Cave, when he sees a Heifer without a Guide, walking a slow Pace, and bearing upon her Neck no Mark of Servitude. He follows, and pursuing her Tract with gentle Steps, adores in Silence the God whom he regarded as his Conductor in the Way. And now he had pass'd the Waters of Cephissus, and travers'd the Fields of Panope, when the Cow stood still, and raising to Heaven her Front, graceful with high Horns, fill'd the Air with Lowings, and looking back upon her Companions that follow'd behind, couch'd down, and repos'd her side upon the tender Grass. Cadmus returns Thanks, and imprints Kisses upon the strange Earth, and salutes the unknown Mountains and Fields. He then prepar'd to offer Sacrifice to Jupiter, and commands his Servants to bring some Water for Libations from the running Springs. Hard by there stood an ancient Grove, as yet not profan'd by the Ax, in the middle of which was a Cave, over-run with Brambles and bushy Sprigs, forming a low Arch by the Shelvings of the Rocks, and abounding with Plenty of Water.

Hid in this Den was a Dragon sacred to Mars, adorn'd with Crests and Scales of Gold : His Eyes glare with Fire, all his Veins are turgid with Poison, three Tongues are brandished from his Mouth, and his Teeth stand dreadful in a triple row. When the Men of Tyre with ill-fated Steps had reach'd the dismal Grove, and the Urn let down for Water rebounded from Side to Side, the Serpent rous'd, thrusts his Head out of the deep Cave, and fills the Air with dreadful Hissings. The Urns drop from their Hands, the Blood forsakes their Veins, and a sudden Horror seiz'd their astonish'd Limbs. He wreaths his scaly Orbs in rolling Plaits, and by an immense Leap is bent into a mighty Fold, and uprearing more than half his Body into the Air, overlooks all the Grove, in Bulk enormous as the celestial Dragon that separates the two Bears. In a Moment he seizes the Phœnicians, (whether they were preparing with Arms to defend themselves, or hop'd to escape by Flight, or that Fear depriv'd them of both these Resources) some are crush'd between his Jaws, others entangled in his winding Folds, and in fine the rest perish by the poisonous Blasts of his pestilential Breath. And now the Sun at his highest had shortened every Shade, when the Sun of Agenor, wondering what detain'd his Companions, goes in search of them. His Garment was a Skin torn from a Lion, his Weapon a Dart, and a Lance pointed with shining Steel, and an undaunted Soul, the best of Weapons. Soon as he entered the Grove, and saw the lifeless Bodies, and the victorious Enemy of hideous Size stretched upon them, licking with bloody Tongue the baneful Wounds: Faithful Companions, cries he, I will either avenge your Death, or share in your Fate. He said, and seizing in his right Hand a Millstone, sent the pondrous Mass with an impetuous Throw: High Walls and lofty Towers would have yielded to the Shock, yet the Serpent remain'd unhurt, and fenced with his scaly Coat of Mail, and the native Hardness of his Skin, repell'd the mighty Stroke with his plaited Scales. But the same cruell'd Armour did not avail against his Lance, which, deep-rooted in the middle Joint of his yielding Spine, pierc'd with its pointed Head into its utmost Bowels: He, fierce with Pain, writhes his Head backwards, and as he sees the Wound, bites with rage the wedged Spear; and after he had work'd it on every Side with all his Might, scarce wrench'd it from his Back; yet the point stuck fast in his Spine. But now this fresh Pain having increas'd his wonted Rage, his Throat swells with turgid Veins, a white foam issues from his baneful Mouth, the Earth resounds with his moving Scales, and the poisonous Stream that issues from his infernal Mouth infects the tainted Air. Now he is enroll'd in Spires that rise in a Maze of vast Rings; sometimes he unfolds himself straight rose in Bristles. When lo Pallas, the Guardian of the Hero, swift gliding through the Air, stood before him, and bids him scatter the Dragon's Teeth under the furrow'd Earth, assuring him they were the Seeds of a future People. The Chief obeys, and as he opened a Trench with the running Plough, scatters according to Command the Teeth, whence was to spring a new Race of Men. Some Time after, (who almost can believe it?) the Clods began to move, and first the Points of Spears rise from the Furrows in Rows; then Helmets nodding with painted Crests, soon Shoulders, and Breasts, and Arms loaded with Spears start up, and a Crop of Men armed with Shields grows from the Earth. Thus, when the Curtains are drawn up in the joyful Theatres, Figures are wont to rise; first their Countenances appear, and by Degrees the rest, till drawn up by an even Tenor, they strike the Eyes in full Proportion, and set their Feet upon the extreme Parts of the Stage. Cadmus, terrified at the Sight of this new Enemy, was preparing to take Arms; when one of the People, whom the Earth had produc'd, cries out: Forbear, nor blindly engage in

III. Aulæa.] The Curtain that conceal'd the Theatre from the Spectators, till the Actors appeared: To understand perfectly the Expression in the Original, tolluntur aulæa, it will be necessary to remark, that the Method followed on the Roman Stage was the very Reverse of that in use with us; for instead of drawing up the Curtain to discover the Stage and Actors, according to the present Practice, the Romans let it fall down upon the Theatre; and when the Play was over, or between the Acts, they drew it up, whereas we let it fall. The first they call'd premiæ aulæa, the other tollere aulæa. In drawing up the Curtain therefore, upon the Roman Stage it was gradually display'd and unfolded, until the several Figures that were painted upon it appeared distinct and in full Proportion.

He too who slew him did not long survive, and breathes out the Air which he had so lately receiv'd. The dire Example runs through the whole Crowd, and these sudden-born Brothers fall in Fight with one another by mutual Wounds. And now the Youth, fated to enjoy but a short Term of Life, beat with throbbing Breasts their bloody Mother ; five only remain'd, of whom was Echion, He, admonished by Pallas, threw his Arms upon the Ground, and both ask'd and gave the Promise of a brotherly Peace. The Sidonian Stranger had these for his Associates in the Work, when he laid the Foundations of the City ; commanded by the Oracle of Apollo.

131. Jam stabant Thebæ.] Diana fatigu'd with Hunting had retir'd to the Valley of Gargaphie, to bathe there in a Fountain. Actæon, the Son of Aristæus and Autonoe, having put off the Exercise of Hunting till next Day, because of the Heat, as he was wandering in the Woods with uncertain Steps, chanced to come into the same Place, where he saw Diana, and her whole Chorus of Nymphs, naked. The Goddess, full of Confusion at this Accident, and resolving that he should never be able to divulge or boast of it, chang'd him into a stag : His Dogs soon after espying him, pursue him as their proper Prey, and tear him to Pieces. The Family of Cadmus, after settling in Greece, prov'd extremely unhappy ; and as in writing the History of those more early Heroes, it was common to mix with it that of the Gods, it was pretended that Juno, jealous of Europa, had extended her Vengeance to her Brother Cadmus and all his Race. Ovid furnishes us with several Examples of this Vengeance ; the first is the Story of Actæon : he was the Grandson of Cadmus by his Daughter Autonoe, and that famous Aristæus, who, for having taught Men the Culture of Olives, and other useful Arts, merited to be rank'd with the Gods. As to the Foundation of this Story, some pretend that Actæon was really devoured by his Dogs, which were become ravenous ; others, that having ruined himself by the Expence he was at in keeping Dogs, it was given out that he was devoured by them.

But we find the last Day of Life is to be waited for by Man, and that no one ought to be call'd happy before his Death and Funeral, the last Scene of Mortality. In this Train of Prosperity, Cadmus, the first Cause of Grief was your Grandson, and Horns not his own, branching from his Forehead, and you Dogs, glutted with your Master's Blood. And yet if you consider well, you will find in him only a Crime of Fortune, no real Fault: for how can Ignorance be deem'd a Crime? There was a Mountain stain'd with the Blood of many wild Beasts; and now the Sun had shorten'd the Mid-day Shades, and was equally distant from both Extremities of Heaven, when the Hyanthian Youth thus with mild Accent address'd the Companions of his Sports, as they were ranging the pathless Haunts of the wild Beasts: "Our Nets, Companions, and Spears are " wet with the Slaughter of wild Beasts; and the Day hath yielded us

But falling afterwards into the Hands of Cyrus, and being condemned to be burnt alive, he recollected this memorable Saying of the wise Man, and by that Means saved his Life, as the Story is related at large by Herodotus.

While the Titanian Goddess here bathes in the wonted Stream, lo the Grandson of Cadmus, who had deferr'd the finishing of his Sport till next Day, wandering with uncertain Steps through the unknown Grove, came into this retired Grotto; so his Fate directed him. How soon he entered the Cave whence the Springs distill'd on every Side, the Nymphs as they were naked, upon seeing a Man, smote their Breasts, and filled all the Grove with sudden Shriekings; and pressing round Diana, covered her with their Bodies; but the Goddess, considerably taller than they, surpasses them all by the Head. The Colour that is wont to be observed in Clouds, when struck by the Rays of the opposite Sun, or that of purple Aurora, appear'd in the Countenance of Diana, seen without her Raiment; who though surrounded with the Crowd of her Attendants, yet she shrunk backwards, and view'd him from aside. How did she wish her Arrows had been at Hand! but wanting these, she took some of the Water in which she stood, and dashed it in his Face; and besprinkling his Hair with the avenging Stream, added these Words, the Presages of his approaching Woe: "Now, if it is in your Power, “boast of having seen me without my Raiment.” Nor threatening more, he claps on his sprinkled Forehead the Horns of a long-liv’d Stag, lengthens his Neck, and sharpens the Tops of his Ears : His Hands are chang’d to Feet, his Arms to long Legs, and his Body is covered with a spotted Skin. Fear also is added ; away flies the Autonean Hero, and wonders that he should be so swift in running : But when he saw his Face and Horns in the Stream, he was going to say, wretched Aetæon ; but no Voice followed ; he groan’d, that was all his Voice, and the Tears trickled down a Face not his own. His former Understanding only continued. What should he do ? Should he return home, and to the Royal Palace, or lye hid in the Woods ? Fear hinders one, and Shame the other. While he is debating with himself, the Dogs espied him ; and first Black-foot, and the good-nos’d Tracer, gave the Signal to the rest by a full Cry. Tracer was a Cretan Dog, and Black-foot of the Spartan Breed. Upon this the rest rush in, swifter than the rapid Wind, Glutton, Quick-sight, and Ranger, all Arcadian Dogs ; and able Kill-buck, and fierce Hunter, with Tempest and swift-footed Wing, and Catcher of quick Scent, and Woodger lately

To prevent therefore a tedious Process of Notes, I have in the Version, instead of the Latin Names, given the original Signification, which may serve as a short Explication of each.

This Pack, fond of their Prey, pursue him over Rocks, and Mountains, and inaccessible Steeps, and through difficult and pathless Ways. He now flies through Places where he had often pursued. Alas, he flies his own Servants, and fain would have cried, I am Actæon, know your Master; but Words are wanting to his Desires. The Air resounds with the Barking of Dogs; and first Black-hair wounded him in the Back, Kilham next; Rover fastened upon his Shoulder. They had come out later, but sprung before the rest by a short Cut through the Mountains: These hung fast upon their Master, till all the Pack come up, and fix their Teeth in his Body.

Body. Now all over covered with Wounds, he groans, and complains, if not in the Tone of a Man, yet in such as could not come from a Stag ; and fills the well-known Mountains with his dismal Moans. Then suppliant upon his bended Knees, and in the Posture of one begging his Life, turns about his silent Countenance instead of Arms. But his Companions, ignorant of what had chanc'd, encourage the eager Pack with the usual Cries, and every where look for Actæon, and call without ceasing on Actæon, as imagining him absent. He turns his Head at the Name, while they complain that he is absent, and thro' Indolence misses his share of the Sport. He wish'd indeed he had been absent, and that he had only seen and not felt the cruel Bites of his Dogs. They gather round him on all Sides, and burying their Jaws in his Body, tear in Pieces their Master, under the Figure of a deceitful Stag. Nor was the Rage of the Quiver-bearing Goddesses appeased, till he had ended his Life by an Infinity of Wounds.

III. The Rumour of this Vengeance was differently received ; to some the Goddesses seem'd more cruel than was just ; others commend her as worthy of the strict Virginitie she profess'd : Both Sides produce Reasons for what they think. The Wife of Jove alone does not so much own, whether she blames or approves, as she rejoices at the Calamity of a Family sprung from Agenor, and transfers the Hatred she had conceived

 Name of Gods have defil'd chaste Beds. Nor is it enough that he is really Jove; let him, if indeed he be the true one, give some Pledge of his Love; and what and how great he is received by the immortal Juno; such and so great let him descend to your Embraces, encompassed with the Ensigns of Majesty." With Words like these did Juno ensnare the unsuspecting Grand-Daughter of Cadmus: She asks a nameless Gift of Jupiter. To whom the God says; "Chuse whatever you will, and ask without Fear of a Repulse: And to confirm you yet the more, let the Majesty of the Stygian Torrent witness this Promise; he who is the Terror and Sovereign of the Gods themselves." Semele rejoicing in her Misfortune, and but too prevalent, as now doom'd to perish by the Complaisance of her Lover; "Descend to me such, said she, as the Daughter of Saturn is wont to embrace you, when you celebrate the sacred Rights of Venus." Fain would the God have stopp'd her as she spoke; but the hasty Choice had now pass'd her Lips. He groan'd; for neither is it possible for her not to have wish'd, or him not to have promised. Oppress'd with Grief he mounts the Height of Hea-self with the Fires wherewith he had over-thrown the hundred-handed Typhæus; these appear'd too terrible. There is a Thunder of a lesser Mould, to which the right Hand of the Cyclops has added less Violence and Flame, and pointed it with less Fury: The Gods call it Thunder of a second Rate. This he takes, and enters, surrounded with Majesty, into the Palace of Semele; but her mortal Frame could not sustain the Shock of ethereal Majesty, and she perished amidst the Glories she had desired. The Infant, yet unfinished, is taken from the Womb of his Mo-

Nysa, a Mountain of India, which Strabo and Foot of this Mountain is the City Nysa. As Bacchus therefore, according to the Testimony hence account, in some Measure, for the fabuby the Greeks, viz. That he was so long carried in Jupiter's Thigh.

as, that Jupiter, having drown'd his more weighty Cares in Nectar, engaged in free Conversation with Juno, who was also disposed to share his Mirth. "Why sure, says he, the Sense of Pleasure, which you enjoy in the Embraces of Love, is far more quick and sprightly than what falls to the Share of the Males." She denies it : They agree to ask the Opinion of experienced Tiresias, who had tryed the Pleasure of each Sex.
 For seeing once in a shady Wood the Bodies of two large Snakes twisted in Conjunction, he had prophan'd them with a Stroke of his Club, and of a Man (strange to relate) became a Woman, and so continued for seven Autumns : In the eighth he again saw the same Serpents, and said ;
 "If such is the Virtue of a Stroke given you, as to change the Sex of the Giver into the contrary, I'll try the Virtue of a second Stroke." Again he struck the same Snakes, when his native Sex return'd, and he recovered his original Form. He therefore being chosen Judge of the merry Contest, declares in favour of Jupiter. Juno resenting it more than was fit, nor according to what so trivial a Debate required, condemned her Judge to languish in eternal Night. But the omnipotent Father (for it is not in the Power of any one God to cancel the Acts of another) in recompence for the Loss of his Sight, gave him the Knowledge of Things to come, and softened his Punishment by the Honour that followed it.

V. He, greatly fam'd through the Aonian Cities, gave unerring Answers to all that consulted him. The blue-ey'd Liriope made the Essay and Experiment of his infallible Voice ; whom formerly Cephisus folded in his winding Stream, and by force enjoyed her, shut in by his circumfused Waves. The beauteous Nymph disclosed from her full Womb a Boy, who even then might have been the Darling of the Fair, and calls him Narcissus. The sage Prophet being consulted, whether he should see the lengthened Period of mature old Age, answers : if he never knows himself. Long did the Voice of the Prophet appear vain and frivolous : But the Event, the Thing itself, the Manner of his Death, and the Novelty of his Madness, confirms all. For the Son of Cephisus had now added one to three Times five Years, just turn'd of Boy, and entering upon the Stage of Man. Many blooming Youths and love-sick Maids carefs'd him : but there was so stubborn a Pride in his resistless Beauty, that no Youths 339. Ille per Aonias fama celeberrimus.] The Nymph Liriope consults Tiresias as to the Fate of Narcissus, her Son by the River Cephisus, and receives for answer: That all should succeed well with him, if he never came to the Knowledge of his own Beauty. When he was grown up, Echo falls in Love with him, and watching the Opportunity of his speaking, that she might resound his last Words, an ingenious Dialogue is made to pass between them by the Poet. Echo, however, unable to compass her Desires, wastes away in Languishings, her Body is changed into a Stone, and nothing of her remains but her Voice.

In explaining this Fable we must suppose, that the Poets, who animate every Thing, have invented this Fable to explain the Phænomenon after an ingenious Manner : For among the Poets, as Boileau has admirably well express'd it in his art of Poetry, " Every Thing as" sumes a Body, a Soul, a Look, a Manner :
 " Every Virtue becomes a Divinity ; Minerva " is Prudence, Venus Beauty. Echo is no more " a mere Voice that resounds in the Air, but " a Nymph in Fear for the Cruelty of Nar" cissus."

Aspicit hunc, trepidos agitantem in retia cervos, Vocalis Nymphæ; quæ nec reticere loquenti, Nec prior ipsa loqui didicit, resonabilis Echo.

Echo erat adhuc corpus, non tantum vox; & tamen garrula non habebat alium usum oris, quam habet nunc; ut posset reddere verba novissima de multis. Juno fecerat hoc: quia cum posset sæpe deprendere nymphas jacentes sub suo Jove in monte; illa prudens tenebat Deam longo sermone dum nymphæ fugerent. Saturnia postquam sensit hoc ait; potestas parva hujus linguæ qua sum delusa dabitur tibi, ususque brevissimus vocis. Firmatque minas re. or Maid could touch his savage Heart. The noisy Nymph who cannot be silent when another speaks, nor has learn'd first to speak herself, resounding Echo, chanc'd to spy him as he was driving the timorous Deer into his Nets. Echo was then a Body, not a bare Voice; and yet the Babbler had no other Use of Speech than what she now enjoys, to repeat the last Words out of many. Juno had done this to punish her; because when she might often in her Mountains have surprized the Nymphs in the Embraces of her Jupiter, she slyly engag'd the Goddesses in a long Discourse, that the Nymphs might escape; which when the Daughter of Saturn discovered; but small Exercise, says she, shall be allow'd this Tongue wherewith I have been so often deluded, and a very short Use of my Voice: and she confirms her Threats by the Execution: Yet in the end of speaking she redoubles the Voice, and returns the Words she hears. When therefore she saw Narcissus wandering through the pathless Forests, arm'd by the lovely Youth, she privately follows his Steps, and the more she follows him, burns with fiercer Flames: Just as when Sulphur, spread upon the Tops of Torches, catches the Flames from the Touch of a Taper. How often did she desire to address him in soft Accents, and employ a suppliant Voice! But Nature resists the Impulse, nor suffers her to begin.

What is in her Power she is ready for, to watch his Voice, and re-echo to the Sound. By chance the Youth, separated from the trusty Train of his Attendants, cried out, Is any one here? And Echo answered, here: He is amaz'd, and casting his Eyes on every Side calls with a loud Voice, Come. She calls the Youth who call'd her. He looks back, and as he could still see no-body, says, Why do you shun me? And has as many Words return'd as he had spoken. He persists, and, deceived by the Appearance of an alternate Voice, says, Let us come together here. Echo, to whom no Sounds could be more agreeable, return'd, Let us come together; and immediately, favouring her own Words, rush'd from the Woods, impatient to throw her Arms round his much-desir'd Neck. He flies, and flying calls out, Cease with your Hands thus to embrace me, I will sooner die than bear that thou may'st enjoy me. She answered nothing, but, Thou may'st enjoy me. The Nymph despised lurks in the Woods, and hides her blushing Face with Leaves, and from that Time lives in solitary Caves. Yet her Love still remains, and grows from the Mortification of a Refusal; anxious Cares waste her miserable Body, and Leanness shrivels her Skin; all the Juice of her Body flies off in Air, her Voice and Bones are only left. Her Voice is still heard ; her Bones are said to have received the Form of a Stone. Since then she lies hid in the Woods, and is never to be seen on Mountains, yet is to be heard by all ; Sound alone is what lives in her.

VI. Thus had he deceived her, thus other Nymphs sprung from the Waters or Mountains, thus the whole Body of Youths. Upon which some one of those who had been despised by him, lifting up his Hands to Heaven, said ; “ So let him love, nor enjoy the Object belov’d.” Rhamnusia granted this just Prayer. There was a silver Spring, clear with unfully’d Streams, which neither Shepherds, nor Goats fed upon the Mountains, nor other Cattle had touched ; which no Bird, nor wild Beast, nor Branch falling from a Tree, had disturb’d ; it was surrounded with Grass nourished by the neighbouring Stream, and a Wood that defended the Lake from the Heat of the Sun. 402. Sic hanc, sic alias.] Narcissus by his Cruelty rendering himself odious to the Nymphs, Nemesis gives Ear to their Prayers. Wherefore chancing to see his own Image in a Fountain, he falls in Love with it ; in which vain Passion he languishes without hopes of Relief, and is at length changed into a Flower of his own Name. The best Manner of explaining this Fable is to consider it as a useful Lesson that unfolds to the hurtful Effects of an immoderate Self-love. The Reflections that may be drawn from it are innumerable : That we are not to regard ourselves with too flattering a Complaisance, that our good Qualities ought to be hid from us, nor we be the first to admire, much less to publish, them. We may say too that the little Reality, which we for the most Part find in those Pleasures we so eagerly grasp at, resembles this vain Phantom wherewith the Youth fell in Love, and which threw him at last into a languishing Illness that occasioned his Death.

 Complexion mix'd of Red, and a snowy Whiteness, and admires every thing for which he himself is to be admir'd. He foolishly admires him-sought, and equally raises the Flame, and suffers under it. How often did he give vain Kisses to the deceitful Spring, how often thrust his Arms into the Waters to catch the Neck he saw, nor found what he fancied he em-brac'd. He knows not what it is he sees; but what he sees raises the Flame. And the same Error that deceived his Eyes, provokes them: Why, fond Youth, do you thus vainly catch the flying Image? What you you see is only the Shadow of a reflected Image, nor has any real Exis-

Neither a Regard to Food nor Rest can draw him thence ; but laid upon the shady Grass he gazes at the fallacious Image with unsatiated Eyes, and is undone by his own Sight. When raising himself a little, and stretching out his Hands towards the surrounding Woods, “ Was ever, O ye Woods, any one more cruelly in Love than I ? (for you know, and have been convenient Coverts for many.) You who have run thro’ so many Ages of Life, do you remember in that long Period of Time any one who pin’d away in this Manner ? It pleases me, and I see it ; what I see, and pleases me, I cannot find : So strangely is the Lover deceived. And to add to my Grief, we are not separated by a great Sea, or a long Way, nor Mountains, nor Walls with Gates shut against us : a shallow Water hinders our Embraces. He himself wants to be clasp’d in my Arms ; for as often as I offer Kisses to the limpid Stream, so often does he fondly bend his Mouth to mine. You would think he might be touch’d, so small a Matter hinders the meeting of Lovers. Whoever you are, come up hither. Why, dearest of your Sex, do you deceive me ? Where do you retire when pursu’d ? Sure neither my Form nor Age ought to create Aversion ; for even Nymphs have been touch’d by my Charms.

Et jam neque color est rubori mixto candore; nec vigor et vires, et quæ visa modo, placebant, nec corpus quod Echo quondam amaverat, remanet. Quæ et Echo vidit, quamvis irata memorque, tamen indoluit: quotiesque puer miserabilis dixerat eheu, hæc iterabat eheu resonis vocibus. Cumque ille percusserat suos lacertos manibus, hæc quoque reddebat eundem sonitum plangoris.

 pear of a lively Red mixed with shining White; or a Grape, not yet ripe, puts on a purple Blush in the parti-coloured Clusters; which when he beheld in the refining Spring, he could no longer support the redoubled Passion; but as yellow Wax dissolves with a gentle Heat, and the Morning Dew is dissipated by the early Rays of the Sun, so wasted by Love, he decays, and slowly languishes under the hidden Fire. He has now no more that bright Complexion of white and red; that Vigour, Strength, and Air of Youth and Beauty, which so lately charm'd; nor does his graceful Body remain, which formerly Echo had so much lov'd: Which when she saw, although offended, and mindful of his late Usage, she griev'd, and

He gently falling, lays his Head upon the tender Grass, and Night closes for ever those self-admiring Eyes. Then too, after being received into the infernal Habitations, he beheld himself in the Stygian Waves. The Naiads mourn'd his Fate, and cutting off their Hair, laid it on their Brother's Tomb. The Dryads too mourn: Echo resounds to their Lamentations. And now they were preparing a Funeral Pile, and Torches, and a Bier; but his Body was no where to be found, instead thereof they see a yellow Flower, surrounded on every Side with white Leaves.

VII. This Thing, when known, brought deserved Fame to the Prophet through all the Cities of Greece, and the Name of the Scothfayer was great. But Pentheus, the Son of Echion, a Contemner of the Gods, alone of all derides him, and laughs at the presaging Words of the old Man, and reproaches him with his Darknefs and the Loss of his Sight. He, shaking his Temples white with hoary Locks, says; "How happy were

507. Plangentibus affonat Echo.] This Circumstance is happily introduc'd by the Poet, and shews at once the Justness and Fertility of his Imagination. Echo is represented by this as unable, notwithstanding all the ill Usage she had met with, to banish quite the Remembrance of her dear Narcissus, and what was only a natural Consequence of the loud Complaints of the Naiads, is here improv'd into a new Scene of Lamentation for the Death of that unfortunate Youth.

The Son of Echion drives him from his Presence, as he was uttering these "Had Acrisius Courage enough to despise the vain Deity, and shut the "Gates of Argos against him, and shall this stranger terrify Pentheus and "all Thebes? Go quickly, (this Command he gave to his Servants) go, "and bring hither the Leaders of the Rout bound; nor let dull Delay re"tard the Execution of my Commands." His Grandfather Cadmus, Atha-mas, and the whole Company of his Friends, chide him severely, and in vain endeavour to restrain him. He is made fiercer by their Admonitions, and his Rage by being curb'd encreases, and is but irritated the more, and their Struggles to hinder him, hasten on his Ruin. Thus I have seen a Torrent, where no Obstruction impeded its Course, run smooth, and with a gentle Noise; but where Beams or Stones stopt up its Channel, it run foaming and raging, and gathered new Rapidity from the Obstacles in its Way. Lo his Servants return all bloody, and deny to their Master, asking after Bacchus, that they had seen Bacchus. This Fellow however, say they, we have taken, his Attendant, and the Minister of his holy Rites, and then deliver him to Pentheus with his Hands bound behind him; a Stranger, and one that had quitted Tuscany, his native Country, to attend on Bacchus and his Rites.

VIII. and IX. Pentheus beheld him with Eyes, which the Rage he was in had rendered terrible, and altho' he could scarce bear to defer the Time of his Punishment: "O Wretch, says he, soon to perish, and by your Death serve as an Example to others, tell your Name, and that of your Parents, and your Country, and why you frequent these Solemnities of new Invention." He, devoid of Fear, answered; "My Name is Accetes, my Country Mæonia, and my Parents of the humble Vulgar. My Father left me no lands to be ploughed up by the laborious Ox, nor wool-bearing Flocks, nor Herds. He was himself poor, and went with a Line, Hooks, and a bending Reed to deceive and draw out the skipping Fishes: His Art was his whole Estate. When he bequeathed me his Art; Take, said he, Successor and Heir of my Employment, all the Riches that I possess, and dying, left me no other Patrimony but the Waters. This alone I could call my paternal Inheritance. But soon, that I might not always be confin'd to the same Rocks, I learnt to guide the Helm with a skilful right Hand, and made my Observations on the watery Constellation of the Olenian Goat, and Taygete, and the Hyades, and the Bear, and the Quarters of the Wind, and the Harbours fit for Ships.  As the mettled Steed rages when the warlike Trumpeter gives the Alarm with sounding Brass, and burns with Impatience for the Fight, so the Sky, struck with continued Howlings, transported Pentheus, and his Rage flames at hearing the distant Shouts. There is near the Middle of the Mountain a Plain, skirted round with Woods, itself clear of Trees, and visible on all Sides. Here first his Mother sees him regarding the sacred Mysteries with unhallowed Eyes; here she first kindled into Madness, here she first darted at her own Pentheus her leafy Javelin, and cries; "O my " Sisters, come quickly; that frightful Boar that ravages our Fields, that " Boar I must strike." The raging Crowd rush upon him at once, all meet together, and gather round him; now trembling, now uttering less violent Words, now blaming himself, and acknowledging that he was in fault. Finding himself wounded, "Help, help, he cries, my Aunt Au-

TRANSLATION.

Pentheus has now no Arms to reach out to his Mother ; but shewing his mutilated Body, destitute of his Limbs, Mother, says he, behold. Agave howled at the Sight, and toss'd her Neck, and brandished her Locks in Air ; and tearing off his Head, grasp'd it in her bloody Fingers, crying out, " Lo, Companions, this Victory is my Work." Not more suddenly does the Wind bear off from a high Tree the Leaves loosened by Autumn Colds, than the mangled Limbs of Pentheus are scattered by bloody Hands. The Theban Matrons, aw'd by so tragical an Example, frequent the new Mysteries, offer Incense, and attend at the sacred Altars.

BUT Alcithoe, the Daughter of Minyas, is not yet brought to think that the mysterious Rites of the God ought to be received ; but rashly persists in denying, that Bacchus was the Progeny of Jove, and has her Sisters her Associates in the Impiety. The Priest had commanded to celebrate the Feast, and that both Mistresses and Slaves should cease from all Manner of Work, cover their Breasts with Skins, untie the Fillets that bound up their Locks, adorn their Hair with Garlands, and bear in their Hands the leafy Thyrsus ; denouncing the heavy indignation of the God against all who conti-

N O T E S.

1. At non Alcithoë.] All the Theban Ladies, aw'd by this fatal Example of Pentheus, resorted to the sacred Ceremonies. But Alcithoe, the Daughter of Minyas, and her Sisters, still continued obstinate, and while others were engaged at the Festival, they and their Maids are busy with their usual Work at home. To make the Time pass on more agreeably, one of them proposes, that they should tell each a Story in their Turn. The Motion is readily agreed to, and she who first mentioned it, is intreated to begin. After revolving some Time within herself, what was most likely to amuse, she fixes upon the Story of Pyramus and Thisbe.

From what Ovid says in the last and this Book, it evidently appears, that the Establishment of the Worship of Bacchus in Greece, met with great Opposition, and that the Partizans of it, in order to make it be received, spread about a Multitude of marvellous Fictions. And these pretended Predigies are what we now endeavour to explain. One Thing we may remark, that however little Truth there is in them, the pretended Chastisements of Pentheus, the Mariners, the Daughters of Minyas, and Lycurgus, made Bacchus pass for a very revengeful Divinity, and the Priests did not fail to improve these Stories, to make his Worship more venerable.

1. Minyeias.] Alcithoe was the Daughter of Minyas, the Son of Orchomenus.

1. Orgia.] This was a general Name given by the Greeks to all religious Rites, but more particularly those of Bacchus.

6. Pectora pelle tegi.] Four Things were requir'd of the Women concern'd in the Celebration of this Festival : To cover themselves with the Skins of wild Beasts, to have their Hair hanging loose, to adorn their Heads with Crowns of Vine-Leaves, and to carry Thyrsuses in their Hands.

To these they add Nyseus, Thyoneus, Lenæus, and the Parent of the genial Grape, and Nyctelius, and Father Eleleus, and Iacchus, and Evan, and all the other Names under which you, Bacchus, are honoured in the several States of Greece : for you enjoy a never-fading Youth, you are eternally a blooming Boy ; in Heaven you shine the most amiable of the Gods, and when you appear without your Horns, you have a Virgin's Face. By thee the East has been subdued, to where swarthy India is bounded by the remote Ganges. Pentheus, and Ax-bearing Lycurgus, impious Men, fell by thy Vengeance, O venerable God ; by thee were the Tyrrhene Sailors plunged into the Sea. Thou controul'ſt with painted Reins the Necks of the harness'd Linxes that draw thy Chariot. her last Years in the high Towers of Babylon ; or how Nais, by her Spells and potent Herbs, turn'd the Bodies of the Youths she had enjoy'd, into mute Fishes, until at length she suffered herself the same Fate ; or how the Tree, which formerly bore white Fruit, has now its Berries of purple Hue, from being stain'd with Gore. This pleases her best : this, because a Story less known, she began in this Manner, lengthening out the while her Thread.

II. Pyramus and Thisbe, the one the most accomplish'd Youth, the other the most amiable of all the Eastern Nymphs, lived in Houses contiguous to each other, where Semiramis is said to have surrounded a stately City with Walls of Brick. A Neighbourhood so close brought on Acquaintance, and the first Ad-

Kind. It represents her from the Middle upwards a Woman, but below she terminates in a Fish. The Statue of her, which is shewn at Hierapolis, represents her wholly a Woman. He further says, that the Temple of this last City is thought by some to have been built by Semiramis, who consecrated it not to Juno, as is generally believed, but to her Mother Derceto. From all which it appears, that the young Princess, whom Derceto exposed, was the fam'd Semiramis her Daughter.
 49. Nais.] A Nymph of the Island of the Sun, call'd also Nosola, between Taprobana and Garmania.

55. Pyramus & Thisbe.] Pyramus and Thisbe were two young Lovers, who liv'd in adjoining Houses at Babylon. Having no opportunity of seeing one another, because their Parents opposed the growing Passion, they contriv'd to steal by Night from home, and meet under a Mulberry-tree without the City. Thisbe came first, and being obliged to fly to a Cave to avoid a Lionsess, stopp'd her Veil in the Fright : This, after it had been torn in Pieces by the bloody Teeth of that savage Animal, chanced to fall into the Hands of Pyramus, who upon that believing she had been devoured, kills himself in Regret. Thisbe returning, and judging from what she saw, of what had pass'd, stabs herself also. This Story is to be met with only in Ovid and Hyginus ; nor is it necessary to know any Thing farther about it. The particular Circumstances, wherewith it is recounted, are only the Embellishments of a poetical Imagination. The Story, however, contains an excellent Moral, and may serve as a Lesson both to Parents and Children : To Children, that they be not too rash of entering into Engagements, especially where the different Interests of Families may form any considerable Obstacles : And to Parents, not to be always governed by Resentment or Interest ; but to make some Allowances for Inclinations, that become criminal only by their Obstinacy.

57. Ubi dicitur altam, &c.] The Magnificence and Greatness of Babylon is taken notice of by almost all ancient Writers. Its Walls are said to have been 60 Miles in Compass, 87 Feet in Thickness, and in Height 350 Feet.

vances of Affection; in Time this ripened into Love; they would have also been united by the Marriage-Tye, but their Parents opposed it; and vainly forbid what it was not in their Power to hinder. Both burn'd with Minds equally captivated. No one is intrusted with this Secret; they speak by Nods and Signs, and the more the Flame is covered, the more it rages and spreads. The Wall common to both Houses was cleft by a small Chink, which it had got at the Time when it was first built. This Flaw, observed by none for many Ages, (what can escape the Notice of Love?) you fond Lovers first espied, and made it serve as a Passage for your Voice, thro' which the soft Accents of Love were wont to be safely convey'd in gentlest Murmurs. Often as they stood, Thïsbe on one Side, and Pyramus on the other, and had each by Turns caught the other's Breath; "Envious Wall, would they say, why do you thus oppose the

"owe it to you, that our Words find a Passage to each other's Ears." After uttering these vain Complaints on either Side, at Night they say farewell, and imprint Kisses on their own Part, which yet cannot reach to the other. The following Morn had extinguished the lesser Fires of the Night, and the Sun with his Rays dried the dewy Herbs, when our Lovers meet again at the usual Place.

Place. Then first complaining much in soft Murmurs of their hard Fate, they agree to try, if in the Silence of the Night they can deceive their Keepers, and steal out of Doors ; and having once got from their Houses, to leave also the City ; and lest perhaps they might wander long in the open Fields, to meet at the Tomb of Ninus, and conceal themselves under the Shade of a Tree. For there, by the Edge of a cool Spring, stood a tall Mulberry-Tree, bending under a Load of Snow-white Fruit : The Contrivance pleases them, and the Light, seeming to depart slowly, plunges at last into the Sea, and Night rises from the same Sea. Artful Thisbe, turning the Hinge gently, gets out in the Dark, and deceives her domesticks ; then covering her Face with a Veil, arrives at the Tomb, and sits down under the Tree agreed upon. Love made her bold : When lo a Lionsess, her frothing Jaws besmear'd with the fresh Slaughter of Oxen, comes to quench her Thirst in the Waters of the adjoining Spring ; which, when Thisbe spied at some Distance by the Rays of the Moon, she fled with trembling Pace into a dark Cave, and as she fled, leaves her Veil, which dropp'd from her Back. The savage Lionsess having appeased her Thirst with large Draughts, as she returns into the Woods, tears with bloody Mouth the thin Veil, which she chanced to find by itself in the Fields. Pyramus coming out later, sees the plain Prints of a wild Beast in the deep Dust, and a sudden Paleness spreads o'er all his Face; but when he found also the Veil stain'd with Blood: "One Night, says he, shall witness the Death of two Lovers; she indeed was worthy of a longer Life, but my Soul is guilty: 'tis I that have destroyed you, much to be lamented Fair, who persuaded you to come by Night into Places full of Terror, and came not first myself. O, whatever Lions lurk under this Rock, tear in Pieces my Body, and devour my wicked Bowels with unrelenting Jaws. But it is the Part of a Coward to wish for Death." He takes up Thisbe's Veil, and carries it with him to the Shade of the appointed Tree; and after letting fall a Torrent of Tears, and imprinting Kisses upon the well-known Garment, receive now also, says he, a Draught of my Blood, and plunges the Sword, wherewith he was begirt, into his Bowels; then, without Delay, as he was dying, drew it from the warm Wound, and lay extended supine upon the Ground. The Blood springs high, just as when a Pipe bursting where the Lead is decay'd, throws out the Waters from the hissing Flaw, and spouting breaks the Air with its Strokes. The Fruit of the Tree, by the Spinkling of the Blood, puts on a dark Complexion, and the Root, fattened by the flowing Gore, tinges the hanging Mulberries with a purple Colour.

But now Thisbe, having not yet quite banished her Fear, anxious lest she might seem to have deceived her Lover, returns to the Place, seeks for the youth with ardent Eyes and an ardent Mind, and is impatient to tell him of the great Danger she had escaped; when, coming to the Place, and observing the Appearance of the Tree altered, she doubts if she is right, so greatly was she surpriz'd at the Colour of the Fruit. In this Uncertainty she sees trembling Limbs beat the bloody Ground, and starting back with a Face pale as Ashes, thrills with Horror as the Sea, whose Surface trembles when brush'd by a gentle Breeze! But when, after staying a little, she found it to be her Lover, she mites her Arms, worthy of gentler Usage, with echoing Blows, and tearing her Hair, embrac'd the beloved Body, and wash'd his Wounds with her Tears, mixing these watery Tokens of her Sorrow with his Blood; then applying her Lips to his cold Face, "Pyramus, (she cried) what cruel Disaster has thus torn you from me? Pyramus, answer; 'tis your own dearest Thisbe that calls: Hear, and raise your sinking Countenance." At the Name of Thisbe, Pyramus lifted up his Eyes, now heavy with Death, and after seeing her, closed them again. Thisbe, how soon she perceived her own Veil, and saw the Ivory Sheath without the Sword; "Alas she cried, ill-fated Youth, your own Hand and Love have destroy'd you. Sun, who moderates all Things by his etherial Light. Let us relate the Amours of the Sun : This God is thought to have first discovered the Adultery of Venus with Mars ; This God sees every Thing first. He was grieved at what had been done ; and betrayed to the Husband born of Juno, both the stolen embrace, and the Place where it was committed. He amaz'd, and as if depriv'd of his Senses, dropp'd the Work which he held in his skilful right Hand ; forthwith he files out slender Chains of Brass, and Nets, whose subtile Mashs might deceive the most prying Eye : The finest Threads could not exceed this Work, nor those delicate Fibrils, by which the Spider hangs from the top of a Beam. He contrives it too to yield to the gentlest touch, and smallest Movements, and draws it with the nicest Artifice round the Bed. When the Wife and Adulterer came into the same Bed, caught both by the Artifice of the Husband, and his Chains, which he had prepar'd after a new Manner, they stick lock'd fast in each other's Embraces. The Lemnian Deity immediately threw open the Ivory Folding-Doors, and admitted the Gods. They lay shamefully coupled together ; yet some of the Gods (not the gravest, you may suppose) could have lik'd being surpriz'd in that scandalous Posture. The Gods laugh'd, and for a long Time this was the most noted Story in all Heaven. The Cythereian Goddess are under the western Quarter of Heaven ; there they are nourished with Ambrosia instead of Grass ; this refreshes them after the Fatigue of their diurnal Course, and supplies new Vigour for their returning Toils : While there the Coursers eat of their heavenly Food, and Night performs her Revolution, the God enters the Apartment of his darling Fair, disguised in the shape of her yet, says he, I am resolv'd you shall reach the Sky. Soon the Body anointed with heavenly Nectar dissolv'd away, and moistened the Earth with its Odour ; and a Shoot of Frankincense, gradually taking Root in the Earth, sprung up, and broke through the Turf with its Top.

IV. But the God of Light (however Love might excuse her Grief, and Excess of Grief urge her on to the Discovery) resolves no more to visit Clytie, and from that Time renounc'd all Commerce with her. As she lov'd him to Distraction, his Neglect threw her into a languishing Illness : She loaths the Conversation of the Nymphs, and Night and Day sits upon the bare Ground, with Hair dishevel'd, and for nine Days together taking neither Food nor Water, she supported herself merely by her Tears, and the Dew of Heaven. Nor did she rise from off the Ground ; she only kept her Eye fix'd upon the God as he mov'd along, and turn'd her Face towards him. 'Tis said that her Limbs stuck fast in the Ground, and that a livid Paleness changed her partly into blood-less Herbs ; some streaks of Purple are here and there retained, and a Flower very like to that of a Violet covers her Face. She, though held fast by a Root, still turns towards her beloved Sun, and though chang'd in Shape, yet retains her Love,

She ended ; and the wondrous Fact charm'd their Ears : Some deny that it was now possible, others maintain that all Things are in the Power of true Gods, but will not grant Bacchus to be of the Number. When all the Sisters were silent, Alcithoe is requested to take her Turn, who swiftly throwing her Shuttle through the hanging Web ; I speak not, said she, of the well-known Amours of Daphnis the Idæan Shepherd, whom an enamoured Nymph, through Fear of a Rival, transform'd into a Stone, so strange the Madness that rages in a jealous Breast ; nor do I relate how Scython, contrary to the common Course of Nature, was first a Man, and became afterwards a Woman. I pass by you too, Celmius, now an Adamant, formerly the faithful Guardian of Jove, when a Child ; and the Curetes sprung from a bounteous Shower of Rain, and Crocus and Smilax changed both into Flowers. I will endeavour rather to fix your Attention by grateful Novelty. Learn how Salmacis became infamous, why it

NOTES.

277. Daphnidis Idæi.] This may be interpreted either Cretan or Phrygian Daphnis, for both in Crete and Phrygia there was a Mountain nam'd Ida.

280. Ambiguus fuerit modo vir, modo fœmina, Scython.] Banier tells us, that this Story of Scython's having changed his Sex, had no other Foundation, than that Thrace, which took the Name of a famous Sorceress, call'd Thracia, had formerly been nam'd Scython. Thus, as it lost a Name whose Pronunciation was masculine, and took one of the feminine Gender, some very wise Head-piece feign'd that Scython had chang'd his Sex.

281. Te quoque nunc adamas.] As to what regards the Metamorphosis of Celmius, we learn from Pliny, that he was a young Man of remarkable Wisdom and Moderation ; one upon whom Passion and Prejudice had no Influence, and was for this Reason changed by the Poets into Adamant.

282. Largoque sotos Curetas ab imbri.] The Curetes, according to Dionysius of Halicarnassus, were the antient Inhabitants of Crete. As to the Fable of their springing from the Earth after a great Shower of Rain, it seems to have no other Foundation, than their being of the Race of the Titans ; that is, they were descended of Ouranus and Titea, whose Names import Heaven and Earth.

283. Et Crocon, &c.] As to the Fable of Crocon and Smilax, we are told that that constant and happy Couple were changed into Flowers, for having led a chaste and innocent Life.

He, when he was arrived at his fifteenth Year, forsook his native Mountains, and leaving Ida, where he had been nurs'd, rejoiced to wander over unknown Regions, and visit unknown Rivers ; Curiosity lessening the Fatigue. He went to the Lycian Cities, and the Carians that border upon the Lycians ; here he saw a Fountain whose Waters were clear, and transparent to the very Bottom ; no fenny Reeds, nor barren sedges, nor pointed Rushes deform'd its Banks : The Water is bright, yet the Brink of the Lake is edged round with a Border of verdant Turf, and a

NOTES.

285. Unde sit infamis.] Hermaphroditus, a most lovely and beautiful Youth, was the Son of Mercury and Venus : He was educated by the Naiads in Ida, a Mountain of Pbrygia. Leaving these Seats he came into Caria, and highly pleased with the Sight of a Fountain, whose Waters were clear and transparent, he went into it to bathe ; Salmacis, the Nymph of the Fountain, struck with his amiable Appearance, leapt in after him, and holding him close in her Embraces, prays Heaven that they may be united into one. Hermaphroditus finding himself now to partake of the Nature of both Sexes, implores his Parents, that the Waters of that Fountain might have the same Effect upon all that afterwards entered into them.

As to what may have given Rise to this Fable, take the following Account from Banier : There was in Caria near to the City of Halicarnassus, as we learn from Vitruvius, a Fountain which serv'd to humanize some Barbarians, who having been driven out by the Colony which the Argives established in that City, were obliged to come thither to draw Water. Their Commerce with the Greeks not only rendered them more polite, but made them give also into the Luxury of that voluptuous People ; and this Circumstance was what gave to that Fountain the Reputation of changing the Sex.

296. Lycias.] Lycia was a Province of Asia Minor ; Caria another Province, adjoining to Lycia.

Nymph ever dwells in the green Grass ; but neither fit for Hunting, nor skill'd to bend the Bow, nor practis'd in the Chace, and the only one of all the Naiads not known to swift Diana. We learn from Fame, that her Sisters often urged her : Salmacis, take a Dart or painted Quiver, and mix your Ease with the hardy Toils of Hunting ; but she neither takes a Dart, nor painted Quiver, nor mixes her Ease with the hardy Toils of Hunting, but sometimes bathes her comely Limbs in her own Spring, and often smooths her Locks with a Comb of Box Wood, and surveying herself in the Stream, consults what may best become her. Now covering her Body with a transparent Garment, she repotes on the soft Leaves, or the soft Grass. Often she employs herself in gathering Flowers, and then by Chance was gathering some, when she saw the Boy, and wish'd to enjoy whom she saw. But although she hastened to address the Youth, yet did she not advance till she had adjusted her Mien, look'd round that her Robe sat well, settled her Looks with nicest Care, and merited to be thought beautiful ; then thus began to speak : O Youth, worthy to be believed a God : if you are a God, undoubtedly the God of Love ; if a Mortal, happy they who begot you, happy your Brother, and happy indeed your Sister, if any such you have, and the Nurse who gave you her Breasts ; but happy, far more happy

If already you have a Spouse, indulge me a stolen Embrace ; if not, accept of me, and let us enter the same Bed-Chamber. The Naid, after this, was silent ; the Boy's Face was mark'd with Blushes : He was a Stranger to Love, but his Blushes greatly became him ; his Colour resembled that of Apples hanging on a Tree open to the Sun, of stained Ivory, or the Moon colouring under her Brightness, when the auxiliary Brass resounds in vain. The Nymph desiring without ceasing such Kisses at least as he might give to a Sister, and now raising her Hands to his Ivory Neck ; Will you desist, says he, or must I fly, and abandon both these Places and you ? Salmacis was afraid, and said, Stranger, I freely give up these Places to you, and pretends to move off with a retreating Pace : Then also looking back, and hid under a Covert of Shrubs, she lay there conceal'd, and put down her bended Knees upon the Ground. He, but a Boy, and thinking himself unob- served upon the silent Green, trips round and round the Fountain, and dips first the Soles of his Feet, and then as far as the Ankles, in the sporting Stream, (Waters playing to the Shore). Nor is there any Delay ; but pleas'd with the refreshing Coolness of the inviting Waters, he strips the airy Garments from off his delicate Limbs. Then was Salmacis astonished, and inflam'd with the Desire of his naked Body ; the Eyes too of the Nymph burn, as when the Sun shining with a clear Orb is reflected from the opposite Image in a Glass: Scarce can she bear Delay, scarce defer the wish'd-for Joy; already she desires to embrace him, already distracted with Love, she hardly contains herself. He clapping his Body with his hollow Palms, swiftly leaps into the Water, and throwing out his Arms in alternate Strokes, shines in the limpid Stream, as if any one should shut Images of Ivory, or white Lilies, within a crystal Case. I have prevail'd; cries the Naiad; he is mine; and throwing all her Cloaths to some Distance, jumps into the Middle of the Stream, and holds him, struggling to get loose, and snatches reluctant Kisses, and puts down her Hands, and touches his unwilling Breast, and writhes herself round him, now one Way, now another. In fine, as he is striving to get from her, and endeavours, if possible, to escape, she folds herself about him like a Serpent, when born aloft by the regal Bird: She, as she hangs in the Air, ties up his Head and Feet, and with her Tail entangles his spreading Wings; and as Ivy uses to creep round the tall Trunks of Trees, or the Polypus holds fast his Enemy caught under the Waves, by letting down his Claws on all Sides. The Descendant of Atlas still persists, and denies the Nymph the hop'd-for Joy; she presses hard, and clinging to him by every Limb, Though you thus struggle, says she, perverse Youth, yet shall you not escape; so may the Gods ordain, and let no Day separate him from me, or sever me from him. Her Prayers were heard by the Gods; for the Bodies of both were united in one, and the same Face is spread over them; as if any one should see Branches under a common Rind unite in growing, and shoot up together. Thus, when their Bodies met together in a strict Embrace, they are no more two, but a single Body under a double Form; such as could not be called either Woman or Boy, it seems neither, and yet is both. When, therefore, Hermaphroditus perceived that the Waters, into which he had descended a Man, had partly changed his Sex, and that his Limbs were softened in them, stretching out his Hands, he said, but not now with the Voice of a Man; O Father and Mother, grant this Request to your Son, who bears the Name of both; whoever enters into this Fountain a Man, let him come out but half a Man, and suddenly grow effeminate in the Waters he touches. Both Parents moved, confirmed the Request of their two-shap'd Son, and tinged the Fountain with an ambiguous Medicine.

VI. There was now an End of their Stories; but the Daughters of Minyas still urge their Tasks, and despise the God, and profane his Festival; when on a sudden unseen Timbrels alarm'd them with their hoarse Sounds; the Flute too, with the crooked Horn and tinkling Brass resound: Saffron and Myrrh shed their fragrant Odours; and an Accident almost beyond Belief; their Webs began to look green, and the hanging Cloth to sprout out in Leaves resembling those of Ivy: Part is changed into Vines, and what before were Threads, have now the Appearance of soft Tendrils. Vine Branches spring from the Looms, and the Purple lends its Splendour to the painted Grapes. And now the Day was ended, and the Time come on, which can neither be call'd Darkness nor Light, but the dubious Confines of Night and Day: Suddenly the House seems to shake, and blazing Torches burn, and the whole Fabrick shines with bright Fires, and deceitful Forms of savage wild Beasts howl. Already the Sisters hide themselves in the smoaking House, and all running different Ways, endeavour to avoid the Light and Fires: But while they thus seek to lurk, a thin Mem-

NOTES.

389. Finis erat dictis.] The Daughters of Minyas, Alcithoe, Arsinoe, and Leuconoe, still persisting in their Obstinacy, and refusing to join in the Worship of Bacchus, are transformed into Bats.

All that Mythologists say upon this Fable is, that these Sisters, after whom an exact Search was made, having privately left the City; the Thebans, to conciliate greater Veneration for the God, published the Story of their being transformed in this Manner.

brane o'erspreads their tender Limbs, and light Pinions inclose their Arms ; nor does the Darkness suffer them to know by what Means they lost their former Shape. They were not borne up by Feathers, and yet they supported themselves by pellucid Wings. Endeavouring to speak, they utter a Voice weak and feeble, proportioned to their small Bodies, and express their low Complaints in a squeaking Sound. They frequent Houses, not Woods, and hating the Day, fly abroad in the Night, and derive their Name from the late Evening Star.

VII. The Deity of Bacchus was now acknowledged over all Thebes ; and his Aunt Ino every where relates the Power of the new God : Of so many Sisters, she alone was exempt from Grief, unless what was occasioned by her

NOTES.

416. Tum vero totis, &c.] This Fable is founded on History, and we have nothing to re- trench, but the marvellous. Atamas, the Son of Æolus, having espoused, after the Death of his first Wife, Ino, the Daughter of Cadmus, soon after divorc'd her for the sake of Nephele, by whom he had Phryxus and Helle. But that Princess being also divorc'd in her Turn, he took back Ino, and by her had Learchus and Melicerta. Ino could not bear the Children of Nephele, be- cause, being first-born, they had the Right of succeeding to the Crown ; and therefore sought by all Manner of Ways to destroy them. As the City of Thebes was at that Time afflicted with a cruel Famine, which, 'tis said, she occasioned, by poisoning the Grain before it was sown, she made the Oracle of Apollo to be consulted upon the Subject ; and having gained the Priests to her Interest, it was answered, that to appease the angry Gods, the Thebans must sacrifice the Chil- dren of Nephele : Phryxus understanding from his Governor what was contriving against him, cau- ses a Vessel to be privately equipp'd, and having put on board his Father's Treasures, embark'd with his Sister Helle, and arrived at Colchos, where he was well received. His Sister Helle chanc'd to fall overboard, and was drown'd, whence these Straights got the Name of Hellepont. Mean time Atamas coming to discover the Intrigues of his Wife, suffered himself to be so far carried away by his Rage, that he slew Learchus, whom Ino lov'd tenderly, and wanted to sacrifice her also to his Vengeance: That unhappy Princess, to avoid the King's Fury, fled from the Palace with her other Son Melicerta, and seeing herself pur- sued, ascended a Rock, whence she precipitated herself into the Sea. It was given out, to com- fort the rest of that unfortunate Family, that the Gods had changed Ino and Melicerta into Sea- Deities, under the Names of Leucothoe and Pale- mon. Divine Honours were paid them, and their Worship pass'd into several Countries.

Sisters. Juno beheld her with a Soul elevated and vain, in her Off-spring, in her Consort Athamas, and in the Foster-God ; she could not bear it, but said within herself, could one born of an Adulteress transform the Mæonian Sailors, and o'erwhelm them in the Sea, give the Bowels of a Son to be torn in Pieces by his own Mother, and cover the three Daughters of Minyas with new Wings ? And can Juno do nothing but lament her Grievs unreveng'd ? Is that enough for me ? Is this my only Power ? Himself teaches me what I am to do. It is right to profit even by the Lessons of an Enemy ; and as to what Madness can do, he has made it appear, and more than so, by the Slaughter of Pentheus. Why should not Ino likewise be fir'd with Rage, and go through Examples a-kin to those of her Sisters ? There is a steep declining Way, shaded with dismal Yew, that, through Labyrinths of Silence and Horror, leads to the infernal Abodes ; here languid Styx forms continual Clouds ; along this Path the Ghouls of those newly deceas'd, to whom funeral Honours have been paid, descend. Paleness and Winter every where infest those dreary Regions, and the Ghouls newly arrived know not the Way that leads to the Stygian City, or where to find the Palace of grim Pluto. This spacious City has a thousand Avenues leading to it, and a thousand Gates ever open on all Sides ; and as the Sea receives

Rivers from all the Earth, so does this Place receive the Souls of all the De-ceas'd ; nor is it little for any Multitude of People, nor feels its Streets fill'd with the Crowd. The bloodless Ghosts wander without Body or Bones : Some frequent the Forum, others the Palace of the infernal King ; some exercise Employments in Imitation of their former Life, others are confin'd by the Punishments imposed by the Fates. Saturnian Juno, leaving her celestial Habitation, submits to go thither, so much was she sway'd by Anger and Resentment ; whither, as soon as she entered, and the Threshold groan'd under the sacred Load, Cerberus up-rear'd his tripple Mouth, and bark'd thrice from his tripple Throat ; he calls to her the Sisters begotten of Night, cruel and inexorable Divinities : They sat before the Gates of the Prison, barr'd with Adamant, combing from their Tresses the baleful Snakes. The Goddesses, how soon they knew Juno amidst the thick Shades of Darkness that surrounded her, rose up ; the Place which they guard, is called the Place of Woe ; here Tityus stretched through

NOTES.

457. Tantale.] Tantalus was the Son of Jupiter: His Crime is differently told by the Poets. Some will have it, that he betray'd the Secrets of the Gods intrusted to him; others, that at an Entertainment he gave the Gods, he caused his Son Pelops to be served up. His Punishment of suffering the greatest Extremity of Hunger and Thirst, amidst Provisions of all Kinds within his Reach, is universally known.

459. Sisyphæ.] Sisyphus was the Son of Æolus, infamous for his Robberies, wherewith he greatly infested Attica: He was at length slain by Theseus, and was in Hell condemned to the Punishment of rolling up a great Stone to the top of a Mountain, which he had no sooner done, than it tumbled down again, and renewed his Labour.

460. Ixion.] Who being advanced by Jupiter to Heaven, had the Presumption to make an Attempt upon Juno; Jupiter formed a Cloud in her Shape, on which he begot the Centaurs. He was afterwards cast down to Hell, and made fast to a Wheel that incessantly turns round.

462. Belides.] The Grand-daughters of Belus; for Belus had two Sons, Danaus and Ægyptus: The first had fifty Daughters, and the other as many Sons. These latter demanded the fifty Daughters in Marriage; but Danaus having learnt from an Oracle of Apollo, that he should be some time or other slain by one of the Sons of Ægyptus, gave it in Charge to his Daughters, that they should each the first Night murder her Husband. They all (the youngest, Hypermnestra, excepted) complied with the Command of their Father. Lyncæus, who alone of all the fifty escap'd, afterwards slew Danaus. They were in Hell condemned to the Punishment of drawing Water in Sieves, which, as they are unable to hold it for any Time, constantly renews their Labour.

Rage, shakes her hoary Tresses, and threw back from her Mouth the Snakes creeping round it, and thus began ; There is no need of long formal Speeches ; imagine your Commands already executed, abandon this hateful Kingdom, and return to breathe the Air of a better Region. Juno returns joyful, whom, as she entered Heaven, Iris, the Daughter of Thaumias, purified by sprinkling upon her celestial Dew. Nor was there any Delay ; the cruel Tisiphone catches a Torch soak'd in Blood, and covers herself with a Cloak red with fluid Gore ; then begirt with a twisted Snake, she leaves the dark Reaims : Grief and Fear, and Terror and Madness, with a trembling Countenance, attend her ; she stopp by these Prodigies, Athamas too is terrified, and both prepare to leave the tending her Arms twisted round with Folds of Vipers, shook her Locks ; the

She had alſo brought with her a monſtrous Composition of liquid Poiſon ; ſome Foam of the Mouth of Cerberus, and Venom of the Hydra, and wandering Errors, and the forgetfulneſs of a blind Mind, and Villainy, and Tears, and Rage, and the Love of Murder, all pounded together, which mixing with freſh Blood, ſhe boil'd in a brazen Kettle, and ſtirr'd about with a ſtalk of green Hemlock ; and while they ſtand trembling, ſhe throws the furious Poiſon into both their Breasts, and diſturbs their inmoſt Bowels : Then often toſſing her Torch in the ſame Round, ſtill urges the agitated Fires, and adds Flame to Flame. Thus triumphant, and diſcharg'd of the Commands of the Goddeſs, ſhe returns to the ſhady Realms of Pluto, and lays aſide the Snakes wherewith ſhe had been wrapt round.

There is a Rock that hangs over the Sea, whose lower Part is hollowed by the Waves, and defends the Waters shelter'd under it from Rain : The Summit is steep and pointed, and stretches out a Front over the wide Sea : This Ino mounts, for Madness had given her Strength, and aw'd by no Fear, casts herself and her little Child into the Sea. The Billows, broken by her fall, are white with Foam. But Venus, pitying the Misfortunes of her guiltless Grand-daughter, thus in soothing Words address'd her Uncle ; O Neptune, God of the Waters, who art possess'd of a Power next to that which rules the Heavens, I indeed request great Things ; but shew some Compassion to a kindred Race, whom you see toss'd about upon the vast Ionian Sea, nor disdain to receive them into the Number of your Gods : I, sure, ought to have some Interest with the God of the sea, if indeed I once was Foam concreted in the middle of the Deep, and thence

VIII. Her Sidonian Attendants, tracing as far as they could the Prints of her Feet, saw the last upon the very brink of the Rock; nor longer doubting of her Fate, they tore their Hair and Garments, and bitterly lamented the House of Cadmus: They threw the Odium of all upon Juno, and accused her of Injustice, and a too barbarous Revenge of her Rival. Juno could not bear their Reproaches, but said, I will make you also eternal Monuments of my Cruelty. Her Threats were immediately accomplished; for she who had bore her the truest Affection, cried, I will follow my Queen even into the Sea, and striving to jump, stuck fast to the Rock, nor could be moved from the Place where she stood. Another, while she endeavours to repeat the Blows upon her Breast, as is usual in Sorrow, perceived her Arms to become stiff. This, as she stretches out her Hands over the Waters of the Sea, converted into a Stone, continues to reach out her Hands over the same Waters. In another, you might see her Fingers suddenly hardened in her Hair, as she tore her Locks, which she had seiz'd by the Roots. In fine, every one remain'd in that Posture in which she had been found at the Beginning of her Change. Some transform'd into Birds, fly that of a Man, Draw near, said he, O Wife, draw near, unhappy Wife, and while yet any Thing of me remains, touch me; take my Hand, while yet it is a Hand, before the Serpent wholly possess me. He wanted to say more, but his Tongue suddenly divides into two Parts; nor, when he aims to speak, has he Words at Command; but as often as he prepares to express his Complaints, he does it in Hissings; this was all the Voice that Nature had left him. His Wife, beating her naked Breast with her Hand, cries, Stay, Cadmus, unhappy Cadmus stay, nor glide away in such a monstrous Shape: Cadmus, what means all this? Where is your Foot? where your Shoulders and Hands? your Colour, your Face, and, while I speak, every Limb? Why, heavenly Powers, don't you transform me also into the same Kind of Serpent? She said; he lick'd his Wife's Face, and crept into her dear Bosom, as of one he knew, and almost stifles her with Embraces, and winds round her well-known Neck. Every one present (for they had Attendants with them) is terrified; they suddenly become two, and the crested Snakes, raising their Heads, brandish their smooth Necks in Air; then joining Fold in Fold, creep amicably along till they come within the Covert of an adjacent Grove. Nor do they now shun the Sight of Men, or hurt with poisonous Wound; but, tho' Serpents, still gentle, they remember what they were before.

Acrisius alone, the Son of Abas, descended of the same Race, remains, who forbids him the Walls of Argos, and bears Arms against the God, nor will allow him to be the Offspring of Jove: Neither indeed did he own Perseus to be the Son of Jove, whom Danae had conceived by a Shower of Gold. But soon Acrisius (so great is the Power of Truth) repented both of having violated the God, and that he had not owned his Grandson: The one already is plac'd in Heaven, the other bearing the memorable Spoils of

NOTES.

606. Solutus Abantiades.] Acrisius, the Son of Abas, King of the Argives, and Father of Danae, on whom Jupiter begot Perseus.

610. Quem pluvio Danae conceperat auro.] Jupiter falling in Love with the fair Danae, the Daughter of Acrisius, King of Argos, converted himself into a Shower of Gold, that he might get into the Tower of Brass in which her Father had shut her up. This Fable took its Rise hence, that Acrisius, terrified by the Prediction of an Oracle, which foretold, that he should be one Day slain by his own Grandson, born of Danae, had caused her to be shut up in a Tower with Gates of Brass: This Precaution, however, was without Effect. Prætus, the King's Brother, falling in Love with his Niece, found Means to bribe the Guards, and was admitted: All this was concealed from Acrisius, but Danae being deliver'd of Perseus, her Father order'd both her and the Child to be exposed upon the Sea in a pitiful Bark, which landed in the Island of Seriphus where Polydeutes was King. This Prince receiv'd them favourably, and took Care of the Education of young Perseus; but afterwards falling in Love with Danae, that he might remove Perseus out of the Way, he endeavoured to inspire him with a Desire of Fame, and put him upon the Expedition against the Gorgons.

614. Viperei referens spoliū memorabile monstri.] This refers to the killing of Medusa, call'd here vipereum monstrum, because her Hair was partly Serpents. As Banier has taken a great deal of Pains to illustrate this Fable, I shall here transcribe what he has said upon the Subject.

It would be tedious to bring together all the Fictions that the Poets have invented to set off this History. Let us, however, endeavour to explain the most considerable Circumstances of this Fable, and to begin with the Horse Pegasus, and Hero Chrysaor, who are said to have sprung from Medusa's Blood. It is probable, they were no more than two Ships with Sails, which lay in some Harbour of the Isle where Medusa reign'd, and which Perseus made use of after killing that Princess. These two Ships had perhaps upon their Stern the Figure of two winged Horses, and this gave Rise to the Fable. And by the figurative Expressions, that the Gorgons had Hair wreathed with Serpents, the Teeth of a wild Bear, Wings of an extraordinary Size, Claws of Brass, and their whole Body covered with Scales; we are to understand, that they went out themselves to War, armed with Darts and Javelins adorn'd with Brass, and that their Ships were extremely good Sailors.

Thence driven by jarring Winds through the boundless Expanse of Heaven, he is tofs'd on every Side like a stormy Cloud, and from the Summit of the Sky surveys the far-distant Earth, and flies over the whole World. Thrice he saw the cold Bear-Stars, and thrice the bending arms of the Crab. Oft-times he is hurried to the West, often towards the East; and now Day declining, the Hero, afraid of trusting to his Wings during the Darkness of Night, stopt in the western Part of the World, in the Kingdom of Atlas: there he wanted to take a little Rest, till the Morning-Star had ushered in the bright Aurora, and Aurora the Chariot of the Day. Here Atlas, the Son of Japetus, reign'd, in Vastness of Body surpassing all Men. The utmost Boundaries of the World were under this King, and the Sea, whose Waters are under the panting Horses of the Sun, and receive nightly the burning Axle. A thousand Flocks, and as many Herds, wander over the grassy Plains. No neighbouring States disturb his Realms.

Leaves of Trees shining with radiant Gold cover golden Boughs and golden Apples. Illustrious Stranger, said Perseus, addressing him, if the Glory of a noble Race can move you, Jupiter is the Author of my Race ; or if you are an Admirer of great Exploits, admire mine : I beg for Rest and a hospitable Reception. He was mindful of an ancient Oracle, formerly given by Parnassian Themis : Atlas, a Time will come, when your Tree will be spoil'd of its Gold, and a Son of Jupiter have the Honour of the Prize. Fearing this, Atlas had secur'd his Gardens by strong Walls, and given them to be kept by a watchful Dragon, and would suffer no Strangers to enter his Kingdom. To our Hero likewise he said ; Far hence, be gone, or the Fame of your pretended Exploits, and your Relation to Jupiter, are like to avail you but little. He adds Violence too to his Threats, and endeavours to force him away reluctant, and addressing him sometimes in a resolute Tone, sometimes with all the Arts of Persuasion. Finding himself unequal in Strength ; for who could pretend to be a Match for the great Atlas ? Since then, says he, you slight the Offer of my Friendship, accept this Gift : when, turning his Head the other Way, he exposes from the Left the portentous Countenance of Medusa : The great Atlas was immediately converted into a Mountain ; his Beard and Hair change into Woods ; his Arms and Shoulders become Precipices ; and what was formerly his Head, Head, is now the Summit of the Mountain. His Bones grow into solid Rock, and encreasing on every Side, he shoots out to an immense Size, (so the Gods decreed) affording a Support to Heaven with its whole Host of Stars.

XI. The Grandson of Hippotes had shut up the Winds in their eternal Caves; and the Morning-Star that ushers in the Labours of the Day now appeared with all its Splendor in the high Arch of Heaven. He binds to either Foot the wonted Wings, and arming himself with a bearded Dart, cuts the yielding Air with his waving Ankles. Leaving Nations without Number below and around him, he at last reaches the People of Æthiopia, and the Realms of Cepheus. There Ammon had unjustly doom'd guiltless Andromeda to suffer Punishment for her Mother's Crime; whom, when the Hero of the Race of

NOTES.

662. Clauserat Hippotades.] After the Adventure of Atlas, Perseus penetrated as far as Æthiopia, where he rescued Andromeda, the Daughter of Cepheus and Cassiope, from the Monster to which she was exposed, married her, and brought her with him into Greece: Her Mother having preferr'd her Beauty to that of the Nereids, the Oracle of Ammon pronounced, that her Daughter must be exposed upon a Rock to a Sea-Monster. 'Tis easy to see, that Ovid grounds this Narration of his upon History; but that he borrows the Help of Fiction by way of Ornament to it. Gerard Vossius, who attempted to trace out the mysterious Meaning, says, Andromeda had been promised to an insolent, inhuman Pirate, who by his Incursions infested the Coasts of Æthiopia, on Condition that he would give no Molestation to Commerce; Perseus, who arrived at that Time at Cepheus's Court with his small Fleet, gave Chace to the Pirate, slew him, and married Andromeda.

662. Hippotades.] Æolus, the Son of Jupiter and Acesta, and the Grandson of Hippotes. This Prince, by an exact Observation of the Course of the Winds, the Rising and Setting of the Stars, the stated Seasons of the Year, the Situation of Countries, and the Flux and Reflux of the Sea, arrived at such a Knowledge of the Weather, that he could with great exactness foretel the Approach and Duration of a Storm. Upon this the Poets founded the Notion of his being the God of the Winds.

670. Ammon.] Jupiter Ammon, who had a Temple in the Desarts of Libya, and was worshipped under the Form of a Ram: He being consulted in regard to the Sea-Monster, which Neptune at the Request of the Nereids had sent against the Æthiopians, had answered, that Andromeda must be exposed to it; which the Poet here, not without Reason, calls an unjust Command.

Abas saw, with her Arms bound to the hard Rocks ; but that the gentle Gales moved her waving Tresses, and melting Tears flowed down her Cheeks, he would have taken her for a Statue of Marble. He stands amazed, and without knowing it, nourishes the subtle Flame ; and struck with the Appearance of her amiable Form, almost forgot to wave his Wings in the Air. When he lighted, O Virgin, said he, worthy to wear no such Chains, but those only by which fond Lovers are link'd together in soft Embraces, tell me at my Request your Name, your Country, and why you are thus loaden with Chains. She at first is silent ; nor dares, as being a Virgin, to speak to a Man, and would with her Hands have hid her rising Blushes, but that she was bound. Her Eyes (this was now her full Extent of Power) were bath'd in Tears. Upon his often urging her for a Reply, fearing lest she might seem to conceal some Crimes of her own, she discovers her Name and Country, and her Mother's guilty Confidence of her Beauty. She had not yet ended her Story, when the Billows roar'd, and the Monster, with his Head high above the Waves, is seen traversing the vast Sea with his Breast spread wide over the Deep : The Virgin screams ; the mournful Father and indiscreet Mother are present, both miserable, but she more justly so ; nor do they bring her Aid, but Tears and Lamentations, as the Case re-quir'd, and cling round her Body bound to the Rock. When thus the Stranger ;

You may have Time enough for Tears and Grief, but the Season for Relief is extremely short : Were I to demand her for my Wife ; I, Perseus the Son of Jove, and her whom, shut up in a Tower, Jupiter impregnated in a Shower of fruitful Gold ; Perseus the Vanquisher of the snaky-haired Gorgon, who has dar'd to move through the ætherial Sky on waving Wings ; I should doubtless, as your Son-in-Law, be preferr'd to all ; but I endeavour, with the Aid of Heaven, to add Merit too to so many Titles. I request that she may be mine, if by my Valour I redeem her from Death. Her Parents embrace the Proposal, (for who in such a Case would hesitate ?) and request him to undertake her Defence, and promise moreover their Kingdom as a Dowry ; when lo, as a Ship ploughs the Waves with her sharp Beak, urg'd by the sweating Arms of vigorous Youth, so the Monster dividing the Waves with his Breast, was now distant from the Rocks the Space through which a leaden Bullet, whirl'd from a Balearian Sling, would fly ; when suddenly the young Hero bounding upwards, hover'd in the Clouds on light Pinions, and as his Shadow appear'd upon the Surface of the Deep, the Monster leap'd in wild Rage at the floating Shadow ; as when the Bird of Jove spies in the silent Plain a Serpent turning his livid Back to the Sun, he seizes him behind, and lest he should turn upon him his poisonous Mouth, fixes his greedy Talons in his scaly Neck ; Thus the winged Hero, precipitating precipitating his Course with rapid Flight through the cleaving Sky, stoops full on his Back, and buries the crooked Sabre up to the Hilt in the right Shoulder of the raging Monster ; tortured by the cruel Wound, sometimes he bounds aloft in Air, then sinks again under the Waves ; sometimes turns quick upon his Foe, like a savage Boar when chaf'd with the mingled Cries of surrounding Hounds. He on swift Pinions avoids his eager Bites, and wherever it is most exposed, wounds with his crooked Sword his Back covered with scaly Armour ; sometimes passes it between his Ribs, and again where his Tail, lessening by Degrees, ends in a Fish : The Monster vomits up Floods of Water dyed with streaming Blood ; the Hero's Pinions, wet with its Sprinkling, bear him heavily, nor daring to trust any longer to his dropping Wings, he spies a Rock whose Summit appears above the smooth Waves, but is cover'd by a troubled Sea ; leaning upon this, and holding its upper Ridge with his left Hand, he with repeated Strokes pierced the Bowels of the savage Monster. Shouts and loud Applauses fill the Shore, and ring in redoubled Peals through the Air. loos'd from her Chains, walks along the Shore: He purges his Hands, smear'd with the Monster's Blood, in Water taken from the Sea; and lest the hard Sand might by its Roughness injure the Snake-bearing Head, he softens it by strowing of Leaves, and some green Twigs that grew in the Sea, and thereon lays the Face of Medusa, the Daughter of Phorcys. These fresh Twigs, yet soft and full of Sap, imbib'd the Poison of the Monster, and hardened at its Touch, and perceived a new Hardness spread through their Branches and Leaves: The Nymphs of the Sea, surprized at the uncommon Prodigy, attempt the same in other Twigs, and find it happen according to their Wish; and still renewing these petrifying Seeds, propagate the Wonder through the Deep; such even at this Day is the Nature of Coral, that it gathers Hardness upon being exposed to the Air, and what under the Waves was no more than a tender Spray, above the Waves changes to a Stone.

XII. He raises to three Gods as many Altars of Turf; one on the Left to Mercury, another on the Right to the warlike Maid; the Altar of Jove stood in the Middle. A Cow is sacrificed to Minerva, a Calf to winged-footed Hermes, and a Bull to the Sovereign of the Gods: Then seiz'd Andromeda, the Prize of his victorious Fight, nor once demanded the Dowry Kingdom. Hymen and Love walk before them shaking their Torches, and the Altars burn with rich Perfumes: Garlands hang from the Roofs; Flagellets, and Harps, and Flutes, and Songs, the happy Tokens of a joyful Mind, join in an agreeable Concert.

The Doors are thrown wide open, and the gilded Halls displayed : The Nobles of Cepheus's Court sit down to a Feast furnished out by the King in the richest Manner. When the Banquet was ended, and their Minds chear'd with the Gifts of generous Bacchus, the Grandson of Abas began to enquire concerning the Customs and Manners of the Country. When Lyncides had satisfied him in every Thing he had to ask on this Subject, he with like Freedom address'd the gallant Hero, and begg'd to know by what bold Adventure or successful Arts he had cut off the Head of Medusa, bristling with Snakes. The Grandson of Abas tells him, that beneath the cold Atlas there lies a Vale, fenced on all Sides with solid Walls, the Entrance to which was guarded by the two Sisters, Daughters of Phorcys, who had but one Eye between them, which they us'd by Turns ; that he cunningly slipping in his Hand, while it was given from the one to the other, carried it off, and then through dark Recesses, and devious Wilds, and Rocks, covered with trackless Woods, arrived at the Habitations of the Gorgons, and saw in all the Plains and Ways as he pass'd, Images of Men and wild Beasts converted into Stone from the Sight of Medusa ; but that he, by the Reflection of the polish'd Shield which he bore in his left Hand, beheld 782. Ære percussio.] This Looking-Glass or reflecting Shield our Hero is said to have received of Minerva, and by virtue of it could see without being seen. Lucian tells us, that Minerva herself held this reflecting Shield before him, and by that Means gave him the Opportunity of seeing Medusa ; that afterwards Perseus seizing her by the Hair with his left Hand, and keeping his Eye fix'd upon the Image in the Shield, took his Faulchion in his right, and cut off her Head, and then flew off before the other Sisters knew any thing of it.

unhurt the Figure of Medusa; and while Sleep held both her and her Snakes entranc'd, sever'd her Head from her Neck: the Blood that flow'd from the Wound, gave Birth to winged Pegasus and his Brother. To these he added all the other Dangers he had encountered in a long Course of wandering; what Seas, and what Lands he had seen under him from on high, and what Stars he had touch'd in tossing his Wings: Yet he ended sooner than was expected: upon which one of the Nobles again begg'd to know, why only one of the Sisters had Snakes alternately mix'd with her Hair. Stranger, replied Perseus, since you require a History worthy to be related to this noble Assembly, hear what you want to know: She was greatly surpassing in Beauty, and had rais'd Hope in the Breast of a Crowd of envious Lovers; nor was any Part of her more celebrated than her comely Locks; for I have met with those who had seen her. 'Tis said, that the Sovereign of the Sea ravish'd her in the Temple of Minerva. The Daughter of Jove turn'd away her Eyes, and covered her Face with her Shield; and that this daring Impiety might not escape unpunished, changed the Gorgon's Head into hideous Snakes. And now too the same Goddess, to strike the greater terror into her Enemies, bears upon her Breast the hissing Snakes of the Gorgon.

I. AND whilst the Hero Perseus, in the Midst of Cepheus's Assembly, recounts these Things, the Royal Courts are fill'd with a raging Multitude; nor is the Clamour such as proclaims a nuptial Feast, but such as denounces dreadful War: and you might compare the Entertainment, thus converted into sudden Disorder, to the Sea, which, when smooth, an impetuous Storm of Winds exasperates by the Commotion of the Waves. Phineus the Chief amongst them, and rash Contriver of the Insurrection, brandishing an ashen, brazen-pointed Spear; Behold, says he, behold, I am here, the Revenger of my Wife ravish'd from me: Neither your Wings, nor Jupiter under the deceitful Form of Gold, shall rescue thee from me. Cepheus cries out to him, as he is attempting to dart his Lance; "What are you

[Dumque ea Cephenum.] Phineus, Brother to Cepheus the Father of Andromeda, jealous because his Rival had carried off his Mistress and Niece, resolves to disturb the Solemnity of the Nuptials. He therefore assembles his Friends, breaks into the Hall where the Feast was kept, and spreads Terror and Slaughter on all Sides: Perseus and his Companions after a hard struggle get the better, and to do the more Honour to his Victory, it was given out, that Medusa's Head had converted Phineus and his followers into Statues. A bold Metaphor to express that the Valour of that Prince, who had vanquish'd the Gorgons, struck so great a Terror into the Enemy, that they durst not face him, but contented themselves with laying Ambushes for him at a Distance. Ovid, who never enters upon a Subject without exhausting it, describes the Combat of Phineus against Perseus with such particular Circumstances, as would make the Reader imagine he had been an Eye-witness of all that passed.

The Spear however, not thrown in vain, stuck in the Forehead of Rhætus, who, after he had fallen, and that the Lance was extracted from the Skull, he spurned, and with his Blood besmeared the Tables that stood near. But then the wild Rabble, inflam'd with ungovernable Rage, jointly hurl their Weapons; and there are some who cry out, that Cepheus with his Son-in-Law ought to perish. But Cepheus was gone out from the Entrance of the Palace, calling Right and Faith, and the Gods of Hospitality to Witness, that this Tumult was raised in spite of all his Endeavours to suppress it. The warlike Pallas interposes, and with her Shield protects her Brother, and inspires him with Fortitude. There was an Indian, one Athis, (whom Limnate, sprung from the River Ganges, is supposed to have brought forth beneath these transparent Streams) eminent for his Beauty, which he set off by the Richness of his Habit, and as yet but sixteen Years of Age; dressed in a purple Tunick border'd with a golden Fringe; a golden Collar grac'd his Neck, and a curved Bodkin his Hair imbued with Myrrh. He had indeed been instructed to throw the Lance, and hit Things though very distant; but he was yet more expert in drawing the Bow. Perseus, just as he was bending with his Hand the pliant Extremities of the yielding Horn, struck him with a Brand which

When Assyrian Lycabas saw him tossing his shatter'd Face in Blood, being united to him in the strictest Friendship, his Companion, and no Dissembler of the real Affection he bore him, after bemoaning Athis breathing out his Life under a cruel Wound, he snatches the Bow which he had bent, and said ; Let the Contest be now with me ; you shall not long rejoice in the Youth's untimely Fate, whence more Envy than Honour accrues. Scarce had he ended, when the piercing Arrow sprang whizzing from the String, and tho' avoided, yet hung in the Plaits of his Robe. The missive Steel stood fix'd obliquely in his Groin, a mortal Part; whom when Bactrian Halcyoneus, the Author of the Wound, saw breathing out in Sobs his Soul, and rolling his convulsive Eyes, he taunting said, Take this only Spot of so many Acres formerly thine, and left his bloodless Carcass. The Great grandson of Abas, impatient to avenge his Friend, whirls against him the Spear drawn from the warm Wound, which entering by the Ridge of his Nose, pierc'd his Neck, and stuck out from either Side: And Fortune directing his Hand, he kill'd Clytius and Clanis, born of the same Mother, but falling by different Wounds; for an Ashen Spear, pois'd by a strong Arm, transfixes both the

by a false Prognostick; and Thoactes the King's 'Squire, and Agyrtes infamous for killing his Father.

Great Havock was now made, and yet more still remain'd to be done, for all join in an Endeavour to oppress one. The conspiring Troops fight on every Side in a Cause that attack'd Merit and Faith. The Father-in law pious in vain, the new Bride and her Mother favour our Hero, and fill the Halls with doleful Shrieks. But the rattling of Armour, and the Groans of those who fell in Fight prevail. Bellona too stains the polluted Household Gods with much Blood, and kindles renew'd Fights. Phineus, and a thousand the Followers of Phineus, sur-having thus secured his Back, faces the adverse Troops, and withstands their

on the right. As a Tyger push'd on by Hunger, when she hears the Lowings of two Herds in different Vallies, knows not on which Side to rush out, and is eager to prey on both ; so Perseus doubtful whether to charge on the right or left, repulses Molpeus by a Wound in the Leg, and is satisfied with his Flight : for Ethemon gives him no Time to pursue, but attacks him fiercely, and aiming a Blow full on his Neck, broke his Sword wielded with incautious Strength against the Pillar, which immediately flew in Splinters, and the Point rebounding, stuck in it's Master's Throat. But as that Wound was too slight to effect his Death, Perseus stabs him with his Cyllenian Faulchion, trembling, and in vain extending his feeble Arms for Mercy. But the Hero, when he saw his Valour like to be overpowered by the Multitude of his Enemies, Since you yourselves, says he, force me to it, I will seek Assistance even from an Enemy ; avert your Sight whatever Friends are present, and he produc'd the Gorgon's Head. Seek another, said Thescelus, whom thy Prodigies may move, and as he prepared to dart the fatal Weapon, stuck in that Posture a Marble Statue. Ampyx, who stood next him, heaves his Sword at the Breast of Lyncidas full of a daring Spirit, but as he thus presses on, his right Hand became stiff, nor could be moved to one Side or another. But Nileus, who falsely boasted that he was the Son of seven-mouth'd Nile, and who had inlaid in his Shield its seven Streams, partly in Silver, and partly in Gold: behold, says he, Perseus, the Origin of my Race, and carry to the silent Shades of Death this mighty Consolation, that you fell by the Hands of so great a Man. The last Part of his Speech was suppress'd in the Middle of the Sound, and, you would imagine, that his open Mouth aim'd to speak, but that it is not passable for Words. Eryx chides them in an insulting Tone: You are benumb'd, says he, by the Cowardice of your Minds, not by any Power of the Gorgon: rush on with me, and level with the Ground a Youth who deals in magick Arms. He was going to rush on, when his Feet stuck to the Earth, and he stood an immoveable Rock, and armed Statue. These all underwent the Fate they deserved; but there was one Aconteus a Soldier of Perseus, in whose Cause while he fights, looking by Chance at the Gorgon's Head, he was suddenly converted into a Stone. Astyages, thinking him still alive, strikes him with his long Sword: the Sword rung with a shrill Tinkling. While Astyages wonders, he took on the same Nature, and the Look of one admiring continues in his Marble Face.

It were tedious to rehearse the Names of Men from among the Vulgar. Two hundred Bodies yet remained for the Fight; two hundred Bodies became stiff upon seeing the Gorgon.

Phineus at last repents of the unjust War : but what can he do ? He sees Statues of different Forms, and knows them to be his own Men, and demands Help, calling each of them by Name ; nor yet persuaded of the Truth, touches the Bodies that stood next him : they were all Marble. He turns away his Eyes, and with suppliant Hands, and Arms extended in Acknowledgment of his Fault : You have conquer'd Perseus, remove the cruel Monster ; and hence with that Stone-making Face of Medusa whatever she be ; hence with it I intreat you. Not Hatred, nor the Desire of a Kingdom urg'd me to War : I took up Arms for my Wife. You had the juster Claim to her in Point of Merit, I in Point of Time. I am not however sorry to yield. Grant me, greatest of Heroes, only my Life, all else I resign to you. As he thus spoke, for he durst not turn his Looks towards him whom in suppliant Words he address'd, What is in my Power to grant, cowardly Phineus, (return'd Perseus) and what indeed is a great Gift to an abject Wretch like thee, fear not, I will grant it ; no vengeful Sword shall hurt you. Nay, I will even give a Monument to continue thro' Ages, you shall be ever beheld in the House of my Father-in-law, that my Wife may solace herself with the Image of her betroth'd Spouse. He said, and transferr'd the Daughter of Phorcis to that Side, towards which Phineus had turn'd himself with a trembling Countenance.

Then too, as he was endeavouring to turn away his Eyes, his Neck grew stiff, and the Moisture of his Eyes hardened into Stone; but his timorous Look, suppliant Posture, extended Arms, and guilty Countenance, appeared still in the statue.

II. Perseus, thus victorious, enters with his Wife the Walls of his native City; and as the Avenger and Protector of his innocent Mother attacks Prætus. For Prætus, having expelled his Brother by Force of Arms, had taken Possession of the Citadel of Argos. But neither by the Help of Arms, nor the Citadel which he had unjustly seized, was he able to prevail against the stern Eyes of the Snake-bearing Monster.

III. 255. Doctas sic est affata Sorores.] There is no Part of Mythology more controverted than what regards the Muses. Some pretend that they were nine in Number, others confine them to three; but the most commonly received Notion is, that they were nine in Number, the Daughters of Jupiter and Mnemosyne. This is the Tradition that Ovid follows, whom we afterwards find in v. 268, calling them Mnemonidas. As ancient Authors and Monuments confound often the Names of the Muses, and the Symbols by which they are represented, it is worth while to observe here the most common Manner of describing them. Clio, the first of the Muses, who derives her Name from Glory or Renown, holds in one Hand a Guitar, and in the other a Plectrum. She was supposed to have invented the Guitar. Euterpe, so call'd because she delights, has a Mask in her Left Hand, and a Club in her Right. She was the Inventress of Tragedy, which is implied in the Mask she bears. She holds commonly Hercules's Club, probably because Tragedy is a Representation of the Manners of Heroes, among whom Hercules was the most illustrious. Thalia, or the flourishing, who invented Comedy, holds also a Mask in her Right Hand. Medals represent her leaning upon a Pillar. Melpomene, or the alluring, is distinguished by the Barbiton or Harp. Terpsichore, or the diverting, is represented with a Flute in her Hand, both on Medals, and other Monuments. Erato, or the amiable, is not easily distinguish'd. Polyhymnia, so call'd from singing many Hymns, and not from the Strength of her Memory, as some Authors pretend, is painted with a Harp, as the Inven-tress of Harmony. Urania, the heavenly, invented Astronomy, and has in her Hand a Globe. Calliope, so call'd from the Sweetness of her Voice, holds a Volume in her Hand as the Inventress of the heroick Poem. See the Waters produc'd by the Stroke of a Horse's Hoof, looks round upon the Groves of the ancient Wood, and the Caves, and the Grass distinguished by innumerable Flowers, and praises the Happiness of the Muses, both in their Studies and Retreats: Upon which, one of the Sisters thus replies.

O Tritonia, who, had not your Valour and native Greatness inclined you to nobler Deeds, would undoubtedly have made one of our Company; you say right, and justly approve our Profession and Retreats; and, if we are but safe, our Lot is happy. But (so daring is Villainy) every Thing alarms Virgin Minds, and fierce Pyreneus is still before our Eyes; nor am I yet wholly recovered from the Fright. That bold Usurper had seiz'd, with Thracian Arms, Daulis and Phocis, where he unjustly held the Government. We were making for the Temple of Parnassus; he saw us on our Way, and adoring us by a fallacious Worship, Muses, said he, (for he knew us) stop; nor scruple to shun, under my Roof, the scorching Sun, and heavy Rain, (for it rain'd apace;) the Gods have often before now entered a humble Cottage. Moved by his kind Invitation, and the pouring Rains, we accept of his Offer and enter his Hall. The Rain was over, and the South Wind being now mastered by the North, the black Clouds were dispersed, and had left the Heavens serene: We then wanted to be gone. But Pyreneus shuts his Palace, and prepares to offer Violence, which we avoid by assuming Wings. He stood upon upon the highest Tower of the Palace, as if designing to follow us, and said ; wherever there is a Way for you, the same is open to me, and madly throws himself from the Summit of the Palace ; and falling upon his Face, his Bones are dash'd in Pieces, and dying, he beats the Ground stain'd with his guilty Blood.

V. The Muse yet spoke, when a Noise of Wings was heard in the Air, and a Voice seem'd to salute them from the high Boughs. The Daughter of Jove looks up, and demands whence Tongues that spoke so distinctly were heard, for it seem'd to her to be a human Voice. Yet it was only a Bird's, and Magpyes nine in Number, skilful to repeat whatever they hear, were perch'd upon the Boughs, bemoaning their Fate. When the Muse Urania thus address'd the wondering Goddess. It is but of late that these, overcome in a Dispute with us, have increas'd the Number of the Birds. Pierus, rich in Lands of Pella, begot them, Evippe of Pæonia was their Mother. She compleating nine Labours nine Times invok'd powerful Lucina. The foolish Sisters, proud of their Number, travers'd all Æmonia, and a great Part of Greece, to come hither, and challenge us in such Words as these. Cease imposing upon the ignorant Vulgar by a vain Pretence to Harmony : But if indeed you have any Confidence of your Art, contend with us.

ye Thespian Goddesses. We are alike in Number, and will not be out-done in Voice or Skill. Do you, if overcome, yield to us Medusa's Well, and Bæotian Aganippe; or we, if vanquished, will resign the Æmathian Plains, as far as the snowy Pæonians: Let the Nymphs decide the Contest. It was indeed shameful to engage, but it appeared yet more shameful to yield. The Nymphs chosen to decide swear by the River, and sit upon Seats cut out of the living Stone. Then, without casting Lots, she of the Daughters of Pierus, who had first declared for the Contest, sings the Wars of the Gods, and places the Giants in a false Point of Honour, and extenuates the Actions of the great Gods. She tells how Tiphæus, sent from the deep Womb of the Earth, struck Terror into his heavenly Foes; and how they all sought safety in flight, till they arrived in Ægypt, and upon the Borders of the Nile that divides itself into seven Channels. She relates how Earth-born Typhœus came hither also, and that the Gods conceal'd themselves by changing their Shapes. Jupiter, she said, became a Ram; whence Lybian Ammon is now figured with crooked Horns. The Delian God took on the Appearance of a Crow; Bacchus, the Son of Semele, that of a He-Goat. The Sister of Phœbus appears a Cat, Saturnian Juno a Snow-white Cow, and Venus a Fish: Mercury assumes the Wings of an Ibis. Thus far she had join'd her noisy Voice in Concert with the Harp, and then demanded our Song. But perhaps you are not at Lei- sure, nor have Time to attend to our Song. Doubt not, said Pallas, but recite to me in Order your Song ; and then seats herself under a chequer'd Shade. The Muse relates, we gave the Management of the Dispute to one. Calliope rises, and having her Hair ty'd with a Sprig of Ivy tunes with her Thumb the found- ing Strings ; and sings these Lines in Concert with the harmonious Lyre.

VI. Ceres first taught to tear up the Earth with crooked Plow-shares ; she first provided Corn, and wholesome Food for Men ; she first enacted Laws. All good Things are the Gift of Ceres, she is to be the Subject of my Song : Oh ! that my Verse were only worthy of the Goddess, for certainly the Goddess is worthy of Verse.

333. Aonides.] The Muses, so call'd from Aonia, a mountainous Region of Bæotia.

341. Prima Ceres unco.] Natural History is very often convey'd to us under the Veil of Fiction. Ætna is seen often to vomit up Flames. Instead of searching for the Source of this Phenomenon, in the Sulphur and Bi- tumen wherewith the Caverns of this Moun- tain are fill'd, we are told, that the Giant Typhæus, or Enceladus, vanquish'd by the Gods, was buried under it, and that his Struggles to throw off the Load are the Cause of the Eruptions and Earthquakes. One Fa- ble leads to another. It is feign'd, that Pluto fearing lest these violent Shocks might lay open the Foundations of the Earth, and pour in Light upon his Realms, came into Sicily to examine the Condition of the Isle. They add, that after finding all in good Order, he was seen by Venus ; who, piqu'd that the God was insensible of Love, and desirous to have the Lord of an Empire, which made a third Part of the Universe, subject to her, en- gaged her Son Cupid to pierce him with a chosen Arrow ; upon which the God, falling in Love with his Niece Proserpine, carried her off. Most Mythologists look upon this Rape to be only an Allegory, which has an obvious Re- lation to Agriculture. Thus, according to them, the Division which Jupiter makes of the Time that this Goddess was to stay with her Husband and her Mother, means no more, but that the Grain, after having lodg'd six Months in the Earth, appears upon its Surface, grows up, and ripens. And as San- choniathon informs us that Proserpine, Saturn's Daughter, died very young, so the Fable may be allegorized by saying, she was ravished by Pluto, only because the Name of that God among the Phœnicians is Muth, which signifies Death.

The vast Island of Trinacria was hurl'd on the gigantick Limbs of Tiphœus, and bears down under its unwieldy Mass one, who dar'd to aspire at the Empire of Heaven. He indeed struggles, and attempts often to rise; but his Right Hand is borne down by Pelorus, fronting Italy, his Left by Cape Pachynus, and Lilybæum presses down his Legs. Ætna weighs down his Head; under which, extended on his broad Back, he vomits Clouds of Ashes, and Flames issue from his dreadful Mouth. Oft he strives to throw off the ponderous Mass of Earth, and overturn the Cities and mighty Mountains that bear down his Body. Hence the Earth shakes, and the King of the silent Ghosts dreads lest it should open, and the Ground be parted by a wide Chasm, and Light pouring in fright his trembling Ghosts. To prevent this Disaster, the Stygian Tyrant had quitted his dreary Abode, and riding in a Chariot drawn by black Horses, went round, viewing with Attention the Foundations of the Sicilian Isle. But when, after a careful Search, he found all Places firm, and that there was no Ground of Fear; Venus, as she sat on her flowery Hill, chanced to see him thus wandering; and embracing her winged Son; my Cupid, said she, my Arms, my Hands, and my Power, take those Darts with which you conquer all, and wedge thy swift Arrows in the Breast of the God, to whom the last Division of the triple Kingdom fell.

You hold in Bondage the Gods above, nay even Jove himself: The baffled Deities of the Sea, and he too who rules the Deities of the Sea, confess thy Power. Why are the Realms of Tartarus exempted? Why do you not extend the Limits of your Mother's Empire and your own? A third Part of the Universe is now at Stake, and yet how great is our Patience: We are slighted in our native Skies, and the Empire of Love is greatly weakened. Don't you see how Pallas, and the far-darting Goddess defy my Power: The Daughter of Ceres too will be a Virgin unless we prevent it, for she affects the same Hopes. If therefore I have any Interest with you for the promoting of our joint Kingdom, join the Goddess to her Uncle. Venus ended. He opens his Quiver; and singles out one of a thousand Arrows by the Direction of his Mother, but than which there was not another of keener Point, or surer Aim, or more obedient to the Bow. Then bending against his Knee with full Force the yielding Horn, he pierced the Heart of the God with a bearded Arrow.

The Goddess frighted calls with a mournful Voice upon her Mother and her Companions, but oftener upon her Mother; and as she had torn her Garment from the upper Edge, the Flowers she had gather'd fell from her loosen'd Robe, and so much had she of childish Innocence and Simplicity, that this Loss also rais'd the Virgin's Grief. crooked Rocks. Cyane, the brightest of the Sicilian Nymphs, dwelt here in a Lake, to which she gave her Name ; who raising her beauteous Head from the Waves as far as the Navel, knew the God, and said ; thou shalt go no farther, nor can'st thou be the Son-in-Law of Ceres against her Will : The Virgin should have been ask'd of her Mother, not seiz'd by Violence : For, if I may be allow'd to compare small Things with great, Anapis also lov'd me ; yet was I courted, not frightened into Marriage. She said, and stretching out her Arms on both Sides, opposed his Way. The Son of Saturn no longer smothered his Rage, but encouraging his tremendous Steeds, drives his Royal Scepter, whirl'd with a strong Arm, to the Bottom of the Lake : The Earth struck, opened a Passage into Hell, and received the descending Chariot in the widening Gap. But Cyane lamenting the ravished Goddess, and the slighted Privileges of her injur'd Spring, bears about in her silent Mind an inconsolable Wound, and is wholly wasted away in Tears, dissolving into those Waters of which she had so late been the great Guardian Goddess. You might have seen her Members melt to a Fluid ; her pliant Bones bend into various Meanders, and her Nails lay aside their Hardness. The more slender Parts first dissolve away : Her Sea-green Locks, her Fingers, Legs and Feet ; for the Change of those smaller Members is easy to a cold Stream.

After these her Back, Shoulders and Sides, and her swelling Breasts glide away in flowing Currents. In fine, instead of Life-giving Blood, Water now circulates in her varied Veins; and nothing now remains that can fill your Grasp.

VII. Mean time Proserpine is sought by her frightened Mother in every Land and every Sea. Neither Aurora rising with her ruddy Hair, nor the bright Evening Star saw her take any Repose. She with both her Hands lights Pines at flaming Ætna, and restless bears them through the frosty Darkness. Again, when the Approach of Day had extinguished the Stars, she run in Quest of her Daughter from the rising to the setting Sun. Spent with Toil she had contracted a Thirst, nor had any Springs wash'd her Mouth; when, by Chance, she perceived a Cottage covered with Straw, and knock'd at the little Door: An old Woman came out and saw the Goddess; and gave her, as she was asking some Water, a pleasant Drink drawn from parch'd Barley. While she drinks, a Youth of a harden'd look and daring Impudence stood before the Goddess, and laugh'd; and call'd her greedy. She was offended, and part being not yet drank, the Goddess, as he spoke, flung the Liquor mix'd with Barley in his Face. His Countenance is speckled by the Drops, his Arms are shap'd into Legs, a long Tail is moreover added to this Change of Form, and that his Power of doing Mischief may be the less, he is contracted into a diminutive Frame, nor does his Size equal that of a small Lizard.

VIII. It were tedious to relate thro' what Lands and Seas the Goddesses wandered : The World was too little for her in the Search. She returns to Sicily, and in her Progress she views all Places with Care, she came also to Cyane : She, but for her Change of Form, would have discovered all ; but she had neither Mouth nor Tongue to second her Desires, nor was Speech at her Command. Yet she gave manifest Signs, and discovered on the Surface of her Waters Persephone's Girdle well known to her Mother, which had by Chance dropt from her in that place, as she pass'd through the sacred Lake : Which when the Goddess beheld, if then only her Daughter had been ravished from her, she tore her neglected hair, and beat her Breast with repeated Strokes. Nor as yet knows she where she is, but exclaims against all Lands alike ; and calls them ungrateful, and unworthy of her Gifts : Trinacria above the rest, in which she found the Tokens of her loss. For this the Goddess, with vengeful Hand, broke the Ploughs wherewith they turn'd up the Earth ; in her Rage the Ox and Labourer were doom'd to the same Death. She commands the Ground to deny a Return of what was thrown to it, and corrupts the Seed as soon as it is sown. The Fertility of the Soil, fam'd over all the World, is now no more : The Corn, as it springs, shrivels in the Blade : Sometimes it is burnt up by excessive Heats, sometimes drown'd by Inundations of Rain. Inauspicious Stars or noxious Winds destroy the Fields, and greedy Birds devour the Seed as soon as sown. Darnel, Thistles, and unconquerable Weeds choak the rising Crops. Then Arethusa raised her head from the Elean Waves, and flings back her drooping Hairs from her Forehead towards her Ears, and says ; O Mother of the Virgin sought in all Parts of the World, and of Corn cease at length your immense Toils, nor be thus violently offended with a Land faithful to you. Sicily has deserved nothing, and opened against its Will to the Ravisher : Nor am I now a Suppliant for my native Country ; I am but a Stranger here ; Pisa is my Country, and Elis gave me Birth. I inhabit Sicily as a Foreigner, yet is this Isle to me far more grateful than any other Clime. I Arethusa now possess these Springs ; this is my Seat, which do you, most gentle Goddess preserve. Why I am removed from my native Seats, and have cross'd such spacious Seas to reach Ortygia, I will relate at a more seasonable Time, when you shall be eased of your present Cares, and wear an Aspect of more Content. The pervious Earth affords me a Passage, and, conveyed under its lowest Caverns, here lift up my Head, and behold new Constellations of Stars. As therefore lately glided under the Earth, along the Stygian Waves, I there beheld your Proserpine serpene: She look'd dejected, nor was Fear yet banished her Countenance. She is however a Queen, rever'd in the gloomy Realms, and the powerful Wife of the infernal Tyrant. Upon hearing these Words, the Goddess, stupid with Grief, stood motionless like a Statue, and had long the Air of one lost in Amazement.

 But after that her cruel Distraction had vented itself in a Flood of Sorrow, she mounts the Ætherial Air in her Chariot: There with dishevell'd Hair, and her Countenance hid in Clouds, she stands before the Throne of Jove. Jupiter, says she. I come a Suppliant to you in Behalf of my Blood and thine. If you have no Regard for the Mother, at least let the Daughter move the Heart of her Father: Nor value her the less, I pray you, that she is born of me. At length I have found my Daughter so long sought after in vain, if it can be call'd finding her to lose her more certainly: or if you call it finding her to learn where she is. I forgive that he carried her away by Force, let him only restore her; for whatever it may be thought my Daughter deserves, the Daughter of Jupiter ought not to have a Ravisher for her Husband. Jupiter replies: Your Daughter is a common Pledge and Care to both; but if we will distinguish Things by proper Names, this Rape is not an Injury but Love; nor need we be ashamed of our Son-in-Law, let but Ceres give her Consent. Were other Things wanting, yet is it not enough that he is the Brother of Jove. But why do I suppose that any Thing is wanting? nor does he yield to me in Worth; it was by Lot that Hell fell to his Share. But if so great is your Desire to separate them, let Proserpine return to Heaven, yet on this unalterable Condition, if as yet she hath touched no Food; for so it is provided by the irrevocable Decree of Fate.

He said: But Ceres persists in her Resolution to bring away her Daughter; not so the Fates: For the Virgin had broke her Fast, and as she wander'd about in a finely cultivated Garden, had pluck'd a Pomegranate from a bending Tree, and chewed seven Seeds, taken from the pellucid Rind. Ascalaphus alone had seen this, whom formerly Orphnè, fain'd among avernal Maids, brought forth to Acheron within a shady Cave: He saw her, and by a cruel Discovery prevented her Return.

The Queen of gloomy Erebus groan'd, and changed the base Informer to a Bird; and sprinkling his Head with the Waters of black Phlegethon, form'd it anew with Feathers, a crooked Beak, and large Eyes. Thus no longer himself, he is clad in yellow Pinions: His Head becomes larger, his Nails bending inwards are turn'd to Claws, and scarce can he move the Wings that spring from his sluggish Arms. In fine, he becomes a hateful Bird; the Messenger of approaching Grief, the screeching Owl, a direful Omen to Mortals.

IX. But he, by his Discovery and indiscreet Tongue, may seem to have suffered deserved Punishment. But whence, Daughters of Achelous, have you the Feathers and Feet of Birds, when you retain still the Faces of Virgins? Is it because while Proserpine was gathering vernal Flowers, you Sirens were of the Number of her Attendants? And that, after having in vain search'd for her in all Parts of the Earth, to give the Waters also a Proof of your friendly Care, you wish'd to hover over the Waves supported by Wings; and found the Gods propitious, and saw your Limbs clad in golden Pinions? But lest the Sweetness of your Voice form'd to captivate the Ear, and such Harmony of Sound should no more enjoy the Use of a Tongue, your Virgin Beauty and human Voice still remain.

X. But Jupiter, alike favouring his Brother and disconsolate Sister, divides the revolving Year equally betwixt them. For the Goddess, a Divinity now common to both Kingdoms, passes the same Number of Months with her Mother as with her Husband. Upon this both the Mind and Aspect of the Goddess are changed; for her Countenance, which before appeared mournful even to Pluto himself, has now an Air of Joy, like the Sun, who after being hid a while in watery Clouds, disperses the Vapours, and shines in full Splendor. Ceres, now easy because she had recovered her Daughter, enquires of Arethusa the Cause of her wandering, and how she became a sacred Spring. The Waters were silent, when the Goddess rais'd her Head from the smooth Surface; and, with her Hand wiping off the Drops from her green Tresses, thus began to relate the Loves of Alpheus.

I was, said she, formerly an Achaian Nymph ; nor was any one more studious to explore the Forest, or pitch the Toils. But altho' I never affected the Reputation of Beauty, altho' I was rather of a masculine Habit, I yet was accounted fair. But I little regarded the Praises given my Face. I was even simple enough to blush at those personal Charms which others are so fond of, and thought it a Crime to please. Once, I remember, as tir'd with the Chace, I was returning from the Forest of Stymphalus ; the Weather was hot, and through the violent Exercise, appeared now doubly so. Walking on, I found a silent Current gliding in gentle Murmurs, and clear as Crystal to the very Ground. Every Pebble might be distinguished by the Eye, and its Motion so gentle as scarce to be perceived. The hoary Willows and Poplars, nourished by the Stream, furnished a spontaneous Shade along the shelving Banks, I advanced, and first dipt my Feet, then waded to the Ham ; nor content with that, I stript, and threw my thin Garment upon a bending Osier, and plung'd naked into the Waters ; which, while I strike and draw in, winding my Body a thousand Ways, and tossing out my springy Arms, I heard I don't know what murmur under the mid Stream, and frightened get to the Margin of the nearer Bank. Whither dost thou hasten, Arethusa, cried Alpheus, from the Bottom of his Brook ? Whither dost thou hasten said he again in a hollow Tone ?

Then ? I run naked as I was, for my Cloaths were upon the other Bank ; he pushes harder, and is but the more inflam'd ; and as he saw me naked, I appear'd the readier for his Embraces. So I run, so he fiercely pursued ; as Doves are wont with trembling Wings to fly from the Hawk, or as the Hawk is wont to drive thro' the Clouds the trembling Doves. I sustain'd his Chace as far as Orchomenos, and Psophis, and Cyllene, and the Vallies of Mænalus, and cold Erymanthus, and Elis. Nor was he swifter ; but unequal in Strength, I was not able to sustain a longer Flight, he was able to undergo greater Toil. Yet I run through the Plains, and over Mountains covered with Woods, Rocks also and Cliffs, and where there was no Path to direct me.
The Sun shone behind me, I saw a long Shadow advance before my Feet, if it was not perhaps my Fear that saw it ; but I certainly heard the Sound of his Steps close behind me, and his shorter Breath fann'd my parting Hair.
Spent with the Labour of my Flight, help I cried, O Diana, or I am caught ; help a forlorn Nymph who has often carried your Bow, and Quiver stock'd with Arrows. The Goddess was moved, and taking a thick Cloud, threw it round me. The River looks about for me now hid in Darknes, and not knowing where I was, searches round the hollow Cloud ; and twice unable to find me, he came to the Place where the Goddess had conceal'd me, and twice call'd out, O Arethusa. What do you think was then the Condition of my Mind ? the same as is that of the Lamb, when she hears the Wolves howling round the high Folds ; or the Hare when, hid in a Bush, she sees the hostile Mouths of the Dogs, and dares not stir from her Place. Yet does he not depart, for he saw not the Prints of my Feet to reach any farther : He therefore watches the Cloud and the Place. A chilly Sweat spreads upon my Limbs thus besieged, and blue Drops distil from my whole Body, and wherever I move my Feet a Lake flows ; Drops of Dew fall from my Hair. In fine, in less Time than I now acquaint you with my Fate, I was changed into a Fountain. But Alpheus knew the belov'd Waters ; and putting off the human Shape, resumes his fluid Form, that he might mix his Streams with mine : But the Delian Goddess cleaves the Ground. I sinking, run thro' dark Caverns till I arrive at Ortygia, which, dear to me from the Surname of the Goddess, first granted me to review the welcome Day.

XI. Thus far Arethusa. The fertile Goddess yokes two Snakes to her golden Car, and guiding them with a just Rein, is carried along mid Heaven, and cuts the yielding Skies ; then descending, halts at Athens, and resigns her Chariot to Triptolemus, and teaches him to sow the Seed, as well in fallow Fields, as in those which after a long Intermission have been cultivated with Care.

NOTES.

642. Geminos Dea fertilis angues.] As the famous Triptolemus, the Son of Celeus and Nura, was one of those who gave Ceres the best Entertainment when she arrived in Attica, hence they fabled that this Goddess had taught him the Art of Agriculture, and sent him in her Chariot drawn by winged Dragons, to propagate through all the World an Art so necessary to mankind.

The Youth, driving the Chariot over Europe and Asia, turns at last towards the Coasts of Scythia where Lyncus was King, and enters the Royal Palace. Being ask'd whence he came, the Cause of his Journey, his Name and Country ; Athens, says he, is my native City, and Triptolemus my Name : I came neither in a Ship through the Waves, nor travelled over Land, but cut my Way through the yielding Sky. I bring with me the Gifts of Ceres, which scattered over the wide Fields, will give rich Harvests, and pleasant Food. The Barbarian envied him ; and that he himself might be esteemed the Author of so great a Good, receives him hospitably, and when Sleep had seal'd his Eyes, attempts his Breast with his Sword ; but just as he aim'd the piercing Stroke, Ceres transform'd him to a Lynx, and ordered the Athenian Youth again to drive her Dragons through the Air.

XII. The chosen Muse had here ended her learned Song. The Nymphs una-yourselves obnoxious by a presumptuous Contest, but add also Outrages to your Crime, and by fresh Insults provoke our Indignation, we will proceed to Ven-

They see each other's Mouths shoot out in horny Beaks, and a new Race of Birds added to the Woods. And when they thought to beat their Breasts, rais'd by the Motion of their Arms, they hang in the Air a Sisterhood of Magpies, the Scandal of the Groves. Yet still, though chang'd to Birds, they retain their prattling Humour, full of noisy Clamour and incessant Chattering.

I. MINERVA had all this while attended to these Recitals, and approved the Song of the Muses, and their just Resentment. Then thus reflects: "It is not enough that we commend, let us also be commended, nor suffer our Divinity to be insulted with Impunity." Then bends her Mind on the Fate of Mæonian Arachne, whom she had heard refused to yield to her in the Praises of the Wool-working Art. She was renown'd neither for her Family nor Place of Birth, but for her Art alone. Idmon of Colophon, who tinged the spungy Wool with Phocæan Purple, was her Father: her

N O T E S.

This Book begins with the Fable of Minerva and Arachne, which the Poet has connected in a very easy natural Manner with Relation to the Muses. That Goddess, from hearing the Story of their Revenge, is led to reflect on her own Wrongs, and the Boasts of Arachne, who pretended to rival her in the Wool-working Art. This Arachne was of Lydia, the Daughter of Idmon, a Dyer: her Mother too was of mean Birth, and had train'd her up to working Wool, in which she acquir'd the Fame of excelling all her Contemporaries. But not satisfy'd with that, she would pretend to equal even Minerva herself. The Goddess, provok'd at this Insolence, comes to her in the Disguise of an old Woman to dissuade her from giving Way to so ridiculous a Vanity, but finding her still persist, she accepts the Challenge, and each prepares for the Trial. All this is no more than an ingenious Fiction to describe the great Expertness of Arachne at working in Wool and Silk. Pliny tells us, that she was the first who found out the Art of spinning, and weaving Cloths, an Invention which is attributed also to Minerva.

1. Tritonia.] Pallas, so call'd from Triton a River of Bœotia.

5. Mæoniæ.] Lydiæ: either from the River Mæon, or a King of the same Name.

8. Colophonius Idmon] Colophon was a City of Lydia, famous for an Oracle of Apollo.

9. Murice.] Murex: properly a Fish whose Blood serv'd for making the finest Purple. Hence the Word is often used by the Poets for the Colour itself. Phocæa was a City of Æolia, famous for producing the best Purples.

Mother was dead: but she too was from amongst the Vulgar, and of the same Rank with her Husband. Yet she, though but meanly born, and inhabiting the little Village of Hypæpæ, had by her Ingenuity acquir'd a memorable Name thro' all the Cities of Lydia. Oft did the Nymphs quit the Vineyards of Tymolus, to admire the Niceness of her Art, and the Naiads of Pactolus forsook their Streams. Nor were they delighted only to view her Work when finished; but then too when she wrought, so much Grace there was in her Manner. For whether she roll'd up the shapeless Wool into its first Balls, or unravelled it with her Fingers, and by repeated Endeavours softened the Fleeces equalling the Clouds in variously stretching Tracts, or turn'd the smooth Spindle with her nimble Thumb, or flowered with her Needle, you might perceive that she had been instructed by Pallas: which yet she denies, and disdaining so great a Mistress: Let her, says she, come to a Trial with me; there is nothing I will not submit to if overcome. Pallas puts on the Appearance of an old Woman, and adds false grey Hairs to her Temples, and supports her tottering Limbs with a Staff. Then thus began to speak: Old Age is not

"with humble Voice ask Pardon for your rash Presumption, the Goddess will "forgive at your Submission." The Nymph beholds her with stern Eyes, and leaves the Threads she had begun : when scarce restraining her Hand, and with a Countenance that spoke her Indignation, she in these Words reply'd to Pallas in Disguise : "You come here void of Understanding, and doating under the Weight Age, exhibited Pallas. The Nymphs and Mygdonian Matrons adore the God-des. The Virgin alone is not daunted : yet she blush'd, and a sudden Redness mark'd her reluctant Cheeks ; but in a Moment vanish'd again. As the Air

The Web is tied round the Beam; the Slay separates the Threads: The Wool is inserted between by sliding Shuttles, which their Fingers drive along; and when thus drawn within the Warp, the Teeth, cut in the moving Slay, strike. Both hasten on the Work; and with Mantles buttoned to their Breasts, move their pliant Arms; their Keeness preventing all Sense of Fatigue. The Purple dy'd in Tyrian Kettles is there woven, and fine Shades of small Difference; just as the Rainbow is wont to display a mighty Arch along the Heavens, when the Rays of the Sun are reflected by the small Drops of Rain, where thro' a thousand different Colours shine, yet the Transition from one to another eludes the most prying Eye; so insensibly do the touching Colours blend, and yet the extreme Parts differ. Here too the pliant Gold is interwoven with their Threads, and ancient Fables are represented on their Webs.

70. Cecropia Pallas, &c.] This History of the Contest between Pallas and Arachne gives Ovid Room to introduce several other Fables, which he feigns were represented in their Pieces of Tapestry. The most considerable is that of the Quarrel between Neptune and Minerva, about giving a Name to the City Athens. The twelve great Gods were chosen Umpires of the Difference; and agreed, that which-ever produc'd a Thing of most Use to the City, should have the Naming of it. Neptune, by a Stroke of his Trident, made a Horse spring from the Earth; Minerva produc'd an Olive Tree, which procur'd her the Victory.

with august Gravity on lofty Thrones. Each God is distinguished by his proper Likeness. An Air of Majesty proclaims Jupiter the Monarch of the Universe. She makes the God of the Sea too to stand there, and strike the rugged Rock with his long Trident, and a Horse to leap forth from the Opening in the Middle of the Rock; by which Pledge of his Favour, he claims giving the Name to the City. But to herself she gives a Shield, and a sharp-pointed Spear; a Helmet adorns her Head, and her Breast is defended by the Ægis. She also represents the Earth, when struck by her Spear, producing a pale Olive shoot loaded with Berries, and the Gods wondering at the Prodigy. Victory crowns her Labour. But that the Rival of her Praise may learn from Examples what Reward she may expect for her daring Challenge, she adds at the four Corners four Contests, lively in the Colouring, and distinctly mark'd by little Images. One Corner has Thracian Rhodope and Hæmus; once human Bodies, but now transform'd to Mountains; who assum'd to themselves the Titles of the Sovereign Gods. Another Part represents the mournful Fate of the Pygmæan Mother. Juno, victorious in a Dispute with her, commanded her to become a Crane, and make War on her own People.

NOTES.

90. Altera Pygmææ.] The next Story is that of the Transformation of the Pygmæan Queen. According to Ælian her Name was Gerane; others call her Pygas. She was worshipped by her People as a Goddess; which rais'd her to that Height of Pride, that she contemn'd the other Deities, especially Juno and Diana, whose Indignation she provok'd so far, that they changed her to a Crane; the implacable Enemy of the Pygmies. As to the Pygmies themselves, they were, according to fabulous Tradition, a Species of Dwarfs inhabiting the mountainous Parts of India, not exceeding a Cubit in Height. The bare Name of Gerane, the Greek Word for a Crane, which she bore according to Ælian, gave rise to the Fable of her being transformed into that Fowl.

She described also Antigone, who dar'd to vie for Beauty with the Consort of mighty Jove. Nor did Ilium or her Sire Laomedon avail her, but, transform'd to a noisy Stork, she cuts the Air with her whitened Pinions. The Corner, which now alone remains, represents childless Cinyras; he clasping the Steps of the Temple, the Bodies of his own Daughters, and stretch'd upon the Stone, seems to weep. She edges round the Work with Wreaths of peaceful Olive; this was the Border of the Piece, which she finished with her own Tree.

The Mæonian Nymph delineates Europe seduc'd by Jupiter under the Figure of a Bull: You would have taken the Bull and the Waves to be real. She seem'd to

NOTES.

93. Pingit & Antigonem.] Antigone was the Daughter of Laomedon, King of Troy, and remarkable for her fine flowing Hair, which she was so vain of, as to boast that she resembled Juno. The Goddess, offended at her Presumption, changed her Hair into Snakes. The Gods afterwards in Compassion transform'd her into a Stork.

98. Cinyran orbem.] Cinyras was a King of the Assyrians, who had several Daughters remarkable for their Beauty. They growing insolent upon it, and pretending to surpass even Juno herself; provok'd the Goddess so far, that she transform'd them into the Steps of a Temple; and chang'd the Father too to a Stone, as he was embracing these Steps; all that now remained of his Daughters.

103. Mæonis elusam designat imagine tauri Europen.] Arachne, on her Side, trac'd on her Web the Amours and Metamorphoses of the Gods. As there is nothing new or particular in them, we shall satisfy ourselves with explaining them by one general Remark; which may serve also to unravel a thousand other Fictions of the like Nature.

In the first Ages, Men, and even Kings themselves, were very rude and unpolish'd. The Want of Education, and still more of a consistent System of moral Principles, rendered them equally gross in their Manners, and savage in their Dispositions. If they demanded a Princess in Marriage, and were refus'd; the Custom was, to raise an Army and carry her off by Force. The military Engines, or Ships, were distinguished by some Figures according to the Fancy of the Master: These were either Animals or Birds, or some Monster of fantastick Form. This Observation is from hence rendered credible; that we still meet with these Representations upon ancient Monuments, Medals and Coins. The Poets, who describ'd these Expeditions, instead of saying that such a Prince carried off by Force a Princess whom he had fallen in Love with, feign'd that he transform'd himself to a Bull, a Lyon or an Eagle. If to this we add, that these Kings often bore the Name of Jupiter, Apollo or Neptune; and that the Priests of these Gods succeeded frequently in their Love Adventures, by assuming the Name of the Deities whom they served; we shall be at no Loss to understand what the Poets mean by these Metamorphoses of the Gods, and ascribing to them so many different Children. There is another Conjecture too offered to unravel these Changes. They tell us, that the Figures of different Animals were grav'd upon ancient Coins; and the Money thus stamp'd being us'd by Lovers to seduce their Mistresses, gave Rise to the Fictions of their assuming these different Figures.

look back to the Land she had just left, and call out to her Companions: and to draw up her trembling Feet, as if afraid to touch the rising Waves. She drew also Asterie struggling with an Eagle that had seiz'd her, and Leda supine under the snowy Pinions of a Swan. She added too, how Jupiter disguised under the Form of a Satyr, fill'd the fair Antiope with a twin Offspring: How, as Amphitryon, he enjoyed Alcmena; how changed into a Shower of Gold, Danae; and how the Daughter of Asopus felt him in a lambent Flame. To Mnemosyne he appeared a Shepherd, and to Deois a speckled Snake. She represented also Neptune transform'd to a Bull, in his Adventure with the Daughter of Æolus: How, in the Form of Enipeus, he begot the Aloïdæ, and, appearing a Ram, deceived Theophane. Ceres, the bountiful Mother of Corn, conspicuous for her golden Locks, try'd your Vigour in a Steed; and the Snake-hair'd Mother of the wing'd Horse, in a Bird; and Melantho, in the Form of a Dolphin.

To all these she gave their true Feathers and Likeness, and added too the real Appearance of the Places where they happened. There Phœbus roves like a Country Swain: One while he appears with the Wings of a Hawk, again with a Lyon's Skin; and, as a Shepherd, deceives Iffe, the Daughter of Macareus. There too you might see how Bacchus, imag'd like the clust'ring Grape, deceived Erigone; and how Saturn, in the Form of a Horse, begot double-shap'd Chiron.

The extreme Parts of the Web, edged round with a fine Border, are composed of Flowers interwoven with Twists of Ivy.

III. Not Pallas nor Envy itself could blame that Work; the yellow-hair'd Goddesses grieved at her Success, and tore the Web, on which were wrought the Crimes of the Gods; and as she held in her hand a Shuttle from Mount Cytorum, she three or four Times struck the Forehead of Idmonian Arachne. The unhappy Maid could not bear it; but being of a high Spirit, ty'd up her Throat in a Halter. Pallas pitying her, bore her up as she hung, and thus said: "Live, vile Wretch, yet still hang; and, that you may ever live in Suspence, I doom the same Law of Punishment to all your Race and latest Posterity." Then going off, she sprinkles her with the Juice of an Hecateian Herb; and immediately her Hair touch'd by the poisonous Drug fell off; and with them her Nose and Ears. The Head too becomes very little to her greatly lessened in her whole Body. Her slender Fingers cleave to her Sides for Legs. All the rest of her

129. Non illud Pallas.] Ovid, after this elegant Description of their several Pieces of Workmanship, proceeds to inform us of the hard Fate of Arachne. Pallas appears in no very advantageous Light. The Work is faultless: Even Envy itself can find nothing to blame; and the Goddess acts not so much from a Principle of Equity and Justice, as an Impatience to see herself rival'd. The Truth is, Emulation and Revenge often prevail among our Poet's Gods, which is not so much the Fault of Ovid as of the Times; for all the Poets, both Greek and Latin without Exception, agree in representing the Gods with a Mixture of human Frailties.

136. Vive quidem, pende tamen.] Pliny tells us, in the History which he gives of Arachne, that she hang'd herself; but mentions not the Reason of her Despair. It is evident by that however, that she had some secret Cause of Discontent.

The Conformity of her Name and Profession with that of the Spider, and above all the Resemblance of the Hebrew Word Arach which signifies to spin, and which the Scripture sometimes uses in speaking of Spiders and their Webs, gave Rise to this Fable.

139. Hecateidos herbæ.] Aconite or Wolfsbane, from Hecate: The same who, according to Diodorus, was the Mother of Medea. She is said to be the first who sought after, and taught the Use of, poisonous Herbs.

IV. All Lydia is in an Uproar: The Noise of the Fact spreads through the Towns of Phrygia, and fills the wide World with Discourse. Niobe had known her, before her Marriage, when yet a Virgin she inhabited Mæonia and Sipilus; yet was she not warned by the Punishment of her Country-woman Arachne, to yield to the heavenly Gods, and use less presumptuous Words. Many things conspired to augment her Pride. But indeed neither her Husband's Fame, their Descent, nor the Sovereignty of a mighty Kingdom pleased her so much (altho' all these too had their Weight) as her own Progeny: and Niobe might have been call'd the happiest of Mothers, if she had not seem'd so to herself. For Manto, the Daughter of Tiresias, a Prophetess, urg'd by a divine Impulse, had proclaim'd through the Streets: "Haste all ye Theban Dames, and offer pious Incense with "Prayers to Latona, and the two Children of Latona, and bind your Hair with "Laurel; the Goddess commands it by my Mouth." Obedience is paid; and all the Theban Matrons adorn their Temples with Leaves of Laurel as commanded, and offer Incense, accompany'd with humble Prayers, in the sacred Flames. When

Lo Niobe comes, furrounded with a Crowd of Attendants, shining with Gold embroidered in her Phrygian Robes, and beautiful as far as Anger would allow: When tossing her Hair that flow'd down from her graceful Head on either Shoulder, she stood still; and with a haughty Air casting around her proud Eyes;

“ What Madness! says she, to prefer celestial Deities, known only by Report to those whom you have seen? Or why is Latona worshipped at the Altars, and no Incense burnt in honour of my Godhead? Tantalus is my Sire; to whom alone it was granted to sit at the Table of the Gods: I have for my Mother a Sister of the Pleiads: The mighty Atlas is my Grandfather; whose Shoulders bear up the Axle-Tree of Heaven: Jupiter is my other Grandfather; I boast of him too for my Father-in-Law. The Phrygian Nations tremble at my Power; the Palace of Cadmus owns me for its Sovereign; and the Walls raised by my Husband's Lyre, with the People inhabiting within them, are subject to me and my Spouse. To whatever Part of the Palace I turn my Eyes, immense Treasures are seen: To this is join'd a Face not unworthy of a Goddess. Add moreover seven Daughters and as many Sons, and by and by Sons-in-Law and Daughters-in-Law. Enquire now what Ground I have for my Pride; and dare to prefer to me Latona, the Titaness, born of, I know not what, Cæus; to whom, formerly when in Travel, the spacious Earth refused a small Retreat.

Neither Earth, nor Seas nor Heaven would receive your Goddesses: She was banish'd the Universe, till Delos, pitying the Wanderer, said: You roam about a Stranger on Land, I float in the Waves; and gave her an unstable Place of Rest. She became a Mother to two; this but is the seventh Part of my Issue. I am happy; for who can deny this? And I shall continue happy; for who can doubt of this either? Plenty hath made me secure. I am greater than to be within the Reach of Fortune's Strokes; for should she take many Things from me, she will still leave me much more behind. My many Blessings have now raised me above Fear. Suppose I should be deprived of some Part of this numerous Progeny; yet thus stript, I shall not be reduced to Two, the Number of Latona; by which, how far is she removed from one that is quite childless? Go from the Solemnity, hasten from the Solemnity, and put off your Wreaths of Laurel." They put them off, and left the sacred Rites unfinished; and what alone they durst venture to do, were the Goddesses in gentle Murmurs.

Latona highly enraged at this Abuse, thus address'd her twin Offspring on the top of mount Cynthus. "Behold I your Mother, proud of having given you Birth, who yield to Juno alone of all the heavenly Goddesses, have now my Deity call'd in Question; and, without your Aid, am, for all Ages to come, driven from Altars that have been ever sacred to my Worship. gages Apollo and Diana to destroy all the Chil-dation in Truth, hands down to us, tho’ obscure’d with Fable, a very tragical Piece of ancient History. In the Time of Amphion and Niobe, a heavy Pestilence afflicted Thebes ; and spread its Desolation so far, as to leave not one of the Children of Niobe remaining ; and because contagious Distempers used to be attributed to the immoderate Heat of the Sun hence they gave out that Apollo and Diana had slain them with their Darts : For Eustatius upon Homer observes, that the Poets, who ascribed to those Divinities sudden Deaths, and such as were owing to the Pestilence, always imputed those of the Men to Apollo, and those of the Women to Diana. 390. D

Air, gave his Horse the Reins : As a skilful Pilot, when from blackening Clouds he descries a gathering Storm, flies ; and lets down on every Side the hanging Sails, that not a single Blast of Wind may escape. He gave, I say, the Reins ; but the unerring Dart overtook him, and stuck quivering in his neck behind ; and the bare Point stood out from his Throat. He, as his Posture was prone, tumbled over his Horse's Neck and Main ; and stain'd the Ground with his warm Blood. Unhappy Phædimus, and Tantalus the Heir of his Grandfather's Name, having ended the wonted Exercise of Riding, were gone to try the youthful Sport of Wrestling. And now had they join'd Breast to Breast, struggling in a close Grapple, when an Arrow starting from a full-stretch'd Bow, went through both as they were thus join'd together. They groan'd together ; together laid upon the Ground their Limbs, writhed with Pain ; together as they lay, roll'd for the last Time their languid Eye-Balls ; and together breath'd away their Soul. Alphenor beholds this, and beating his torn Breast, flies to bear up their cold Limbs in his Embraces, but falls in the pious Office ; for the Delian God pierc'd his Midriff with a fatal Arrow, which, when drawn out, tore away part of the Lungs with its jagged Points ; and his Soul and Blood issue through the Wound. But not a single Leg begins, and where the nervous Ham makes a yielding Joint; and while with his Hand he endeavours to draw out the fatal Weapon, another Arrow pierc'd his Throat up to the Wing. The Blood forc'd it out; and, darting on high, springs up, and spouted along; piercing the Air to a great Distance. Ilioneus, the last, had lifted up his unavailing Arms in Prayer, and begg'd for Protection of all the Gods in common (not knowing that all in common were not to be address'd). The God of the Silver Bow was moved when it was now too late, and the Arrow could not be recall'd; yet he fell by a gentle Wound, nor was his Heart deep struck by the Dart.

The Rumour of this Misfortune, the Grief of the People, and the Tears of her Relations, soon made the Mother acquainted with this sudden Destruction, wondering that it could happen; and provok'd at the daring Boldness of the Gods, and that they had such an Extent of Power; For their Father Amphion, sheathing a Dagger in his Breast, had put an End at once to his Life and Grievs. Alas! how much did this Niobe differ from that Niobe, who had so lately driven away the People from the Altars of Latona; and, with an Air of Majesty, walk'd thro' the Middle of the City, envied by her own People; but now to be pity'd even by an Enemy! She falls upon the cold Bodies, and dispenses undistinguish'd her last Kisses amongst all her Sons: Then raising her pale Arms to Heaven; "Feed yourself, she cries, feed yourself, cruel Latona, with my Sorrow; and satiate your Heart with my Anguish: " satiate

"why victorious ? I have still more left in all my Misery, than you can boast "of, who think yourself so happy : Even after so many Funerals I am superstrain'd, was heard, which dealt Terror to all but Niobe alone : She was become bold by her Misfortunes.

The Sisters stood round the Biers of their Brothers, in Habits of Mourning, and with their Hair dishevel'd ; one of whom drawing out the Arrow, sticking in her Bowels, fell dying upon the pale Corpse of her Brother.
Another endeavouring to comfort her dejected Mother, was silent of a sudden, and doubled together by an invisible Wound ; nor shut her Mouth until she had breathed her last. One attempting in vain to fly, sinks down ; another dies upon her Sister ; one seeks by hiding herself to avoid the fatal Stroke ; another you might see stand trembling. Six now were dead of different Wounds, and only the last remain'd ; whom the Mother guarding with her Body and spreading Robe, Grant me, she cries, this one and the youngest ; it is but one of many, and the youngest too that I demand.

300. De multis minimam posco clamavit.] It were an Injury to the Poet, not to observe here the great Judgment and Art he has shown in this whole Description. He begins by the Character of Niobe, as naturally haughty and proud. This is heighten'd by an honourable Marriage, the Dominion over a mighty Kingdom, and a numerous Off-spring. She dresses the Thebans in high Strains of Vanity, and boasts of her Advantages over Latona. All these are on Purpose contriv'd to make her Fall appear the greater ; nor does the Poet himself suffer us, to overlook a Circumstance of so great Weight.

But while she begs, the Virgin, for whom she begs, expires. Childless now, she sat down amongst her dead Sons and Daughters and Husband, harden'd into a Statue by her Woes. Her Hair is not mov'd by the Wind; a mortal Paleness is seen in her Countenance; her Eyes languid and without Motion; nor is there any Appearance of Life in the Image: Her Tongue also stands congeal'd within her Mouth, and hardens to her Palate; and the Blood stagnates in her Veins. Her Neck can no more be bent; her Arms and Feet refuse their usual Offices; her Bowels within her turn to solid Stone. Yet still she weeps; and enclosed by a Hurricane of impetuous Wind, is born through the Air to her native Country. There fix'd on a Mountain's Top, she melts away; and the Marble even yet distils in Tears.

V. Then indeed all, both Men and Women, dread the manifest Anger of the Goddesses, and with more Zeal than ever adore the Majesty of the twin-bearing Goddess; and, as commonly happens, run back from this late Accident, to what pass'd of old. This is Ovid's Reflection after the Death of her Sons. But he still goes on to heighten the Description. Niobe retains her former Pride and Stateliness, nor will yield to the Goddess notwithstanding the late Misfortune: She is therefore made to encounter a new and more alarming Disaster. Her Daughters, who stood round her, and join'd with her in lamenting over the lifeless Bodies of her Sons, all fall before her Eyes; and she is reduc'd at last to beg, in the humblest Strain, one, and the youngest too, out of all that Number; nor is even that Request granted. Is it possible to represent a more compleat Scene of Misery and Woe? What Richness and Luxuriance of Imagination must a Poet possess, who could bring together such a Crowd of the most distressing Circumstances?

inde is but little known, because of the Obscurity of the Men concern'd, but yet it is wonderful : I myself have seen upon the Spot, the Lake and Pool noted for this Prodigy. For my Father now advanced in Years, and impatient of the Fatigues of Travel, had ordered me to drive thence some Choice Oxen, and given me, when I went, a Guide of that Nation ; with whom as I traversed the Pastures, lo an Altar, black with the Ashes of Sacrifice, and surrounded with trembling Reeds, stood in the Middle of a Lake. My Guide stopp'd, and, in a low trembling Voice, said, favour me ; I too, in a like Accent, begg'd for Favour. However I enquir'd if this Altar was sacred to the Naiads or Faunus, or some native God of the Country ; when the Stranger answered in these Words. O young Man, no Deity of the Mountains claims this Altar. She calls it her's, whom formerly royal Juno banish'd the World ; whom wandering Delos, when it swam a light Island, hardly received upon her Entreaties. There Latona leaning upon a Palm-Tree, and the Olive of Pallas, brought forth Twins in spite of her Step-Mother. The newly-deliver'd Goddess is said hence to have fled from Juno, and to have carried in her Bosom the two Deities her Children. And now when the intense Sun scorch'd the Plains in the Regions of Monster-breeding Lycia, the Goddess weary with long Fatigue, and parch'd with the Heat of the Season, had contracted a Thirst; and the hungry Babes had drain'd her suckling Breast. By chance she discover'd a Lake of fine Water in the Bottom of a Valley, where some Swains were gathering the bushy Osier, and Bullrushes, and Sedge natural to Fens. The Titaness approach'd, and bending one Knee to the Earth, that she might with greater Ease drink of the refreshing Stream, the rustick Crowd forbid it; when the Goddess thus address'd them as they withheld her. "Why do you restrain me from Water; The Use of Water is common. Nature hath made neither Sun nor Air, nor the liquid Current proper to any one; I come to partake of her publick Bounty, which yet I humbly beg of you to grant. I came not here to bath my Joints and aching Limbs, but to quench my Thirst. My Mouth, while I speak to you, is without Moisture; my Throat is parch'd, and scarce allows a Passage to my Voice. A Draught of Water will be to me Nectar; I shall own, that together with it, I have received Life from you: You will give me Life in the Water. Let these too move you, who hold out their little Arms in my Bosom;" and by Chance her Children held out their Arms. Whom would not these soft Persuasions of the Goddess have moved to Compassion? Yet they persist in hindering her, notwithstanding her Entreaties; and add Threats unless she departs, nay and Insults too. Nor was this enough: They disturb the Lake itself with their Feet and Hands, and jumping maliciously to and fro, raise the soft Mud from the marshy Bottom. Rage soon dispell'd her Thirst; nor does the Daughter

Daughter of Cœus any longer deign to address in humble Accents these base Wretches, or utter Words below the Majesty of a Goddess ; but lifting up her Hands to Heaven, may ye live for ever, says she, in that Lake. The Wishes of the Goddess come to pass ; they delight to dive under Water, and sometimes to plunge their Bodies wholly in the hollow Pool ; again to raise their Heads, and swim upon the Top of the Lake ; oft to sit upon the Bank, and again leap back into the cold Marsh: Even yet they exercise their wretched Tongues in Strife, and void of Shame, tho' compell'd to live under the Water, they still attempt to scream and quarrel under the Water. Now too their Voice is hoarse, and their bloated Necks swell ; and noisy Brangling dilates their stretching Jaws. Their Backs seem join'd to their Heads without a Neck ; their Spine is green ; their Belly, by far the greatest Part of their Body, white ; and, transform'd to new Frogs, they skip about in the muddy Brook.

VI. When thus one, 'tis uncertain who, had related the Story of the Vengeance taken on the Men of the Lycian Nation ; another remembers the Story of the Satyr, whom, overcome in a Challenge with the Tritonian Reed, the Son of Latona punished for his Presumption. Why, says he, do you tear me from myself ? Alas I repent : Sure, cried he, the Pipe is not of so great Moment ! As he

the trembling Veins beat without any Covering of Skin. You might have number'd his rising Bowels, and the pellucid Fibres on his Breast. The Nymphs and Sylvan Gods, Fauns and his Brother Satyrs, and Olympus too, at that Time renown'd, lamented his Fate ; and every Swain that upon those Mountains fed the Wool-bearing Flocks, and horned Herds. The fertile Earth was moistened, and being moist received the falling Tears, and drunk them up in her lowest Veins ; which when she had joined into one Stream, changed to limpid Water, they sprung from the Ground ; whence running in a steep Channel to the rapid Sea, they bear the Name of Marsya, the clearest River of Phrygia.

VII. From these Relations the Crowd return again to the present Disasters, and mourn Amphion and his Race extinct. The Odium of all is cast upon the Mother : Yet 'tis said, that Pelops alone bewail'd also her Fate ; and that having tore his Garment, and gathered his Robe upon his Breast, he discovered the Ivory in his left Shoulder. This Shoulder, at the Time of his Birth, was of the same Colour with the other, and formed of Flesh. But they tell us, that soon after, the Youth being slain by his Father ; when the Gods rejoin'd his mangled Limbs, all but that which joins the Neck to the upper part of the Arm were found. A Piece

Bed, and the boding Owl hovered over the Palace, and settled on the Roof of the Bed-chamber. With these threatening omens were Tereus and Procne join'd ; with these were they made Parents. Thrace indeed congratulated them, and themselves return'd Thanks to the Gods ; and ordered the Day, on which the Daughter of Pandion was given to their renown'd Prince, and that on which Itys was born, to be kept as Festivals : So far does the true Happiness of Men lie conceal'd from them ! Titan had now led the Times of the revolving Year through five Autumns, when Procne thus in gentle Accents address'd her Spouse. " If I have any Influence with you, either send me to Athens to see my Sister, or let my Sister come hither. You may promise to your Father-in-law, that she shall make a quick Return ; for to me you will be as some propitious Deity, if you procure me a Visit from my Sister." He orders his Ships to be launch'd ; and with Sail and Oars entering the Cecropian Harbour, lands upon the Piræan Shore. When first he was admitted to his Father-in-law, and they had mutually given their Right Hands, with fatal Omen their Discourse begins. He had begun to relate the Cause of his Coming, the Commands of his Wife, and promise his Sister's speedy Return, if sent. Lo Philomela comes, richly adorned in fine Apparel, but far richer in Beauty : Such are we wont to hear the Naiads and Dryads describ'd, when they wander in the Forests and Groves, were they but to appear with the same Ornaments and Dress. As when Fire is put under ripened Ears of Corn, Corn, or the catching Flame spreads among the light Leaves and Hay laid up in stacks ; thus was Tereus inflam'd upon seeing the Virgin. Her Beauty might indeed kindle Love in any Breast : but he is push'd on by an inbred Lust, and in those Regions too the Men are naturally prone to Lewdness : He burns by his own native Desire, and those of his Climate together. Sometimes he is bent upon corrupting the Care of her Attendants, and the Fidelity of her Nurse : sometimes he thinks to solicit her with mighty Presents, and expend his whole Kingdom in the Attempt : Or again, to bear her away by Force, and defend the Rape with open War. And there is nothing so daring that he would not hazard, thus possessed by an unbounded Passion ; nor can his Breast contain the struggling Flames. And now he is impatient of Delays, and returns with eager Mouth to urge the Commands of Procne, and pleads his own Wishes under them. Love made him eloquent ; and, as often as he seem'd to carry his Earnestness too far, pretended that Procne had so enjoin'd him : he added Tears too, as if she had also commanded them. Great Gods !

 What Clouds of thick Darkness blind the human Mind ! Tereus, by the very Attempt of Wickedness, passes for dutiful ; and derives Praise from his crime. What shall we think, that Philomela also joins in the Request ? and, kindly clasping her Arms round her Father's Neck, conjures him by his regard to her Peace, to grant what was utterly to ruin her Peace, that she might go and see her Sister. Tereus surveys her, and feeds before-hand on the hop'd-for Joy. And as he beheld her Kisses, and Arms thrown round her Father's Neck, he receives all as Incentives and Fuel, and the Food of furious Passion; and, as often as she embraces her Father, wishes he had been her Father, nor indeed would that have check'd his Impiety. The Father yields at last to the Desire of his two Daughters; she rejoices, and returns Thanks to her Father; and, ill-fated Nymph, calls that Success which was doom'd to be fatal to both. To Phœbus now but little of his Toil remain'd, and his fiery Steeds beat with their Hoofs the descending Tract of Heaven. A royal Banquet graces the Tables, and Wine is serv'd up in Goblets of Gold. Then all retire to taste the Sweets of Sleep. But the Thracian King, tho' now withdrawn, yet still burns for her; and recalling her Face, and Motions, and Hands, Fancy suggests what he had not seen; and he nourishes his own Fires, restless Care preventing Sleep. It was Day; and Pandion grasping the Right Hand of his Son-in-Law, taking his last Farewel, with Tears recommends his Companion to his Care. I commit, dear Son, this my Daughter to you, since a dutiful Affection compels me to it; (for both have earnestly desir'd it, and you also Tereus seem to desire it) and adjure by your Honour, by your Breast allied to us, and by all the Gods above, that you guard and defend her with the fondness of a Father; and send back to me as soon as possible (for every Delay will appear tedious) this sweet Solace of my anxious old Age.

TRANSLATION,

And you too, Philomela, if you retain any Sense of the Duty you owe to me, return speedily, (it is enough that your Sister is remov'd from me.) These were his Commands ; at the same Time he kiss'd his darling Child, and the gentle Tears fell from him as he spoke to her. He then demanded both their Right Hands, as a Pledge of their Fidelity, and, as he held them, join'd them together ; and desires, that with mindful Mouth, they salute for him his absent Daughter and Grandson ; and was scarce able to pronounce the last Farewel, in a Voice interrupted with Sighs ; and dreaded the Presages of his own Mind. No sooner was Philomela put on board the painted Ship, and the Sea urg'd by the Oar, the Land seeming to recede ; we are victorious he cries : I bear my Wishes along with me. The Barbarian exults, and with Pain forbears the expected Joy ; nor turns his Eyes any where from her. As when the rapacious Bird of Jove has with crooked Talons snatch'd a Hare, and carried her to his lofty Nest ; there is no Escape for the Captive, the Ravisher keeps his Eye constantly upon his Prey. And now the Voyage was ended, and they had gone out from the wearied Ships upon the Shore ; when the King conveys the Daughter of Pandion to a stately Lodge, inclosed by ancient Woods ; and there shuts her up pale and trembling, and dreading every Thing, and now with Tears enquiring after her Sister : and openly avowing his Base-ness, masters, by Force, her, a Virgin, and but one ; while in vain she often calls upon her Father, often her Sister, and above all the mighty Powers of Heaven. She trembles like a timorous Lamb, that, snatch'd wounded from the Mouth of a hoary Wolf, does not yet think itself secure ; or as the Dove when it beholds it's Plumes besmear'd with Gore ; trembles still, and dreads the cruel Talons wherein she had lately stuck. But soon, when Thought return'd, tearing her dishevell'd Hair, and like one plunged in Excess of Grief, beating her Arms and stretching out her Hands : " Cruel Barbarian, (she cries) savage and inhuman Wretch, have neither the strict Commands of a Father utter'd with pious Tears, nor a Regard for my Sister, nor my Virgin Innocence, nor all the Ties of the nuptial Vow been able to move you ? You have confounded all : I am become my Sister's Rival, and you a Husband to us both : Sure I never deserv'd so cruel a Fate. Why, perfidious Wretch, do you not take away also my Life, that no kind of Villainy may be left unperpetrated by you. O had you but done it before the criminal Embrace, my Ghost had then been guiltless and unstain'd. Yet, if the Heavenly Powers see these Things ; if the Majesty of the Gods is not a meer Fiction ; if with me all Things are not come to Ruin ; one Time or other Vengeance will overtake thee. I myself, casting off all Restraint of Shame, will proclaim thy Crimes. If at Liberty, I will come abroad, and publish them among the People ; if kept imprisoned in Woods, I will fill the Woods with my Complaints, and move the conscious Rocks. Let Heaven,

"and every God that inhabits there, hear these my Vows." When by these and such Reproaches she had rous'd the Passion of the furious Tyrant, nor was he less disturb'd by Fear ; urged alike by both, he unsheathes the Sword wherewith he was girt round, and seizing her by the Hair, after forcing her Arms behind her, he compell'd her to submit to Chains. Philomela prepared her Throat for the mortal Blow, and had conceived Hopes of Death upon seeing the Sword. But he having seized her Tongue with Pincers, cut it off with the cruel Sword, as she was raving with Indignation, and calling constantly on the Name of her Father, and struggling hard to speak. The quivering Root still remains, but the Tongue itself is thrown to the Ground, and faintly murmurs as it lies trembling on the stain'd Earth. And as a Snake when wounded writhes and flashes his Tail, it leaps about ; and dying, seeks the Feet of it's Mistress. It is said too, (tho' I dare scarce believe it) that, even after so black a Deed, he frequently indulged his lustful Flame on her mangled Body.

Yet after all this Baseness, he had the Confidence to present himself to Procne, who, when she saw her Husband, enquires immediately after her Sister : but he utters feign'd Groans, and tells an artful Story of her Death. And procures Credit from his Tears. Procne tears from her Shoulder her Robe embroidered with copious Flowers of Gold, and is clad in sable Weeds, and raises in vain sepulchres, and offers Expiations to the fictitious Ghost, and mourns the Fate of her Sister, which known must have inspir'd a Passion very different from Grief.

T R A N S L A T I O N.

The God of Day had compleated the Year by a Progress thro' the twelve Signs of the Zodiac. What can Philomela do? Watchful Keepers prevent her Escape: the Walls of the Lodge are built high of solid Stone: Her speechless Mouth cannot make no Discovery of the Crime. But urgent Grief quickens Ingenuity, and in Distress Expedients readily offer. She fix'd to a Loom with perfect Skill a Web of the Barbarian Fashion, and by purple Notes interwoven in white Thread, traced the bloody Crime. This when finished, she gave to one of the Slaves that attended her, and signified by Gestures that she must carry it to her Mistress. She carried as desired to Procne, nor once suspected what was convey'd in it. The Matron of the savage Tyrant unfolds the Web, and reads the mournful Story of her Sister: and, strange that she could, is silent. Excess of Grief check'd her Speech, nor could her eager Tongue find Words to express her Indignation: there is no Room for Tears. But rushes impetuous, determin'd to confound right and wrong, and is wholly taken up in the Contrivance of Revenge.

It was now the time when the Thracian Matrons are wont to celebrate the triennial Feast of Bacchus. Night alone is conscious to these Rites. By Night Rhodope resounds with the shrill Tinkling of Brasses. By Night the Queen left the Palace, arrayed according to the Rites of the God, and carrying the Badges of that Frantick Solemnity. Wreaths of Vine Leaves adorn her Head, a Deer's Skin covers her left Side, and a smooth Spear presses her Shoulder.

TRANSLATION.

The terrible Procne thus hurries through the Woods, followed by a Crowd of Attendants, and agitated by the Tumults of Indignation, pretends them such as Bacchus inspir'd. At length she arrives at the solitary Dome, and howls, and cries Evoe, and breaks open the Gates, and seizes her Sister, and cloaths her in the Ensigns of the God, and hides her Face with Leaves of Ivy, and drawing her along, full of Amazement, leads her within the Limits of the Court.

As soon as the unhappy Philomela perceiv'd that she had touch'd the guilty House, a shivering cold seizes her, and Paleness spreads o'er all her Face. Procne having now found a fit Retirement, removes the sacred Symbols of the Deity, and unveils the blushing Face of her wretched Sister, and fondly holds her in her Embraces. But she on the contrary, as one that had stain'd her Sister's Bed, cannot bear to lift up her Eyes ; but with a dejected Countenance, and willing to swear, and call the Gods to Witness, that Violence had brought the Infamy upon her, her Hand served instead of a Voice, and proclaim'd in Signals her Innocence. Procne burns with Passion, nor can she any longer contain her Rage ; but checking the unseasonable Grief of her Sister : " It is not to Tears, says she, that we must now have Recourse, but to the Sword ; but to whatever else you contrive more vengeful than the Sword. I, Sister, have hardened myself to every Crime : I will either, after having set on Fire with Torches the Royal Palace, plunge the inhuman Author of your Wrongs into the middle of the Flames, or I will dig out with direful Steel his Tongue, or Eyes, or the Parts that injur'd your Honour, “ Honour, or expell his guilty Soul by a thousand Wounds. What to fix upon I have not yet resolved, but determin’d I am to do something great.”

While Procne thus discourses to her Sister, Itys ran up to his Mother: by him she is admonished of what she might do; and looking at him with stern Eyes, ah, said she, how like you are to your Father! she said no more, but prepares in her Mind the bloody Deed, and burns with silent Rage. But as her Son drew near, and saluted his Mother, and folded his little Arms round her Neck, and join’d Kisses mixt with childish Prattle, the Mother was softened to Pity, her Anger abated, and Tears forc’d themselves from her unwilling Eyes. But when she found that the natural Fondness of a Parent disarm’d her Resentment, again she turn’d her Eyes to her Sister, and looking by turns at both: “ Why, says she, does one accost me with fond Caresses; the other stand silent bereft of her Tongue? “ Why, as he calls me Mother, does not she call me Sister? O Daughter of “ Pandion, think to what a Husband thou art married: You degenerate: Con- “ jugal Duty, in the Wife of Tereus, would become a Crime.” No more she wavers, but seizes Itys, as when a Tygres, on the Banks of Ganges, drags thro’ gloomy Groves the tender Suckling of a Hind. When they were come to a remote Part of the lofty Dome, Procne plunges the Sword into his Bosom, now charge the direful Repast, and half-eaten Bowels ; anon he weeps, and calls himself the wretched Tomb of his own Son : Now he pursues the Daughters of Pandion with his naked Sword. You would imagine that the Bodies of the Cecropian Nymphs were supported by Wings ; they were indeed supported by Wings.

One wanders in the Woods, the other shelters herself under Roofs. The Marks of her Cruelty may be yet seen on her Breast, and her Feathers are stain'd with Blood. He too, made swift by his Resentment and Impatience of Revenge, is changed to a Bird, that bears on his Head crested Plumes : a long Beak stands out in Form of a Spear, and thus arm'd in his Looks, is distinguish'd by the Name of a Lapwing. This mournful Disaster hurried Pandion to the Tartarean Shades before his Day, and the late Period of a long old Age.

VIII. Erechtheus succeeded next to the Athenian Scepter, and Government of the State ; 'tis hard to say, whether he was more powerful by his Love of Justice,

N O T E S.

667. Corpora Cecropidum.] We come now to the fabulous Part of this Story ; that which the Poets have devised to serve their Purposes, which is thus explain'd by Banier. As it was common in ancient Times, to mix the supernatural with all Events of Moment, and account for them by the Intervention of the Gods ; so it was given out, that Procne had been transform'd into a Swallow, Philomela into a Nightingale, Itys into a Pheasant, and Tereus into a Lapwing. The Mythologists find Reasons corresponding to these Metamorphoses ; they will have it, that these Symbo-lical Transformations were design'd to figure the Characters of these several Persons. As the Lap-wing is a Bird that delights in Filth, they will have this to be an Emblem of Tereus's impure Morals ; because the Flight of that Bird is very slow, it signifies at the same Time, that he was not able to overtake the Princesses, his Ship not being so good a Sailor as theirs. A Verse of Aristophanes, in the first Act of his Comedy of the Birds, where Tereus, to abate the Astonishment of Eulpisurpriz'd to see that Prince under so hideous a

these ancient Fictions were often invented, or at least improved, by the Tragick Poets, and especially this one, since Tereus says: Sophocle has thought fit to put me into this Disguise.
The Nightingale, that hides itself in Woods and Thickets, seems as it were industrious to cover Philomela's Shame and Misfortunes and the Swallow, that frequents Houses, set forth the Disquietude of Procne, who in vain seeks after her Son, whom she inhumanely murdered.

677. Sceptra loci, &c.] From the Fate Tereus, the Poet passes to the Story of Calais and Zethes. They were the Sons of Boreas, King of Thrace, by Orithyia, the Daughter of Erechtheus, King of Athens ; whom the Prince had carried off.

or his mighty Armies. To him were born four Sons, and as many of the female Lot ; but two excelled, and were alike in Beauty. Cephalus, the Grandson of Æolus, was blest in having Procris for his Wife ; but Tereus and the Thracians were a great Obstacle to Boreas, and the God languish'd long without his dear Orithyia, while he begs, and prefers suppliant Prayers to Force. But when Blandishments avail'd nothing, swelling with Rage, and those rougher Arts so usual and native to this Wind : “ Deservedly, says he, am I now rejected ; for why “ did I relinquish my proper Weapons, Rage, and Violence, and Fierceness, and “ threatening Blasts, and apply in humble Prayers to my Dishonour ? Violence is “ my proper Talent ; by Violence I drive the stormy Clouds, and shake with “ foaming Billows the Deep ; by Violence I overturn the knotted Oaks, harden “ Snow, and beat the Earth with Hail. The same when encountering my Bro“ thers in the open Air (for this is peculiarly my Field) I struggle with such “ mighty Efforts, that Heaven from Pole to Pole re-echoes the dreadful Shock, “ and fierce Lightnings, struck from hollow Clouds, play around. The same, “ when pent within hollow subterraneous Caves, and opposing my Back to “ Earth's lowest Caverns, I shake the infernal Regions, and whole Globe with “ Earthquakes. 'Tis thus I ought to have pursued my Bride ; nor courted “ Erechtheus to become my Father-in-Law, but by Force compell'd him.”

In these or such like blustering Words Boreas spoke, and shook his dreadful Wings; by whose Tossings the whole Earth was fann'd, and the wide Sea trembled When the Lover drawing his dusty Mantle over the Mountain's Tops, sweeps the Ground, and wrapt in Darkness, embraces with his yellow Wings, Orithyia, aghast with Fear As he flies, the agitated Flames of Love burn fiercer; nor did the Ravisher check the Reins of his aerial Course, till he reached the People and Walls of the Ciconians. There Actæan Orithyia was espoused to the cold Tyrant, and became a Mother, being delivered of Twins, who retain'd the Wings of their Father, but in other Things resembled their Mother. Yet they tell us, these Wings were wanting at the Time of their Birth; and that, until a Beard of dusky Hair begun to grow, the Boys, Calais and Zethes remain'd unfledg'd. But soon after, Wings, like those of Birds, began to inclose their Sides, and at once their Cheeks were covered with yellow Down. When therefore the childish Season of Life gave way to that of Youth and Manhood, they embark'd with the Argonauts, whose Ship first essay'd the hostile Waves; and with them attempted the fam'd Prize of the Fleece, shining with radiant Gold.

N O T E S.

This Book begins with the fam'd Expedition of the Argonauts. Ovid, having in the Course of this Narration come to Calais and Zetbes, and trac'd them to the Time when they embark'd in this Voyage, is naturally led to give the Particulars of an Event, so renown'd in Story. As it is of Importance to be well acquainted with this Fable, I shall trace Things from their Source, and endeavour to explain all the Fictions that are any way connected with it. Athamas, the Son of Æolus, Grandson of Hellen, and Great-grandson of Deucalion, marrying Ino, the Daughter of Cadmus, soon after divorc'd her, to make Way for Nephela, by whom he had Phryxus and Helle. But disgusted with her, he took back Ino, who bore him two Sons, Learchus and Melicerta. Ino, who had now greatly the Ascendant of her Husband, hated the Children of Nephela, who, as eldest, had a Right to succeed; so that she sought all Means to destroy them. Phryxus, appriz'd of her Design by his Governor, had a Vessel privately equip'd, and taking with him Part of his Father's Treasures, embark'd with his Sister Helle to seek a secure Retreat at the Court of Æetes, his Kinsman, who reign'd in Colchis. The young Helle, oppress'd with the Hardships of the Voyage, died by the Way; or, as we learn from Diodorus, having got up to the Ship's Deck, fell into the Sea, and was drown'd. She is thought to have derived her Name to that Part of the Archipelago, which, from that Adventure, has been called the Hellepont, or the Sea of Helle. Upon his Arrival in Colchis, Æetes gave him a kind Reception, and some Time after bestow'd upon him his Daughter Calciopé in Marriage; but afterwards coveting the Treasures of his Son-in-Law, he put him to Death, and seiz'd them. When these Things were known in Greece, such of the Youths as were most passionately fond of Fame, began to form a Design of demanding back the Treasures of Athamas, and revenging the Death of Phryxus. Pelias, Uncle to Jason, having driven his Brother Eson from the Throne of Ioleos, and wanting to remove Jason, who might take it into his Head to re-establish his Father Eson, would not lose so favourable an Opportunity; and urged him to engage in a Voyage, from which he might reap so much Glory and Renown. As this Expedition had been publish'd over all Greece, many young Princes were assembled at the Court of Ioleos; who having conferr'd the chief Command on Jason, embark'd in the Ship Argo, whence this was call'd the Expedition of the Argonauts. Various are the Conjectures as to this Name; some derive it from Argus, who proposed the Plan of the Vessel; others from its Swiftnes, as Argos in Greek signifies swift. One Thing not to be omitted is, that in the Construction of this Ship, an Oak of the Forest of Dodona was employed, which was put in the Prow, and hence undoubtedly came the Tradition, that this Ship deliver'd Oracles, as may be seen in Apollodorus, Apollonius, Lycophron, &c. As Navigation was then but in its Infancy, the Argonauts, as may be naturally supposed, met with several Adventures in their Voyage, the most memorable of which are here recounted by the Poet; and as to the Fictions, he has intermix'd with them, they shall be explain'd in the Course of the Notes.

TRANSLATION.

"Do you call it a Marriage then, Medea, and shelter under venerable Names your Crime? Bethink yourself rather of the mighty Iniquity you harbour in your Mind, and avoid, while it is yet in your Power, the horrid Guilt." She said: And now a Sense of Virtue, and the Duty she ow'd her Father, and Shame presented themselves to her; and Cupid vanquish'd was about to fly.
Strait she repairs to the venerable Altars of Perseian Hecate, shelter'd in a shady Grove, and the remote Recesses of a Wood. And now she was resolved, and the Ardour of her Passion, by being check'd, had considerably abated; when she sees the Son of Æson, and the extinguished Flame was kindled anew: Her Cheeks were covered with Blushes, and her whole Face was in a Glow. As a spark is wont to derive Nourishment from the Winds, and what was but small, while hid under a Heap of Ashes, yet if blown and rous'd, grows, and rises to its former Strength: So her Love now languid, which, you would have imagin'd now cold and declining, on seeing the Youth, was rekindled by his Presence. By chance too, the Son of Æson appear'd that Day more lovely than usual. His charms might even plead for her Passion. She gazes and holds her Eyes continually fix'd on him, as if she had now first seen him; nor, (blinded as she was by her Passion) can be persuaded that she regards a meerly mortal Face, nor turns away from beholding him. But when the Stranger began to speak, and seiz'd 74 Hecates Perseidos.] Mythologists are divided in their Sentiments about this Hecate.

Virgil seems to follow the Tradition, which takes her the Daughter of Perseus; who, according to Diodorus, was the Son of Phæbus, and Brother to Æetes. She is generally taken to be the same with the Moon and Proserpine; hence too the Epithets of Triceps and Triformis, given her so often by the Poets, because the Moon sometimes shines full, sometimes disappears quite, and often shews but Part of her Right Hand, and with submissive Voice begg'd her Aid, and promis'd her his Bed; she replies with a Flood of Tears: "I see what I ought to do, nor will Ignorance of the Truth, but Love blind me. You shall be preserv'd by my Gifts, but remember, when preserv'd, your Engagements." He swears by the sacred Rites of the threefold Goddess, and the Deity which was rever'd in that Grove; by Phæbus, the Father of his future Father-in Law, who sees all Things, by his own Adventures, and the great Dangers to which he was expos'd. He is believ'd, and receiv'd immediately some enchanted Herbs, and learnt their Use; and retir'd joyful to his Lodgings.

Next Day, soon as Aurora had dispers'd the sparkling Stars, the People meet together in the sacred Field of Mars, and range themselves along the Hills. The King himself in a Robe of Purple, and distinguish'd by an Ivory Scepter, takes his Seat in the Midst of the Assembly. When lo the brazen-footed Bulls advance, breathing Fire from their adamantine Nostrils; and the Grass, touch'd by the issuing Vapours, withers and dies. As Forges fill'd with Fire send forth a rumbling Noise, or as Flints dissolved in a Furnace, by the sprinkling of Water, glow

96. Patrem soceri cernentem cuncta futuri.] Æetes, the Father of Medea, whom he now considers as his future Father-in-Law, was the Son of Phæbus, the God who sees and makes all Things visible to others.

104. Ecce adamanteis Vulcanum, &c.] We come now to the miraculous Part of the Story. Jason has Conditions propounded to him, first, to put under the Yoke two Bulls a Present from Vulcan; whose Feet and Horns were of Brass, and that vomited Clouds of Fire. With these he was to plough up a Field sacred to Mars, that had never been cultivated; sow in it the Teeth of a Dragon, whence arm'd Men were to spring up, who must be all exterminated; and lastly, to slay the wakeful Monster that guards the Treasure. All this Jason, aided by Medea, performs, and carries off the Prize. This Fact may be no more, than that Medea, whom Jason had promised to marry, and came along with him to Greece, at the Solicitation of Calciope her Sister, Phryxus's Widow, who saw her Children a Prey to a cruel Tyrant, assisted her Lover to rob her Father's Treasure, either by giving him a false Key, or in some other Manner, and set sail with him.

with redoubled Fury: ſo their Breasts rolling out the incloſed Flames, and their ſcorch'd Throats reſound. Yet the ſon of Æſon boldly advances to the Encounter. They, as he approaches, ſternly turn upon him with threatening Looks, and aim their Horns pointed with Steel; with cloven Hoofs they ſpurn the duſty Ground, and lowing fill the Air with Clouds of Smoke. The Argonauts ſtand congeal'd with Fear: He comes up, nor feels the Flames breath'd upon him; ſo great is the Force of Enchantments. With a daring Right Hand he ſtrokes their hanging Dewlaps, and ſubjects them to the Yoke; and compels them to draw the pondrous Load of the Plough, and tear up the unaccuſtom'd Plain with the Share. The Colchians wonder; his Companions fill the Air with Shouts, and inſpire him with freſh Courage. He then takes the Dragon's Teeth in a brazen Helmet, and ſtrews them over the plough'd-up Field. The Ground, before impregnated with a ſtrong Poiſon, ſoftens the Seed; and the Teeth, that had been ſown, grow, and form themſelves into new Bodies. lunk thro' Fear. She too, to whom he ow'd his Safety, trembled; and when she saw him singly attack'd by such a Host of Foes, suddenly the Blood forsook her Cheeks, and a Paleness spreads over all her Look. And lest the enchanted Herbs she had given him, should not avail, she sings the never-failing auxiliary Song, and calls in her Reserve of secret Arts. He, throwing a huge Stone amidst his Foes, turns their hostile Rage thus averted upon themselves. The Earth-born Brothers perish by mutual Wounds, and fall in civil Fight. The Greeks congratulate him, caress the Conqueror, and hold him fast lock'd in their Embraces. You too, barbarian Maid, would have embrac'd him; Modesty opposed the Design, yet fain you would have embrac'd him: But the Awe of Reputation restrain'd you. In secret however, what no one can oppse, you rejoice; and give Thanks to your Charms, and the Gods who favour and promote them.

It now only remains to lull asleep by potent Herbs the wakeful Dragon, who distinguish'd by his shining Crest, and three-fork'd Tongue, and with hook'd Teeth tremendous, guarded the golden Fleece. Yet after sprinkling him with the Juice of Lethæan Herbs, and thrice muttering over him Words of powerful Virtue to occasion Sleep, that would have even calm'd the troubled Sea, and stopp'd the Course of rapid Rivers; Sleep insensibly steals upon those Eyes that were Strangers to it before, and the Æsonian Hero possesses the golden Prize. Proud of the mighty Spoil, and carrying with him the Author of the Present, a no less glorious Spoil, he reach'd victorious with his Wife the Port of Jolcos.

Three Nights were wanting that the Horns of the Moon might meet and form a perfect Orb. When she shone full, and with a compleat Disk survey’d the Earth, Medea leaves the Palace; her Garments flowing loose, her Foot bare, and her Hair floating careless on her Shoulders: Thus solitary and unattended, she directs her wandering Steps through the dreary Silence of Midnight. Men, Beasts and Birds lay now dissolved in soft Repose; no Murmurs rustle thro’ the Hedges, no whispering Winds shake the Trees, the very Leaves are hush, and thro’ all the Air dread Silence reigns. The Stars alone twinkle; to these she rears her Arms, and thrice turning round, thrice sprinkling her with Water from the running Brook, opened her Mouth in three Yells; then with her Knee bended on the hard Ground: “ O Night, (says she) faithful Confident of these my Secrets, and ye born aloft, and surveys from her airy Height the Vallies of Tempe, and guides her Snakes towards those chalky Regions. Strait she marks the Herbs that grow on Ossa and lofty Pelion, Othrys, Pindus, and the Summits of Olympus. Part she tears up by their potent Roots; part she cuts by the bending Sickle's Arch. Many Plants she culls from the Banks of Apidanus, many from the Banks of Amphrysus; nor did Enipeus escape her searching Hand.

Peneus too and Sperchius contributed some, and the rushy Shores of Boëbe.
She crops also living Herbs along Euboic Anthedon, not yet rendered famous by the Transformation of Glaucus; and now for nine Days and nine Nights had she been visiting every Soil, in her Chariot drawn by winged Dragons: At length she returns, and her Dragons, tho' fed only with the Odours exhal'd from her Plants, had yet cast the Skin of wrinkled old Age. At her Return, she stood without the Threshold and Gates of the Palace, with Heaven only for her Canopy, and avoided the Embraces of her Husband, and rais'd two Altars of Turf, passing with Vervain and Forest Boughs, she digs two Trenches hard by for the Sacrifice, and thrusts a Knife into the Throat of a black Ram, and besprinkles the wide Ditches with Blood. Then pouring into them Goblets of liquid Wine, and warm Milk from brazen Bowls; she mutters at the same Time her Spells, and invokes the earthly Deities. Next she requests the King of Shades, and his ravish'd Wife, that they would not too hastily deprive Æson's aged Limbs of Life.

 When by repeated Prayers and tedious Mutterings they had been render'd propitious, she order'd the feeble Body of Æson to be brought out to the Altars.
 Then casting him into a deep Sleep, she extends his Body, now like a lifeless Corse, upon the Herbs she had strew'd. She orders Jason and his attending Friends to retire, and warns them not to prophane with unhallowed Eyes her mysterious Rites: They retire as ordered. Medea, with her Hair dishevell'd, like a Priestess of Bacchus, runs frantick round the blazing Altars; and tinges her Torches split manifold in a Ditch of black Blood, then lights them at the two Altars: And thrice lustrates the aged Sire with Flames, thrice with Water, and thrice with Sulphur.

Mean time the powerful Medicine boils and bounces in a large Cauldron, and whitens with swelling Froth. There she infuses Roots gather'd in the Vallies of Thessaly, and Seeds and Flowers, and acrid Juices. She adds Gems brought from the remote eastern Coasts, and Sand wash'd by the Ocean's reflux Tide; Frost too gathered during Night by the Light of the Moon, and the Flesh and ill-boding Wings of a Screech-Owl; and the Entrails of an ambiguous Wolf, went to transform his savage Aspect to that of a Man. Nor was there wanting the thin scaly Slough of the Cyniphian Water-Snake, and Liver of a long-liv'd Stag; to which she moreover adds the Head and Bill of a Crow, that had sustain'd a Life of nine Ages. When with these, and a thousand other nameless Ingredients, she had compleated the Medicine intended for the exhausted Body of Æson, she stirs and blends them together with an old withered Branch of the peaceful Olive; when lo, the decay'd Stock, thus turn'd round in the boiling Cauldron, first begins to look green, soon cloaths itself with Leaves, and is loaded with a sudden Crop of ripe Olives. Wherever too the Fire throws the Foam over the Brink of the hollow Cauldron, and the warm Drops fall upon the Earth, the Ground blooms; and Flowers and Herbs spontaneous rise. Which soon as Medea perceiv'd, with a drawn Sword she opens the Throat of the aged Prince; and letting the old Blood flow out, replenishes his Veins with new Juices. As soon as these are taken in, both by the Mouth and opening Wound, his hoary Beard and Hair are changed to a glossy black. Leanness flies, his pale and ghastly Looks are gone, his hollow Arteries beat with fresh Supplies of Blood, and his Limbs luxuriant resume the Bloom of Youth. Æson wonders, and calls to Mind that such was his Constitution forty Years ago.

III. Bacchus from high Olympus beheld the Wonders of this amazing Prodigy; and, admonish'd, that to the Nymphs who nurs'd him, the Years of Youth might be restor'd, requests this Favour of Medea.

VI. Moreover that her Arts might not cease, she falsely feigns a Quarrel with her Husband, and flies suppliant to Pelias's Gate; where (as he himself was listless thro' Age) his Daughters receive her, whom the cunning Colchian soon ensnares by a fallacious Shew of Friendship. And while she repeats, as the most mighty of her Services, that she had chac'd away from Æson Wrinkles and old Age, and dwells long on this Part of her Story, a Hope naturally arises to the Virgin Daughters of Pelias, that by the like Art their Father may be restor'd to Youth. This accordingly they request of her, and impor-tunately urge her to name her Price. She for some Time is silent, and seems to doubt her own Power, and by an affected Gravity holds their eager Minds in Suspence: But soon after, having granted her Promise; that you may the more confide, says she, in this my Art, the Leader of the Flock, the most advanc'd in Age, shall by this Preparation become a Lamb.
Immediately a Ram, exhausted with Years innumerable, is brought, his Horns winding round his hollow Temples: When having opened his wither'd Throat with a Hæmonian Knife, and stain'd with scanty Blood the piercing Steel, the Sorceress plunges at once the Limbs of the Ram and her potent Juices into a hollow Cauldron. His Limbs grow less, his Horns are cast, and with his Horns his Years shrink away, and tender Bleatings are heard from the Middle of the Cauldron. Instantly, while they yet wonder at the Bleatings, a Lamb springs out, and wantonly frisks about, and seeks the suckling Dugs. The Daughters of Pelias are fill'd with Amazement, and as her Promises were now confirm'd by an experimental Proof, more importunately than ever urge their Request. Thrice Phœbus had unyok'd his Steeds, plung'd in the Iberian Waves and the sparkling Stars shone on the fourth Night; when deceitful Medea se-over a strong Fire pure Water and Herbs of no Virtue. And now Sleep strong as Death, procur'd by Enchantments and the Force of a magic-Tongue relaxing the Bodies of the King and his Guards, held them fast lock'd in his Embraces. His Daughters, as commanded, had, with the Colchian, en-ter'd his Chamber, and surrounded the Bed. "Why now, says she, do "you hesitate? whence this Indolence? Unsheathe your Swords, and drain from "his Body the aged Juices, that I may fill his empty Veins with youthful Blood."

TRANSLATION:

"The Life and Age of your Father are in your Power. If you have any filial Piety, nor cherish vain Hopes, perform now your Duty to a Father, banish by your Weapons his old Age, and urging the Steel, discharge his putrid Gore." On these Exhortations every one, in Proportion to her filial Piety; hastens to be impious; and that she may not seem wicked, commits Wickedness: Yet none can bear to behold their own Strokes, but turn away their Eyes, and backward deal chance Blows with cruel right Hands. He, covered with Blood, yet raises his Body upon his Elbow, and half mangled as he was, strives to rise from the Bed; and amidst so many Swords stretching out his pale Arms, What are you about (says he) my Daughters, what arms you to the Destruction of your Father? Their Courage and Hands fail'd them. As he was about to have spoke more, Medea tore away his Throat with the Words, and plung'd him thus mangled into the boiling Cauldron.

NOTES:

350. Quod nisi pennatis serpentibus isset in auras.] Medea, after thus discharging her Revenge on Pelias; fearing the Danger that might ensue to herself; speeds her Flight to Athens. The Poet describing her Journey, mentions the several Places she pass'd over, or had a View of, in her airy Vehicle; and thence takes Occasion to touch on many Fables, which are now for the most Part unknown. It were of no advantage to enlarge in Subjects so little interesting, and which history has passed over in Silence. All I shall do is to establish some general Principles, which may serve as a Key to these ancient Fictions.

When any one escap'd an evident and threatening Danger, it was given out that he was chang'd into a Bird; or if, to escape Pursuit, he took Refuge in a Cave, he must be a Serpent. When Sorrow gave Cause for many Tears, the Person dissolv'd into a Fountain; or if a Virgin was lost in a Wood, she became a Nymph or Dryad. A Resemblance of Name too, oft gave Occasion to these Fictions; thus Cycnus was said to be transform'd to a Swan, and so of many others:

umbrosum Pelion tecta Philyreia, superque Othryn, et loca nota eventu veteris Cerambi. Hic sublatus pennis in aera ope nymphae, cum gravis tellus foret obruta ponto infuso, inobrutus effugit Deucalionis undas.

XXI. But after the new Bride had perish'd by the Colchian Poisons, and both Seas beheld the royal Palace in Flames, the impious Sword is stain'd with the Blood of her own Children, and the Mother, who had taken this barbarous Revenge, escapes the Sword of her Husband Jason. Hence carried by her Titanian Dragons she enters the City of Pallas, which saw thee, Phineus, the most upright of Men, and thee, aged Periphas, flying together thro' the Air, and the Grand-Daughter of Polypemon resting upon new Wings.

XXII. Here Ægeus receives her, blameable in this alone; nor is Hospitality enough, he also joins her to him by the sacred Tye of Marriage. And now was Theseus his Son arriv'd, unknown to his Father, who by his Valour had establish'd Peace in the Isthmus between two Seas. Medea bent on his Destruction, prepares a Draught of Aconite, which she had formerly brought with her from the Scythian Coasts. This they tell us sprung from the baneful Teeth of the Echidnean Monster. There is a gloomy Cave with a dark Entrance, where may be seen a descending "Assist my Arms taken up for a murdered Son, nor refuse to bear a Share in a pious War. I ask Satisfaction to the Mant of injured Androgeos." To him the Grandson of Asopus replied : "Your Request is vain, nor can the City in which I reign comply, for no Land is more strictly allied to Athens than this, and mutual Leagues subsist between us." Minos departs sorrowful, and told him as he withdrew, that his Confederacy should cost him dear ; yet thinks it better rather to threaten War than actually engage in it, and waste his Strength there, in previous Trial. The Cretan Fleet might yet be beheld from the Oenopian Walls, when an Athenian Ship driving with full Sails appears, and enters the hospitable Port. It came Cephalus, charg'd with the Commands of his Country. The young Son of Æacus, tho' it was now long since they had seen him, yet knew Cephalus again, and gave him their Right Hands, and conducted him into their Father's House. Success, recounts the mutual Treaties and Alliances of their Ancestors, and adds that Minos aspir'd after the Dominion of all Greece. When he had thus delivered the Charge of his Fellow-Citizens, strengthened with all the Force of Eloquence, Æacus, leaning with his left Hand upon his Scepter, thus replied: Ask not, O Athenians, but take the Assistance you want, nor doubt that all the Strength of this Island is at your Command. I offer the whole, the whole Forces of my Kingdom to accompany you. Troops are not wanting: I have Soldiers enough for my own Defence, and to oppose the Enemy. Thank Heaven 'tis a favourable Season, and admits of no Colour for a Refusal." "Nay may it always be so, returns Cephalus, may you ever increase in Power and in Number of Citizens. Indeed as I came along it gave me mighty Joy to meet so comely a Troop of Youths, and all too of the same Age, yet I miss many from amongst them, whom I remember to have seen, when formerly I was entertain'd at your Court." Æacus fetch'd a Groan, and thus spoke with a mournful voice. "Attend to a History deplorable in it's Beginning, but joyful in the End. I wish I could repeat it to you with all it's Circumstances. At present I shall give you only a summary Account, without Order, or detaining you with long Preamble. NOTES.

518. Flebile Principium.] This Fable of the transformation of the Minotaur into Men is generally supposed to arise from the Retreat of Ægeus's Subjects into Woods and Caverns, during a severe Pestilence that ravaged his Kingdom; whence they suddenly appear'd again, after the Contagion was over; and at a Time too when Æacus had despair'd of ever seeing them again.

Dira lues incidit populis ira iniquæ Junonis, exosæ terras dictas a pellice. Dum malum est visum mortale, causaque nocens tantæ cladis latebat, est pugnatum arte medendi. Exitium superabat opem; quæ jacebat victa. Principio cælum preffit terras spissa caligine; et inclusit ignavos æstus nubibus. Dumque luna quater implevit orbem junctis cornibus, et quater tenuata retexuit plerum orbem, calidi austri spirarunt letiferis flatibus. "Fields, and Highways are strow'd with loathsome Carcases; the Air is infected "with the Smell, and, strange to relate, neither Dogs nor ravenous Birds, nor "hoary Wolves would touch the dead Bodies, they rot and fall away, and e-"mitting noxious Exhalations, spread the Contagion far and wide. The Infec"tion now falls with collected Rage on the wretched Swains, and riots within "the Walls of our great Cities. It begins with scorching the Bowels; Flushings "and a Difficulty of Breathing are the first Indications of the latent Flame. The "Tongue grows rough and swells. Their Mouths inflam'd by the strong beating "of the Veins open wide, and greedily receive the large Indraughts of tainted "Air. Beds and Coverings are loathed, they rest their Breasts upon the hard "Ground, nor can they thence derive any Coolness, but the Heat is communi"cated to the Ground from their Bodies. Nor is there any Physician to attend "them: The cruel Calamity breaks out even upon them who administer Reme"dies, and the Authors suffer by exercising their own Arts. The more nearly "and faithfully any one attends, the sooner he falls a Victim to his Cares. And "when now all Hope of Recovery is gone, and they see that the Disease must "end in Death; they indulge themselves in all their Desires, nor regard the "Means of Relief; for indeed nothing brings Relief. And banishing all Sense of "Shame, they lye promiscuously about the Fountains, Rivers, and capacious and pouring the sacred Wine between the Horns, fall without waiting for the Wound? While even I was offering Sacrifice to Jupiter for myself, for my Country, and my three Sons, the Victim uttered dismal Lowings, and falling suddenly down, before it receiv'd any Strokes, tinged the Knives applied to it with scanty Gore. The diseas'd Entrails too had lost all Marks of Truth, and Presages of the Will of the Gods; The baneful Distemper penetrates to the inmost Bowels. These Eyes have seen the Carcases lying in Heaps before the Gates of the Temples; nay, to throw a greater Odium on the Gods, before the very Altars. Some strangle themselves, and banish by an immediate Death the continual Apprehension of it, and voluntarily invite approaching Fate. The dead Bodies are not, according to Custom, accompanied with funeral Rites; for the City Gates cannot receive the Multitude; but they either lie unburied on the Ground, or are thrown upon Piles without the customary Honours. And now all Reverence and Distinction ceases; they fight for the general Piles, and burn the Bodies in funeral Fires not their own. Friends are wanting to mourn, and the Souls of Virgins and Matrons, young and old, stroll about unlamented. Space sufficient cannot be found for Graves, nor Trees to feed the Fires.

and throw off their Leanness, Number of Feet, and sable Hue, and cloath their Limbs in human Form. Sleep withdraws ; waking, I condemn the vain Vision, and complain that there is no Relief in the Gods. Still I heard an encreasing Murmur in the Palace, and human Voices, to which I was now in a Manner become a Stranger, assail my Ears. While I suspect these too, an Impression left by my Dream, lo Telamon enters in Haste ; and throwing open the Doors, Father, says he, come forward ; you'll see a Wonder beyond Hope or Belief. I follow, and see and know those very Men, whom I had beheld in the Vision of my Sleep. They advance and salute me King. I offer up Vows to Jove, and divide the City, and depopulated Lands among my new Subjects, and call them Myrmidons, a name that preserves the Memory of their Original. You saw their Persons, and they still retain the Manners of their ancient Race ; a frugal Generation, and patient of Toil, eager to encrease their Store, and who husband their Acquisitions with Care. These, alike in Years and Courage, will follow you to the War, soon as the East Wind, which happily brought you hither, (for an East Wind had brought them) shall change to the South."

Pallas repair to Cephalus who was most in Years, and Cephalus was accompanied by them to the King. But as the King was not yet arisen from Sleep, Phocus, his Son, receives them at the Palace Gate ; for Telamon and his Brother were mustering Forces for the War. Phocus conducts the Athenians to the inner Recesses of the Palace, finely adorned ; and being set down with them, observ'd that the Grandson of Æolus had in his Hand a Dart made of Wood to him unknown, and pointed with Gold. After some promiscuous Conversation, " I am," says he, addicted to Groves, and the Hunter's Sport, yet have for some time been in doubt from what Tree that Javelin is cut. Sure were it of Ash, it must be of a brown Colour, if of Dog-Tree, it would be knotted. I can't guess whence it is, but my Eyes have not seen a more beautiful Weapon of its Kind than this." One of the Athenian Brothers rejoins : " You will admire in this Dart it's Usefulness, still greater than it's Beauty. Fortune guides not it's Aim, it always hits the Game, and, drench'd in Blood, returns spontaneous into the Hand that threw it." The Nereian Youth is then impatient to know all ; he enquires whence and on what Account it was given, and who was the Author of a Present so valuable. Cephalus replies to all ; but touch'd with conscious Shame, conceals the Occasion of his receiving it ;

 " upon the high Tops of ever-flourishing Hymettus; and carried me off, against my " Will. Let me relate the Truth, and without Offence to the Goddess: amiable as " she is with her rosy Mouth, tho' she possesses the Confines of Light and Darknes, " and is fed with the Juice of Nectar, yet I lov'd my Procris. Procris alone was in " my Thoughts, Procris ever in my Mouth. I alledged the sacred Tyes of Marriage, "with silent Shame, flies the treacherous House, and her ensnaring Husband, "and for my Offence, hating the whole Race of Men, ranges the Mountains to it's Thongs ; looking back, with Amazement I behold two marble sta-mournful Recital with past Joys ; these, Phocus, will I first rehearse. O Son of Æacus, how I am pleased to reflect upon the happy Time, those first Years of Marriage ; when I was so compleatly blest in a Wife, nor she less blest in a Husband. Mutual Tendernefs and endearing Love link'd us both. Not Jove himself had been preferr'd to my Embrace ; nor could any Nymph, not Venus in all her Charms, have captivated my Heart. Our Breasts glow'd with an equal Flame. It was my Custom, soon as the Sun's early Beams gilded the Mountain Tops, with youthful Fondness to repair to the Groves to hunt. Nor took I any Servants with me, nor Horses, nor quick-scented Hounds, nor was I provided with knotted Nets. My Dart was instead of all ; but when satiated with Wound her own fatal Gift : I raiſe her Body in my guilty Arms, and tearing the Breſt of my Robe, bind up the cruel Wound, and endeavour to ſtop the Blood, and beg her to live, nor leave me thus under the Stain of her Death. But Strength failing her, and now juſt expiring,

I. WHILE with Songs, like these, the Thracian Poet assembled round him the Woods, and savage Beasts, and listening Rocks; lo! the Ciconian Matrons, whose raving Breasts were clad with shaggy Skins, from the Summit of a rising Ground espy Orpheus, fitting his Voice to the Strokes of his Lyre. When one of them, tossing her streaming Locks in Air, Here, lo, here, she cried, is that Contemner of our Sex; and hurled her Spear at the melodious Mouth of the Appollinean Bard; but it's Point, twisted round with Wreaths of Ivy, made a slight Mark, without any Wound. Another hatches up a Stone, which, darted at him, was subdued in it's airy Course by the Melody of his Voice and Lyre, and fell suppliant at his Feet, as if imploring Pardon for so daring an Attempt. But soon this frantick Tumult encreases, all the Ovid, after having made Orpheus entertain us so long and well in the last Book, here recounts the Story of his Death. The most remarkable Circumstances in this Relation are, that of the Serpent changed into a Stone, and the Transformation of the Bacchantes into trees. The first is probably no more than a poetical Fiction added to embellish the History. Yet several Mythologists pretend, that the Ancients, under this Fable, have given us the History of an Inhabitant of Lesbos, who was punished for attacking the Reputation of Orpheus. They regarded the Critick as a vile Insect, who sought to nourish himself with the Blood of that Poet, and whose Stupidity they meant to represent, by saying that he was changed into a Stone. As to what regards the Metamorphosis of the Thracian Matrons, who were changed into Trees for having so cruelly put Orpheus to Death; it is an Emblem expressive of their having been punished for the bloody Attempt, or to inform us, that they perished in the Caverns, whither they retir'd to hide themselves from the Punishment they so justly deserved.

Boundaries of Moderation are broken, and dire Fury reigns. Yet all their Weapons had been subdued by the Charms of his Musick: but that the hideous Clamour, the Bercynthian Flute, and squeaking Horn, Drums, Clapping of Hands, and Bacchanalian Yellings, deafened the Sound of his moving Lyre. Then at length the Stones were stain'd with the Blood of the Poet, who could no longer be heard. And first this Female Crew drive away a numberless Throng of Birds listening to the Poet's Song, and Snakes, and Troops of wild Beasts, which, gathered round the Lyrist, form'd a glorious Theatre. Then with bloody Right Hands they attack Orpheus himself, and flock together like Birds, when they espy the boding Fowl of Night strolling about by Day; or, when in a crowded Amphitheatre, as the Stag is doom'd to fall the Prey of Dogs in the Morning Sand. They assail the Poet, and dart at his Head their Javelins entwin'd with leafy Greens, and destin'd for a more sacred Use. Some hurl Clods of Earth, some Flints, and Branches torn from Trees; and that Arms may not be wanting to their Rage, it chanc'd that some Oxen were breaking open a Field with the piercing Share, and hard by the brawny Peasants, providing Food with laborious Toil, were digging up the reluctant Earth: Who seeing this frantick Troop, take to Flight, and leave their Implements of Labour behind. Harrows, and heavy Rakes, and long Spades, lye scattered over the forsaken Fields. Which seiz'd by this enraged Crew, who tore in Pieces the Oxen with threatening Horns, they return to the Poet's Fate, and sacrilegiously

 And his Soul, blending with Air, issued (ah! Gods) thro' that Mouth, which had so often tam'd the fiercest of the savage Breed, and forc'd Attention even from insensate Rocks. Thee, Orpheus, the disconsolate Birds, thee, the savage Crowd, the rigid Flints, and Groves oft charm'd by thy Strains, bewail'd. Thee, the drooping Trees, stript of their leafy Glories, mourn'd. They tell us, that even the Rivers swell'd with their own Tears; and that the Naiads and Dryads appear'd in sable Scarfs, and with dishevell'd Hair. His Limbs lye scattered in different Parts. His Head and Harp are plunged in Hebrus' Stream; and (wond'rous to relate) while they roll down it's middle Current, the Lyre sounds, I know not what mournful Strain; the lifeless Tongue murmurs in deadly Notes, and the Banks re-echo the moving Sound. And now borne downward to the Sea, they leave their native Stream, and reach the Shore of Methymnean Lesbos. Here a ve-nom'd Snake attempts the Head, landed on a foreign Soil, and Locks embrued with clotted Gore. But Phœbus comes to his Aid, and checkt the Monster, ready for the devouring Grasp; whose expanded Jaws, transform'd to Stone, stand hardened in the ghastly Grin. His Ghost flies downward to the Stygian Shades, and knows again the Places it had seen before, and searching in the Regions of the finds his Eurydice, and clasps her in his eager Arms. Here sometimes they walk unmolested, side by side; now he follows her with unanxious Pace, now securely walks before, and now without Danger looks back upon his Eurydice.

II. Yet Bacchus suffers not this Crime to go unpunished, and concerned for the Loss of a Poet, who was the Guardian of his Mysteries, instantly bound down in the Woods, by a twisted Root, all the Edonian Matrons, Accomplices of the Guilt. For just as they stood, he lengthened out the Toes of their Feet, and thrust them into the solid Earth by a sharp Point. And as a Bird when she has entangled her Leg in a Snare, artfully hid by the subtle Fowler, finding herself fast, beats her Wings, and fluttering, draws the Noose still closer by her Struggles; so as any one of these found herself rooted to the Ground, startled, she in vain endeavours to get loose; for the pliant Twig toughly keeps it's Hold, and proves strong enough to baffle all her Efforts. And while she looks to find her Toes, Feet and Nails, she sees the Rind rising round her shapely Leg; and attempting to smite her Thigh with her mournful right Hand, she smites solid Oak: Her Breast too and Shoulders are transform'd to Oak. You would think her extended Arms real Boughs, nor would you be deceiv'd in so thinking.

Phrygian Swains had seiz'd him staggering with Age and Wine, and dragg'd him, bound with Garlands, to their King Midas; whom Thracian Orpheus, and Eu-molpus of Athens, had before instructed in the mysterious Rites of Bacchus. He, knowing immediately this venerable Associate and Companion of the sacred Pomp, ordain'd, in Honour of his Guest, a Festival of ten Days, and as many successive Nights. And now had the eleventh Morning Star chac'd from the Firmament the lofty Host of Stars; when the King joyfully repairs to the Lydian Plains, and restores Silenus to the young God, his Foster-Child. The God, pleased at having recovered his nursing-Father, gave the King a Power to name his Wish; an Offer grateful indeed and flattering, but which in the End prov'd useless; for he indiscreetly using the Grant; Give me, said he, that whatever I touch with my Body, may be converted into yellow Gold. Bacchus consented to his Wish, and bestowed the hurtful Present, but grieved that he had not made a wiser Demand.
The Berecynthian Hero departs joyful; and rejoices in his Misfortune, and makes

NOTES.

90. At Silenus abest.] All the Ancients agree in telling us, that Silenus had the Care of Bacchus's Education, and we always find him either with that God or the Bacchantes. It is a great Mistake to fancy this God an old battered De-bauchee, since he is often describ'd as a Philosopher and great Captain. The Discourse which Virgil puts into his Mouth, and those scrib'd to him by Plutarch upon Death, and several other Points of Morality, make it evident that he must have been a very extraordinary Man. See the Prose Translation of Virgil, Vol. I.

92. Midan.] Midas was the Son of Gordius and Cybele, and reign'd, according to Strabo, in the greater Phrygia. As he was extremely rich, and a good Oeconomist, it was given out that he converted whatever he touched into Gold.

Trial of the God's Fidelity by touching the several Objects that offered to him. For scarce crediting the Possibility of so singular a Grant, he pulls from a lowly Oak a verdant Twig: the Twig instantly became Gold. He takes up a Stone from the Ground; the Stone too, chang'd to Gold, appear'd of a pale Yellow. He touch'd a Clod too, and by the potent Touch it becomes a Mass of Gold. He pluck'd some dry Ears of Corn, and they shone a golden Harvest. He holds in his Hand an Apple pull'd from a Tree; you would have believed it brought from the Garden of the Hesperides. If he lays his Fingers on lofty Door-Posts, they seem to blaze with burnish'd Gold. When he washes his Hands in the liquid Stream, the Water dropping from his Hands might have deceived even Danaë. Scarce can he now contain his own Hopes, imagining every Thing Gold. His Slaves set before their happy Lord a Table spread with rich Dainties, nor ill provided of Bread. But then whether he reach'd out his Hand to touch the Gifts of Ceres, immediately they hardened into Gold; or if he attempts with hungry Jaws to devour the tempting Morsels, the Morsels, when touch'd by his Teeth, shone out Plates of yellow Gold. He had mixed some of his Patron's Juice with pure Water; you might have seen the fluid Gold trickle from his Jaws. Amaz'd at the Novelty of his Misfortune; rich, and at the same Time miserable, he desires to be deliver'd from this fatal Opulence, and repents of his indiscreet Wish. In the Midst of Plenty he is cursed with Famine; scorching Thirst dries up his Throat, and he is deservedly tormented by the now odious Gold. When raising to Heaven his Hands and shining Arms, Forgive, Father Bacchus, said he, forgive; I own my Error, but compassionate my Sufferings, and deliver me from this specious Calamity. The gentle Deity was moved by his Confession, annull'd the cruel Grant, and restor'd him to his former Condition. And that you may not always remain beset with this indiscreetly-wish'd-for Gold, repair to the Stream that waters the Neighbourhood of mighty Sardis; then trace thy Way to the Rising of the River, and meet it issuing from the Mountain's Brow. Here, where it bursts forth a mighty Stream, plunge thy Head into the bubbling Spring, and purge at once thy Body and thy Crime. The King plunges into the Water as instructed; the golden Charm tinctur'd the Stream, and passed from his Body to the River. And even now the neighbouring Plains, enrich'd with Veins of Gold, nourish the hard Ore, and the alluvial Glebe imbibes the precious Stream.

 IV. He, now hating Wealth, delighted only in the Woods and rural Retreats, had resorted with Pan to the mossy Caves and Mountains. But his Stupidity still remain'd, and the Folly which had invested his Soul, was doom'd to be again fatal to its Owner. For Tmolus, rising steep with lofty Ascent, surveys far and wide the Sea below; and stretching in his Descent on either Side, is here bounded by Sardis, and there by the small Confines of Hypæpæ. There while Pan vaunts his Strains to the tender Nymphs, and warbles an airy Song on Reeds jointed with Wax, presuming to rank this Musick even above Apollo's Lays, he challenged him to an unequal Trial, under the Decision of Tmolus. The aged Judge seats himself, upon his own Mountain, and frees his Ears from the encumbering Trees. His Head is bound with an Oaken Wreath, and the Acorns dangle round his hollow Temples. Then casting a Look at the Guardian God of Flocks, There is no Delay, says he, in me, your Judge. He sounds his rustick Reed, and with his rural Song delights Midas, who, by Chance, was present. The sacred Sire turn'd next to Phœbus; and, as he turn'd, the whole Forest followed the Motion of his venerable Brow. The God, having his golden Tresses bound with a Wreath of Parnassian Laurel, sweeps the Ground with a long Mantle of rich Tyrian Dye, and with his Left Hand supports his Lyre, adorned with Gems and Indian Teeth. His other Hand held the Quill, and his easy Posture spoke a consummate Artist. He then touches the Strings with a masterly Hand; whose soft Musick enchanting Tmolus, he judges Pan to submit the Reed to the Lyre. This Judgment and Decision of the sacred Mountain is approv'd by all; Midas alone murmurs, and calls it unjust. Nor does the Delian God suffer his untun'd Ears to wear a human Form, but lengthens them out, and covers them with grey Hairs, and makes them unstable, and moveable in their lower Parts. The rest of his Body retains the Form of Man, for he is punished in one Part only, and puts on the Ears of a slow-moving Ass.

V. He indeed conceals his Misfortune, and endeavours to hide the Dishonour of his Temples, by wrapping them round with a purple Turbant. But a Servant, employed to cut his Hair, when long, saw the Deformity; who, not daring to discover his Master's Reproach, impatient as he was to publish it, and yet unable to keep the Secret, retir'd to a proper Place, dug up the Ground, and repeats, in a low Voice, what Kind of Ears he had beheld on his Master, whispering it to the hollow Earth; and, by replacing the Mould, buries this Discovery of his voice, and, silent, leaves the covered Trench. Here a thick Grove of trembling reeds began to rise, which, ripening with the revolving Year, betray'd the Tiller; and, mov'd by a gentle South Wind, it repeats the Words that had been there buried, and reveals the Secret of Midas's Ears.

VI. The Son of Latona, having thus satisfied his Revenge, leaves Tmolus; and, passing through the liquid Skies, rests in the Plains of Laomedon, near the narrow strait of Nepheleian Helle. To the Right of Sigæum, and Left of the far projecting Rhoetæan Promontory, stands an ancient Altar, sacred to the Panomphæan Thunderer. Thence he first spies Laomedon raising the Walls of new Troy; and that the mighty Design was carried on with great Difficulty, and at a vast Expence.
 He therefore, in Concert with the Trident-bearing Father of the swelling Deep,

The Work was finished; the King refuses the promised Reward, and accumulates his Crime, by adding Perjury to Falshood. You shall not escape unpunished, says the Ruler of the Deep, and drove all his Waves to the Walls of covetous Troy. The Earth has now the Appearance of a Sea, the copious Harvests are swept from the Plains, and all the Fields ravaged by the Billows. Nor does this Punishment atone for his Crime: A huge Sea-Monster demands the King's Daughter for his Prey; whom, bound to a Rock, Alcides delivers, and demands the Breed of Horses, his promised Reward; and, finding the Recompence of so important a Service denied him, storms the twice perjurd Walls of conquered Troy. Nor did Telamon, one of his Companions in this War, come off without Honour, but enjoys Hesiione, as his Share of the Spoils; for Peleus was distinguish'd by a Goddess-Bride. Nor is he more proud of his Grandfather than of his Father-in-Law, as many could boast of their being Grandsons to Jove, but he alone had enjoyed a Goddess.

World therefore might not behold any Thing superior to Jove, that God, tho' he felt in his Breast a powerful Flame, yet avoids the Embraces of this Goddess of the Waters, yields all his Pretensions to his Grandson Peleus, and permits him to go into the Embraces of this belov'd Sea-Nymph. There is on the Coast of Hæmonia a Bay, wrought into a bending Arch, whose Arms project, and which, did the Waves rise higher, would form a Harbour; but the Sea scarce covers the Surface of the Sand. The Beach is firm, but neither retains the Impression of Feet, nor refuses the Traveller's Steps, nor is covered with Sea-Weed. Hard by is a Myrtle Grove, planted with party-coloured Berries, and in the Middle of the Grove a Grot, uncertain whether form'd by Nature or Art, but more likely by Art. Hither Thetis was often wont to resort, naked, borne on her harness'd Dolphin. Here Peleus seiz'd you, while you lay fast bound in Sleep; and, because you was deaf to all his Sollicitations, resolves upon Violence, throwing both his Arms round your Neck. And had you not had Recourse to your wonted Art, by assuming a Variety of Shapes, the Youth had succeeded in his Attempt. But sometimes you appear'd a Bird, yet still he detain'd the Bird; sometimes a mighty Tree, Peleus clung to the Tree. The third Form you assum'd was that of a spotted Tyger: At this the Son of Æacus, affrighted, quitted his Hold. He then adores the Gods of the Waters, by Libations pour'd on the Ocean, the Entrails of Cattle, and the Smoke of Incense; 'till at length the Carpathian Sage said, from amidst the Waves; Fear not, Son of Æacus, you shall enjoy the wish'd-for Prize; only, while she lies slumbering in her cool Grot, bind the unwary Nymph with Cords and hampering Bonds. Nor let her deceive you by assuming an Hundred various Forms, but hold fast, whatever it is, 'till she returns to her first Shape. Thus the Prophet; then sunk beneath the Flood, and the Waves covered him as he uttered the last Words. Titan was now in his descending Course, and with his Pole bent downward, taking Possession of the Western Main; when the fair Nereid, retiring from the Sea, enters her wonted Cave. Scarce had Peleus seiz'd her Virgin Limbs, when she throws herself into various Shapes, 'till she found herself held fast, and her Arms extended different Ways. Then she sigh'd, and says, You overcome not, Peleus, but with the Aid of a God; and resum'd her real Form. The Hero embraces the Goddess thus reveal'd, enjoys his much-desir'd Bride, and fills her with the great Achilles.

VIII. Peleus was now happy in his Son, and happy in his Spouse, and had enjoyed every desirable Blessing without Allay, but for the unhappy Accident of killing Phocus. Maintenance was exhibited all the mild Brightness of his Father, held the Reins Government, without Violence or Bloodshed; but, at that Time disconsolate, and unlike himself, he mourn'd a Brother's Loss. Whither after the Son of Æacus arriv'd, fatigued with Care and the Length of the Way, and had enter'd the City with a few Attendants, leaving his Flocks of Cattle and Herds in a shady Vale within the Walls; when Liberty was first granted him of approaching the Prince, bringing before him in his suppliant Hand the Symbols of Peace: He informs him who he was, and of whom descended; and only conceals his involuntary Crime: signing therefore a plausible Pretence for his Flight, he requests to be admitted into the City or Kingdom. The Trachinian Prince in Return thus addresses him, with a friendly Aspect: Our Bounties are open to the meanest of the People, nor rule we over an inhospitable Kingdom: You add to this, my natural Bent, by the powerful Incitements you bring; a Name every where renowned, and a Descent from the Supreme: Waste not therefore the Time in Entreaties, you shall obtain all you regard whatever you behold as, in Part, your own; would (said he) they be better, and wept. Peleus and his Companions beg to know, what can be the occasion of such mighty Grief. To whom the King replies: Perhaps you may think that this Bird, which lives by Rapine, and is the Terror of other Birds, was Mind, equal to the Activity, Bravery, and Inclination to Violence, remarkable in that Hero, by Name Dædalion, whose Descent was from the bright Luminar who wakes Aurora, and retires the last from his Station in Heaven. Peace was my Delight, and to promote Peace and conjugal Happiness my constant Care; but my Brother delighted in cruel Wars: His Bravery brought Kings and Nations under Subjection, and still, under the present Change, is the Dread of the Thisbean Doves. He had a Daughter, Chione, who at the Age of fourteen, just marriageable, and of surpassing Beauty, was courted by a thousand Rivals. By Chance Phœbus and the Son of Maia, (as they were returning, he from his favourite Abode Delphi, the other from the Top of Cyllene) together espied her, and together were warmed with the amorous Fire. Apollo defers his Hope of Enjoyment 'till Night, but Mercury, impatient of Delay, touched the Mouth of the Virgin with his soporiferous Rod. She is entranced by the potent Touch, and subjected to the Violence of the God. Night had bespangled the Heaven with Stars: Phœbus personates an old Woman, and, in this Disguise, obtains the Bliss he had before enjoyed in Fancy. When now her mature Womb had compleated the destined Time, Autolycus is born of the Stock of the winged God, a subtle Soul, and ingenious at all Manner of Theft; who, being a perfect Master of all his Father's Artifices, was wont to make black appear white, and white, black. To Phœbus was born (for she was delivered of Twins) Philammon, renowned for Song and the Harp.

But what does it avail her to have been the Mother of Twins, and the Favourite of two of the Gods; to be descended of a gallant Father, and to boast of the Thunderer as her Grandfather? Is even Glory thus prejudicial to many? It was at least to her, who had the Presumption to prefer herself to Diana, and decry the Charms of the Goddess. Her fierce Resentment swells to Rage; Let us try however, says she, whether by Actions we can please: Nor deferred she longer her Revenge; but, bending her Bow and impelling an Arrow with the String, she, with the Reed, transfixes her guilty Tongue. Her Tongue is silent, nor do Words or Sounds follow her Essay to speak, but at once the Blood and Life forsook her in the vain Attempt. Oh, hapless Piety! what Anguish did I, her Uncle, then feel! what Consolations did I offer to my pious Brother! but the Father regards them no more than Rocks the Murmurs of the Sea; and laments, without ceasing, the Loss of his Daughter: But when he saw her on the flaming Pile, four Times he essay'd to rush into the Middle of the Flames; but four Times thence repuls'd, he with rapid Feet betakes himself to Flight, and, like a Bullock, who feels on his Neck the galling Sting of Wasps, bounds along, even where there is no Path to guide: He even then seem'd to run with more than human Swiftnefs, and you would have fancied that he had got Wings to his Feet. He therefore easily escaped our Pursuit, and, made swift by his Impatience for Death, he gains the Top of Parnassus. But Apollo pitying Dædalion, when he precipitated himself from the Summit of the Rock, changed him into a Bird, and supported him hanging in the Air upon sudden

I am come the Messenger of a heavy Calamity! Peleus commands him to declare it, whatever it was; and even the Trachinian Hero is alarm'd and trembles thro' Fear. Anetor thus relates his Tale: I had driven the weary Herd to the winding Shore, what Time the Sun, at the highest in the Middle of his Orb, looks back on as much of his Course, already passed, as yet remained for him to run: Part of the Oxen, resting their Knees upon the yellow Sand viewed as they lay, the extended watery Plains; part wandered up and down with tardy Steps; others swim, and with their tall Necks appear above the Waves. Not far from the Sea stands a Temple, adorned with neither Marble nor Gold, but raised of solid Beams, and shaded by an ancient Grove, the Habitation of Nereus and

NOTES.

348. Armenti custos Phoeus Anetor.] The Foundation of this new Fiction is historical. Æacus had two Wives, Egina and Pfamathe. By the First he had Peleus and Telamon, and by the Second Phoeus. Lycomedes, King of Scyros, Brother to Pfamathe, determined to revenge the Death of his Nephew, declared War against Ceyx, for receiving Peleus into his Kingdom. The General who commanded in that Expedition, after laying waste the Country, carried off great Drovers of Cattle, &c. and among the rest those of Peleus. Sollicitations and Entreaties were employed to pacify Lycomedes; the General was recall'd, and, to embellish the Narration, it was pretended that he had been metamorphos'd into a Rock. A lively Figure to express how the Current of that Commander's Victories, who, like a fierce Beast of Prey, had ravaged all the Country, was stopp'd on the sudden.

the Nereids. A Sailor, while busy in drying his Nets upon the Shore, told us, that these were the Gods of the Temple. Adjoining to this is a Marsh, enclosed with thick Willows, made by the stagnating Waves of the Sea. Thence a huge monstrous Wolf, rushing with vast Noise, alarms the neighbouring Parts, and falls from the fenney Woods, having his thundering Jaws besmear'd with Foam and clotted Blood, and his Eyes o'erspread with red Flame: Who, tho' at once urged by Hunger and Rage, yet hearkens more to the fierce Dictates of his Rage; for he does not think of appeasing his Hunger, and dire Thirst of Blood, by the Slaughter of Oxen, but wounds the whole Herd, and assaults them with hostile Fury. Some of us too, while we endeavour to defend the Herd, fall a Prey to his Rage and baleful Bites. The Shore, and nearest Waves, and ecchoing Lakes, are stained with Blood. But Delay may be fatal, nor does the Thing admit of Hesitation: Before all is destroyed, let us take Arms, Arms, and march in a Body equipped with Darts. Thus the Swain: But Peleus is not mov'd at the Loss, and calling to Mind his Crime, concludes, that Psamathe grieving for the Death of her Son, sent this Calamity as an Offering to the Shade of murdered Phocus. The Oetean King commands his Men to put on their Armour, and provide themselves with hostile Darts: He himself too was preparing to accompany them; but his Wife Halcyone, roused by the Tumult, runs out, and, throwing her half-platted hair behind her, hangs round her Husband's Neck, intreating now with Words, now with pleading Tears, that he would only send his Men, and, by staying behind himself, save two Lives in one. To her the Son of Æacus: O Queen! lay aside your just and dutiful Tears; the Offer you make is too much to my Advantage: I chuse to employ no Arms against this new Monster, but appease the Sea Nymph with humble Prayer. There was a high Tower, and upon the Top of it a Fire: a Place grateful to weary Ships. Thither they mount, and behold with Grief the slaughtered Bulls strewed along the Shore, the cruel Monster ravaging with bloody Jaws, and having his long Hairs stained with Gore. Upon this Peleus, extending his Hands towards the Margin of the watery Plains, deprecates the Anger of injured Psamathe, and begs her Aid: Nor is she moved by the Entreaties of the suppliant Son of Æacus, 'till Thetis interceding obtained this Favour for her Spouse. Yet still the Wolf persists, unrecalled from the furious Slaughter, keenly urged by his native Thirst of Blood, 'till, fastening upon the Neck of a mangled Heifer, he is changed by the Nymph into Marble. His Body retains all it's former Marks but the Colour: The Colour of the Stone shews that he is now no longer a Wolf, and ought now no more to be an Object of Fear. Yet neither do the Fates allow unhappy Peleus to settle in this Land: The wandering Exile visits the Magnesian Shore and there receives the Expiation of his Crime from Hæmonian Acastus.

ther, and the Prodigies that followed it, resolves to visit the Clarian God, and consult his sacred Oracles, that Consolation of Consolation of Men: For profane Phorbas, with his Thessalian Crew, had rendered the Temple at Delphi inaccessible.
 But first he imparts his Design to his faithful Halcyone. A sudden Coldness shoots thro' all her Bones, a Paleness like Box covers her Face, and her Cheeks are wet with flowing Tears. Thrice essaying to speak, thrice she watered her Face with her Tears, and Sobs interrupting her pious Complaints: What Fault of mine, said she, my dearest Lord, has thus changed your Mind? Where is that Concern for me, hitherto so remarkable in you? Can you then depart with an easy Mind, and leave your Halcyone behind you? Now you seem fond to undertake a long Journey; now am I more agreeable when at a Distance: But perhaps your Journey is over Land, and I shall have only Cause of Grief, but not of Fear, and my Concern shall be without any Apprehensions for your Safety. But the Waves, and Image of the stormy Sea, affright me; for late I saw broken Planks upon the Shore, and have often read Names upon empty Tombs. Nor let a false Confidence lull you into Security, because you have for your Father-in-Law Æolus, the Son of Hippotas, who confines the strong Winds in Caves, and can, when he pleases, appease the Tumult of the Sea: Not so; for, when once let loose, they have got Possession of the Deep, nothing checks their Course, but on they sweep, and insult Land and Sea without Distinction; they even drive before them the Clouds of Heaven, and, meeting in fierce Uproar, strike the Sky with rapid Lightning. The more I know this, (for well I know it, and have often, when a Child, seen it in my Father's Palace) the more I am alarmed with Terrors. But if your Purpose, dear Spouse, can be changed by no Prayers or Entreaties, and you are unalterably determined to sail, take me along with you, that I may share your Danger. I will then fear no more, than what I feel; we will be alike exposed to every Chance, and together encounter the Terrors of the Main. These Words and Tears of the Daughter of Æolus make a great Impression on her Husband, the Offspring of the Morning Star; for neither does the Fire of Love flame less violent in him. But neither will he be dissuaded from his intended Voyage, nor admit Halcyone to share the Danger with him; and seeks, by many Arguments, to allay her boding Fears. But yet he cannot bring her to approve his Cause: At length he added too this prevailing Motive, which alone induc'd his loving Spouse to comply. I swear by the holy Flame of my Father, that (if Heaven allows me Life) I will return before the Moon hath twice compleated her Orb. When by these Promises he had given her Hopes of his speedy Return, he forthwith orders a Ship to be hawl'd from the Dock, and rigg'd for Service with all Expedition. Which when Halcyone again beheld, as if her Mind presag'd the approaching Woe, she trembled in every Limb, and shed a Torrent of Tears. Then embracing him, she said with a mournful Air, Farewel, and immediately swoon'd away. But the youthful Band (while Ceyx is seeking Pretences for Delay) rang'd in double Rows, draw their Oars to their Breasts, off the Yards. While thus every Thing is done in Confusion, the Rage of the Storm encreases, and the fierce Winds, combining from every Quarter, augment the Tumult of the Main. The Master himself now betrays Fear, and owns he is at a Loss to comprehend their present Condition, or what to order or forbid; so mighty is the Calamity, so much it baffles all his Skill: For the Air resounds with the mingled Cries of the Sailors, the Rattling of Cordage, the Waves dashing one against another, and the redoubled Peals of Thunder. The Sea ascends in Waves, and seems to equal Heaven, and sprinkle with briny Dew the surrounding Clouds; and sometimes tossing from below the yellow Sands, it appears of a Colour with them; again, blacker than the Stygian Waves: Sometimes it is levell'd, and whitens with noisy Foam. The Trachinian Gally too feels these various Changes; and, one while rais'd on high, seems, as from the Top of a Mountain, to look down on the Vallies below, and deep Mansions of Acheron; again, subsiding with the Waves, and enclosed by the surrounding Sea, she, from the infernal Waves, surveys the Height of Heaven. Oft the Waves, beating against the Sides, make a loud Report, and rebound with noisy Din; as when the Iron Ram, or Balista, shake the batter'd Forts. And as undaunted Lyons, still more courageous as they advance, are often wont to rush upon Arms and extended Spears; in like Manner, the Waves, now driven by a Hurricane of Winds, advance against the Sides of the Ship, and tower over the Hatches. And now the Pins, that hold the Boards together, give Way; the Seams, robb'd of their Stoppage of Wax, lay open, and afford a Passage to the hostile Waves. Lo! the Clouds dissolve, and fall in copious Showers; and, you would imagine, the whole Sky pour'd down in Sheets of Rain; the Sea too, swell'd, seems to mount into the Regions of the Sky. The Sails are wet with the Rain, and the Waters of the Sea are mixed with the Waters of Heaven: The Firmament is without it's Fires, and the Horrors of the Night are doubled by it's own Darkness, and that of the Storm together. Yet even these are dispers'd by frequent Flashes of Lightning that afford a sudden Gleam; the Sea seems all on Fire with these Blazes breaking from the Sky. And now the Waves jump about within the hollow Texture of the Ship: And as a Soldier distinguish'd by his Valour from all the rest, after often assaulting the Walls of a defended City, enjoys his Hopes at length; and, influenc'd with a Desire of Praise, tho' but One among a Thousand, possesses himself of the Walls; so, while the invading Billows batter the Sides of the Ship, the Fury of the Tenth Wave, rising above the rest, advances with impetuous Sway; nor ceases to assault the Vessel's batter'd Ribs, 'till it, as it were, descends within the Walls of the yielding Ship. Part therefore of the Waves still attempt to get into the Ship; Part had already seized the Prize. The whole Crew are now in Walls without, others have got Possession of them within. Art fails; their Courage, sinks, and Death seems to rush upon them in as many different Shapes, as are the Waves that come pouring in on every Side. One cannot refrain from Tears, another is quite stupified with Grief, a third counts those happy whom funeral Honours await. This Man addresses the Gods in Prayer, and stretching forth his Hands towards Heaven, which he cannot see, in vain begs Relief. One calls to Mind his Brothers and Parents, another his Family and Children, and every dear Pledge left behind him. Ceyx thinks only of his Halcyone; no Name, but that of Halcyone, is in his Mouth; and tho' he wishes for her alone, yet is he glad that she is absent. He would have fain too look'd back on his native Coasts, and turn'd his last Views towards his Home, but he knows not where they are; so mighty a Hurricane embroils the Sea, and the whole Face of Heaven lies hid under a dark Shade of pitchy Clouds, doubling the gloomy Image of Night. The Mast is broke down by the Violence of the Storm, the Rudder too is borne away, and the insulting Surge, standing over the Spoil, looks down with an air of Triumph on the Waves below; and, tumbling, rushes with no less Violence, than if Athos and Pindus, torn from their Foundations, were precipitated into the Sea; and, by the Weight and Stroke together, sinks the Ship to the Bottom. With her a great Part of the Crew plunged into the Deep, nor rising again, paid the Debt of Fate. Others grasp the Beams and broken Fragments of the Ship.

broken Plank, and in vain, alas! invokes his Father and Father-in-Law: But chiefly, as he swims, he calls upon Halcyone; her he remembers, her Name he repeats, and wishes that his dead Body, wafted to Shore by the Waves, may meet her searching Eyes, and be buried by her friendly Hands. While he swims, as often as the Waves permit him to open his Mouth, he calls upon Halcyone, and murmurs her dear Name even under the Deep. When lo! a bending Arch of Water breaks over the mid Waves, and whelms his Head beneath the foaming surge. Lucifer, obscure that Night, and such that you could not know him, because he was not permitted to leave his Station in Heaven, hid his Face under thick Clouds. Mean time the Daughter of Æolus, ignorant of this mighty Disaster, computes the Nights, and hastens, against the promis'd Time, a Robe for him to wear, hastens a Garment for herself too, and flatters herself with the vain hope of his Return. She indeed offered pious Incense to all the heavenly Powers, it, above all, paid her Adorations at the Temple of Juno, and came to the Altars to intercede for her Husband, who was now no more. She offered up Vows for his Safety and Return, and that no Rival might possess his Heart: But this last one, of all the Requests she made, was granted her. And now the Goddesses, tired of these vain Devotions for the Dead, that she might repel her polluted Hands from the Altars; Go, said she, Iris, thou faithful Messenger of my Commands, Ceyx deceas'd, a Dream, that shall inform Halcyone of her real Misfortune. She said; when Iris, clad in her Robe of a thousand Colours, and marking the Heavens with a bending Arch, repairs as ordered to the Palace of the King, deep under a hollow Rock. There is, near the Abode of the Cimmerians, a Cave in a long Recess, form'd of a hollow Mountain, the Palace and Habitation of the drowzy God; whither Phœbus, whether rising, in his mid Course, or setting, can never penetrate with his Rays. Fogs, mix'd with Darknes, are exhal'd from the Ground, and the Twilight of a doubtful Sky. Here no crowing Cock calls up the Morning with his horny Bill; nor do watchful Dogs, or Geese still more wakeful than Dogs, disturb with their Noise the Silence of the Place. Nor wild Beasts, nor Cattle, nor Boughs bending to the Wind, nor the Clamours of a human Tongue, produce any Likeness of Sound, but mute Rest has here her Abode; and a Branch of the River Lethe, issuing from the Bottom of the Rock, and creeping over the Pebbles, invites to Sleep by it's gentle Murmurs. At the Mouth of the Cave Poppies grow in Crowds, and innumerable Herbs; from whose Juice humid Night gathers her sleepy Power, and scatters it over the darken'd Earth. In the whole Palace was no Door, that, in turning on Hinges, might occasion a Noise; no Porter was station'd to guard the Entrance. But in the Middle of the Hall is a Bed, rais'd high on black Ebony, stuff'd with black Feathers, and covered with a black Quilt, on which the God himself lyes; his Limbs dissolved in Sloth.

Sloth. Around his Head fantastick Visions fly in various Forms, numerous as Ears of Corn in Harvest, Leaves in the Woods, or Sand on the Sea Shore. Whither, as soon as the Virgin entered, and with her Hand repell'd the opposing Dreams, the sacred Dome shone with the Splendor of her Robe; and the God; scarce able to raise his Eyes, sunk in languid Sloth; and again and again relapsing, and knocking the Top of his breast with his Chin, at length shook off himself; and, leaning on his Elbow, ask'd her (for he knew her) the Cause of her coming.
 But she: Sleep, thou Rest of all Things; Sleep, thou gentlest of the Gods; thou Peace of the Mind, before whom Care flies; who refreshest the Body, spent with the Toils of the Day, and reparaest it's Decays: Command a Dream, equalling in the Resemblance real Forms, and bearing the Image of the King, to hasten to Halcyone in Herculean Trachis, and let it assume the Appearance of one who has been shipwreck'd; so Juno commands. Iris, having thus delivered her Message, retir'd: For she could not longer support the Violence of the Vapour; but, finding that Sleep stole upon her Limbs, she fled, and swiftly ascended the Bow by which she came. But Father Sleep, from the Crowd of his thousand Sons, selects Morpheus, a skilful Artist, and one who could best belye the human Form.
 Than him could none of the Brothers better express the Gait, Countenance, and Manner of Speaking; he could assume too the Habit, and one's most familiar Words.

Est etiam tertius diversæ artis, nomine Phantasos. Ille feliciter transit in humum, saxumque, undamque, trabemque, omniaque, quæ vacant anima. Hi solent ostendere suos vultus nocte regibus ducibusque; alii pererrant populos plebemque. Senior Somnus præterit hos, eligitque e cunctis fratribus unum Morphea, qui peragat edita Thaumantidos, et rursus solutus molli languore, deposuitque caput, recondiditque strato alto. Ille volat per tenebras alis facientibus nullos strepitus, intraque breve tempus moræ, pervenit in urbem Hæmoniam: pennisque positus e corpore, abit in faciem Ceycis, subque illa forma, luridus, similis exsanguis, sine ullis vestibus, stetit ante torum miseræ conjugis. Barba viri videtur uda, undaque gravis fluere madidis capillis. Tum incumbens lecto, fletu refuso super ora, ait hæc: Miserrima conjux, agnoscis Ceyca? an mea facies est mutata nece? Respice; nosces; inveniesque umbram conjugis pro tuo conjuge. Tua vota, Halcyone, tulerunt nil opis nobis. Occidimus. Noli promittere me tibi falsæ.

Words. He indeed imitates Men only; another becomes a wild Beast, a Bird, or Serpent with lengthen'd Train: Him the Gods above call Icelos, but the Race of Mortals Phobetor. There is a third too, Phantasy, an Artist of a different Kind. He happily passes into Earth or Stone, a Wave or Beam, and every Form destitute of Life. These three are wont to display themselves in the Night to Kings and mighty Chiefs; the rest attend the People and ignoble Crowd. The aged God passes by these, and, of all the Brothers, chuses only Morpheus to execute the Commands of the Daughter of Thaumias; then again dropt down his Head, dissolv'd in Sleep, and shrunk within the Bed. He flies thro' the Dark with Wings that make no Noise, and, in a very little Time, arrived in the Hæmonian City; when, divesting himself of his Wings, he assumes the Shape of Ceyx; and, in that Form, pale, bloodless, and naked, stood before the Bed of his wretched Spouse. His Beard seem'd wet, and the Drops to fall thick from his humid Locks. Then leaning on the Bed, and with his Face bath'd in Tears; My most wretched Wife, says he, dost thou know thy Ceyx? or, are my Looks changed by Death? Observe me well; you will know me, and find, instead of your Husband, your Husband's Shade. Thy Prayers, Halcyone, have nought avail'd, I have yielded to Fate; flatter not thyself therefore with the vain Hope of my Return. The cloudy South-Wind o'ertook our Galley in the Ægean Sea, and, tossing her with it's dreadful Hurricane, at length dash'd her to Pieces, and the Billows stopp'd my Breath, calling in vain upon your Name. No uncertain Author brings this mournful News, nor hearest thou it from the flying Breath of Fame: I myself in Person am present before you, and tell the Story of my own Wreck. Rise, rise, shed Tears, and put on Mourning; nor send me unlamented to the dreary Realms of Tartarus. To all this Morpheus join'd a Voice, such as he might take for that of her Husband; he seem'd also to shed real Tears, and the Gesture of his Hands spoke him to be Ceyx. Halcyone, all in Tears, groans within herself, and moves her Arms about in her Sleep; and, catching at the Body, grasps the Air, and calls out, Stay; whither so fast? I will go along with you. Disturb'd thus by the Voice and Appearance of her Husband, she disengages herself from Sleep, and first looks round, if he, whom she so lately saw, be near; for her Servants, wak'd by the Noise, had brought in a Light. When she finds him no where, she beats her Face with her Hand, and tears the Robe from her Breast, and smites her Breast itself. Nor does she think of unbinding her Hair, but tears it; and says to her Nurse, who enquir'd the Cause of her Grief; Halcyone, Halcyone is no more; she is perish'd with her dear Ceyx: Cease to comfort me; he is destroy'd by Shipwreck. I saw and knew him, and, desirous to detain him, extended my Arms to him as he seem'd to depart. His Ghost fled; yet was it the manifest and real Ghost of my Husband. He had not indeed his wonted Countenance, nor were his Looks enlivened with their usual Lustre. Hapless! I saw him pale, naked, and with Hair still wet. Lo! ill-fated Man! here he stood, in this very Place; and she looks if as yet the Prints of his Feet might still remain. This it was; 'twas this I fear'd in my foreboding Mind; and begg'd that you might not forsake me and follow the Winds. But I, however, could have wish'd, since thou didst go, never to return again, thou hadst also carried me along with thee; with thee to have gone had for me happy been: For then I had not pass'd any of my Time without thee, nor had my Death disjointed been from thee. Now, absent from thee, I die; and, absent, by the Waves I'm toss'd; the Sea has thee without me. My Heart more cruel were than Sea itself, should I endeavour Life to lengthen, and struggle to survive so great a Grief: But neither will I struggle, nor wretched thee relinquish. Thy Companion now, at least, I'll come; and in the Grave, if not the Urn, yet the Inscription shall us join; and if I touch not Bones with Bones, yet Name with Name I shall. More Grief forbids, and Wailings come between each Word, and Sighs are fetch'd from her astonish'd Heart. 'Twas Morning; she goes out to the Shore, and, mournful, sought the Spot, whence she had seen him go, and says: While here he linger'd, and while here he loos'd his Cables, at parting he me

Kisses gave upon this Shore: And, while she with her Eyes the Place does mark, she recollects what pass'd, and throws a broad Look on the Sea. At Distance, on the liquid Wave, she espies, I know not what, that seem'd a Corse. At first, it was uncertain what it might be; but, after that the Water had something nearer wafted it, tho' still at Distance, plainly it appear'd to be a Corse. Ignorant who it might be, yet, because shipwreck'd, she's at the Omen mov'd, and would, as for a Stranger, shed a Tear. Alas! poor Wretch! she says, whoe'er thou be, and if thou hast e'er a Wife! The Corse, still wafted by the Waves, does nearer come! which the more she views, the less she is herself. And now she sees it brought quite to the Land, and what she now could well distinguish. 'Twas her Husband! 'Tis he, she cries; and, at the Instant, tears her Face, her Hair, her Vest, and stretching out her trembling Hands to Ceyx; Thus, Oh, dearest Husband! aloud she cries, thus wretched to me dost thou now return! Upon the Sea adjoins an artificial Mole, which breaks the Waves' first Fury, and Waters' Shock does weaken: On that she leaps and 'twas surprizing that she could: She flew; and, with Wings new made, now striking the light Air, she skims a wretched Bird the topmost Waves; and, while she flies, her creaking slender Bill gives forth a Sound, mournful and plaintful. But, as she touch'd the dumb and bloodless Corse, embracing the dear Limbs in her new Wings, in vain she with her harden'd Bill cold Kisses gave. The Vulgar were in Doubt, whether Ceyx felt all this, or seem'd to raise his Head, mov'd by the Wave. But he had felt; and, at length, the Gods them pitying, they both are chang'd to Birds. Then too remain'd their Love, obnoxious to the self-same Fate: nor is dissolv'd, when Birds, their Union conjugal: They couple, and they Parents do become; and, in Winter Time, for seven calm Days Halcyone sits brooding on her Nest, hanging on the Sea: 'Tis then Sea-faring safe does prove. Æolus keeps and restrains the Winds from falling out, and does secure a smooth Sea for his Grand children.

NOTES.

758. Frater fuit Hectoris iste.] Ovid and Apollodorus agree, that Æsacus was the Son of Priam, and that he was transform'd into a Didapper; but they differ as to the other Circumstances of this History. For the Latter tells us, that Æsacus was the Son of Priam and Arisba, the Daughter of Merope, his first Wife; that his Father made him marry Ste-rope, who having died very young, he was so afflicted therewith, that he flung himself into the Sea. His Transformation into a Didapper is one of those Episodes, that was invented to console the Parents; a Key which ought often to serve as a Principle, for explaining these Sorts of Events.

not a strange Fate undergone in Dawn of Youth, would have had a Name, perhaps, to Hector not inferior; tho' Dymas' Daughter bore this last. Alexirrhoe, the Daughter of the two-horn'd Granicus, is said to have brought forth Æsacus by Stealth under the shady Ida. He loath'd the Cities, and, distant from the splendid Court, did frequent the lonely Mountains and unambitious Country, nor went but rarely to the Trojan Meetings; yet, having not a Breast, or clownish, or impregnable to Love, he Hesperie espies, Cebrenus' Daughter, often surpris'd in every Wood, drying in the Sun, upon her Father's Bank, her Hair, thrown on her Shoulders. The Nymph, when seen, flies; as does the frighten'd Doe, the tawny Wolf; and as the Water-Duck, the Hawk, surpris'd at Distance from her wonted Lake: Whom the Trojan Hero does pursue, and, swift with Love, does urge her, wing'd with Fear. When lo! a Snake, lurking in the Grass, wounds with it's crooked Tooth her flying Foot, and leaves it's Venom in her Body.
 Her Flight is with her Life repress'd. Frantic, he grasps her, breathless; and cries aloud, I grieve! I grieve to have pursued thus!—But this I never fear'd; nor did I so much rate the Conquest. We two have wretched thee destroy'd: The Wound was given by the Serpent, but by me the Cause. More guilty should I be than he, did I not send thee Comforts of Death in mine. He spoke; and from a Rock, which the hoarse Wave had undermin'd, jump'd into the Sea. Te-thys, in Pity, softly receiv'd him, falling, cloath'd him with Feathers, as he swam the Sea, denying him the Power of wish'd-for Death. The Lover raves to be oblig'd to live, and that his Soul, willing to quit it's wretched Seat, is baulk'd.

And, as he had took new Wings to his Shoulders, he upwards flies; then throws his Body on the Sea: His Feathers break the Fall. Æsacus storms, and, prone, he plunges deep, incessant tries the Way of Death. Love caus'd his Leanness.
Long are his Legs; his Neck continues long; his Head is distant from his Body:
He loves the Sea, and has a Name, because he plunges in it.

NOTES.

The Dispute between Ajax and Ulysses about the Armour of Achilles, with which this Book is introduc'd, is undoubtedly the Masterpiece of our Poet. In the Speech of Ajax, we see the blunt Freedom of a plain Soldier, forward, impetuous, and full of Fire ; in that of Ulysses, a sweet flowing Eloquence, artificial and insinuating. But, what is yet more material, the Poet here decides a Question of the greatest Importance ; whether Wisdom or Valour ought to carry the Prize. Cicero has discuss'd this Point with all the Force and Delicacy of a great Orator : But, in my Opinion, Ovid is inimitable on this Head, particularly for his ingenious Manner of deciding the Dispute. The Poet has perfectly describ'd his two Heroes, and given us their real Characters. But I shall wave these Reflections, to come to the Fable itself, which makes the Subject of these two Speeches ; after first observing, that, to enter into all their Beauties, we must be perfectly acquainted with what Homer says of these two Princes.

It is generally known, that there were at the Siege of Troy two who bore the Name of Ajax ; the one the Son of Oileus, King of the Locrians ; the other, the Son of Telamon, and Grandson of Æacus ; which last is the Ajax here concerned. He was the most valiant of the Greeks next to Achilles, and, like him, stern, brutal, and outrageous. Sophocles represents him as an Atheist, who, when his Father exhorted him to depend upon the Gods for Victory, replied, the most arrant Cowards may be victorious with such assistance, but that, for his Part, he was sure of Victory without it. After his Dispute with Ulysses, the Preference given to his Competitor turn'd him delirious. He fell upon some Flocks, thinking to have slain his Enemies ; and, finding his Mistake, kill'd himself in the Anguish of his Soul, in the last Year of the Siege of Troy. But in this, as in every other Article, we find great Diversity of Opinions among the Ancients. For Suidas, after Diogenes, says, these two Heroes disputed not for the Arms of Achilles, but for the Palladium. These Authors add, that Agamemnon having adjudg'd it to Ulysses, Ajax vow'd Revenge ; and that Agamemnon, in Concert with the other Captains, who were afraid of him, assassinated him in his Tent ; that Ulysses, who was suspected of being the Author, was obliged to set out incognito, and the Army retained a high resentment against Agamemnon. Ajax, says Ovid, was transform'd into a Flower after his Death. The two first Letters of his Name, as also the Complaints of Hyacinthus, ai were marked upon this Flower. This Fable has seemingly no other Foundation, but the Flattery of a Wit, who invented this Circumstance in the funeral Oration on that Hero. For further Satisfaction, the Reader may consult the Note upon Hyacinthus in a former Book.

before these Ships our Cause; and does Ulysses vie with me! But yet he scrupled not to yield to Hector's Flames, which I sustain'd, and from this Fleet repell'd. 'Tis safer then to vie in artful Words than Deeds of Arms: But neither is my Talent Speaking, nor his to act; and how much I in the fierce War can do, and in the Field, so much can he in Speaking. Neither, Pelasgians, do I think my Feats need be to you related; you were Eye-Witnesses to them: Let Ulysses his recount, which without Witness he perform'd; of which the Night alone was conscious. I own the Prize demanded to be great; but Ajax's Rival takes from the Honour of it. 'Tis no wise brave to have gain'd, tho' vast, the Prize; whatever Ulysses might have hop'd for: He has already got all the Reward he might expect from this Contention, in which, when overcome, he shall be said with me to have contended. And I, were in the least my Prowess to be question'd, would sure by Birth prevail, being Son of Telamon, who under valiant Hercules took Troy Walls, and in Pegasæan Ship enter'd the Colchic Shores: His Father, Æacus; who to the Silent there gives Laws, where a huge Rock incessant urgeth Sisyphus, the Son of Æolus: Jupiter supreme owns Æacus, and him confesses for his Offspring: Thus Ajax stands the Third from Jupiter. Nor yet let this Descent avail me in the Cause, ye Greeks, if common not to me with great Achilles. He was my Cousin: I only ask what was my Cousin's. To what End then does he, that sprung his ill-discover'd Madness, feign'd to betray the Grecian Interest, and proved his feigned Charge; and shews the Gold, himself had hidden in his Tent before: Therefore, or by Banishment or Death, he has drained the Greeks of their best Strength. Thus fights Ulysses, thus to be dreaded is he: Who tho' in Eloquence excelling faithful Nestor too, yet never will he make me think that the forsaking Nestor was no Crime; who, slow thro' his Steed's Wound, and spent with Age, imploring Ulysses, his Companion's Aid, was by him base betray'd. The Son of Tydeus knows well this Charge to be no Fiction; who chid him, often call'd by Name, and did reproach Flight to his trembling Friend. The Gods above with just Eyes survey the Affairs of Men. Lo! he, who did not bring, wants Aid himself; and, as he left, so was he doomed to be left: Such Law he made for himself. He calls out his Companions. I come; I see him trembling, and pale with Fear, and shuddering at the future Death; and I, my Shield's Bulk opposing, screen'd him as he lay, and sav'd (and here the least is of my Praise) that dastard Soul. Persistest thou to vie? Let us again to the same Spot return; restore the Foe, thy Wound and wonted Fear, and sculk behind my Shield, and there contend with me. But after him I snatch'd, whom then his Wounds gave no Strength to stand; retarded by no Wound he flies. Hector comes on, and brings Him, flush'd with the Success of bloody Slaughter, I in close Fight laid flat with a huge Load of Rock. And only I stood him, demanding whom to fight; and, Greeks, ye vow'd my Lot, and even your Vow prevail'd: If you enquire the Issue of this Fight, I was not worsted by him. But, lo! the Trojans bring, and Fire, and Sword, and Jove, against the Grecian Fleet. Where now is eloquent Ulysses? I then covered with my Breast a thousand Ships, the Hopes of your Return: Grant for so many Ships the Arms at least. And, if I may speak the Truth, the greater Honour far is fought for them than me, and both our Glory is conjoin'd; and Ajax fought for the Arms, and not the Arms for Ajax. With these let Ithacus compare his Rhesus and his feeble Dolon, and Helenus the Son of Priam, made Captive, with the ravish'd Pallas. Nothing was done by Day, nothing when Diomed was wanting: If once these Arms you give to such mean Services, divide them, and let Diomed's be the larger Share. Yet why for Ithacus these Arms? who underhand, who ever acts unarm'd, and does deceive the unwary Foe by Stealths? The very Splendor of the Helmet, radiant with flashing Gold, will all his Schemes betray, and latent him disclose. But neither will Dulichian Head be able, under Achilles' Helmet, Nam Laërtes est pater mihi, Arceſius illi, Jupiter huic: neque est quisquam damnatus et exul in his. Cyllenius quoque, altera nobilitas, est addita nobis per matrem. Deus est in utroque parente. Sed neque pro proposita arma, quod sum generosior materno ortu, nec quod est mihi pater inſons fraterni sanguinis: expendite causam meritis; dummodo non sit meritum Ajacis, quod Telamon Peleusque fuerunt fratres, nec ordo sanguinis, sed bonos virtutis quærat in istis spoliis. For Descent and Ancestors, and what we have not done ourselves, I scarce call these our own: But since Ajax boasts, that he the great Grandson is of Jupiter; Jove too is Founder of our Blood, and by so many Steps we are distant from him. For Laertes is my Father; Arceſius, his; Jupiter, his; nor any of them ever was condemn'd or banish'd. By the Mother too, Cyllenian Mercury, another Ornament, is added to our Race. A God is in each Parent. But neither that I am more noble by my Mother's Side, nor that my Sire is guiltless of fraternal Blood, do I the Arms in question claim: By Merits weigh the Cause: So it not Ajax's Merit be, that Telamon and Peleus Brothers were; nor Rank of Blood, but Virtue's Honour be regarded in these Spoils. Or if Proximity, and the next Heir be sought, his Father Peleus is, Pyrrhus is his Son. What Room for Ajax then? Let them to Phthia and Scyros be convey'd. Nor is Teucer less related to Achilles: Yet, does he claim? does he expect to bear away the Arms? Since the pure Dispute is Merit, I have indeed atchieved Greeks, and now a thousand Ships had fill'd the Euboic Aulis, Winds, long expected, are either none or contrary; and the fell Oracles bid Agamemnon sacrifice his guiltless Daughter to the fierce Diana. This the Sire denies, and raves against the Gods themselves; and in the King the Father is. I, to the public Good, the gentle Disposition of the Father sway'd by my fair Words: I now make this Confession, and let Atrides forgive me, as I do. Before a partial Judge a hard Cause I gain'd: Yet the Advantage of the People, and his Brother, and the chief Command conferr'd on him, move him to balance Praise with Blood. I am also to the Mother sent, not to be gain'd, but sooth'd; whither had Ajax gone, 'till now our Sails had been without their Winds. I am also sent a dauntless Orator to Trojan Towers: I both saw and enter'd the Senate-House of lofty Troy; and full of Heroes yet. Undauntedly I plead the Cause, which Greece in common had to me entrusted: And Paris I accuse, demand the Plunder back, and Helen. Priam I move, and Antenor too join'd to Priam: But Paris and his Brothers, and who under him had ravish'd, scarce held their wicked Hands; (this, Menelaus, thou knowest) and that the first Day of our Danger was with thee. It would be long the tedious War. After the first Encounters, the Enemy kept long within the Walls, nor was there any Opportunity of open Fight: At length we, in the tenth Year, fought. What do'st thou the while, who nothing know'st but Battles? What was thy Service then? For should'st thou into my Deeds enquire; I lie in Ambush for the Enemy, I fortify the Trenches; I our Allies cheer, with Calmness the Fatigues of a long War to bear: I shew, how we may be supported, and how arm'd; sent I am where Need requires. Lo! by Jove's Advice, the King, deceiv'd by Dream, bids lay aside Care of the War begun. His Part he could defend by the Author of it. Would Ajax disallow it, and demand that Troy be raz'd; and would he fight, the only Thing he can. Why stops he not their Flight? why take not Arms? and suggests not what the unsteady Vulgar may pursue? This had not been too much for one that never speaks, but big. What, that thou did'st fly? I saw, and asham'd I was to see, when thou did'st give thy Back, and did'st prepare dishonourable Sails. Instant I said, What are you all about? What Madness, Friends, thus moves you to quit Troy, already ours? What do you carry Home on the tenth Year, but Shame? With these and the like Words, to which Grief itself had made me eloquent, I from the flying Fleet reduc'd the Greeks averse. The Son of Atreus calls his Friends together, alarm'd with Language to attack the Kings, tho' not by me unpunish'd. I rouse and exhort my trembling Countrymen against the Foe, and by my Voice reclaim their Con-rage lost. From that Time forth, whatever he may seem to have acted bravely, is justly mine; whom, giving way, from Flight I drew. In Fine, who of the Greeks or praiseth, or who sues to thee? But Diomed with me shares all his Deeds; me he approves, always confides, Ulysses his Companion: 'Tis something, of so many thousand Greeks, to be by Diomed singled out alone. Nor did the Lot order my going forth: Yet thus, fighting the Dangers, and of the Night, and Foe, Dolon, of the Phrygian Race, I slay, daring the same Attempt we dar'd; yet not before I forc'd him to discover all, and learn'd what treacherous Troy design'd.

 All I had known; nor had I further what to spy: And now I might return with my promised Praise. But, not content with this, I sought the Tents of Rhesus, and in his very Camp slew him and his Companions. And thus being Victor, and my Vows obtain'd, I enter in the captive Chariot, in Manner of a joyful Triumph; whose Steeds the Foe demanded, as the Price for one Night's Service. Deny me then his Arms; and Ajax deemed be more generous in his Services than I. What Countrymen, I too have Wounds, honourable by their Place: Believe not empty Words; here see; and with his Hand pulls down his Vest; and these, he says, are Breasts ever in your Affairs employ'd. But Ajax has not for his Friends, in all these Years, spent one single Drop of Blood; and has a Body without e'er a Wound. Yet what availeth this, if you he tells, he took up Arms for the Pelasgian Fleet against both Jove and Trojans? And, I confess, he did; nor is it mine with Malice to detract from brave Exploits of others: But let him not alone lay Claim to common Feats, but too restore to you some Share of Honour. Patroclus, Aëtor's Descendant, safe under the Appearance of Achilles, repell'd the Trojans from the Ships, just ready to be burnt, with their Defender. He too, unmindful of the King, and Chiefs, and me, imagines he alone in single Combat durst encounter Hector: He was the Ninth in Duty, and preferr'd by Favour of the Lot. But yet, O bravest Chief, what Issue had your Combat? Hector comes off unwounded. Ah! wretched me! with how much Grief am I compell'd to recollect that Time, in which Achilles, the Grecian Bulwark, Bulwark, fell! Nor Tears, or Grief, or Fear, stay'd me from bearing aloft his Body from the Ground: on these my Shoulders, these my very Shoulders, I bore off Achilles's Body with his Arms; which now I strive to win. I have the Nerves which may suffice for such a Weight, and certainly the Soul that shall resent your Honours. Was then, forsooth, his Mother, the green Thetis, ambitious for her Son, that the celestial Gift, the Work of so much Art, a stupid Soldier, without Genius, should put on? Nor can he understand the Engravings of the Shield; the Ocean, and the Earth and Stars, with the high Heaven, and Pleiades, and Hyades, and the Bear undipt in the Sea, and the two differing Towns, and Orion's glittering Sword: Arms he insists to have, he does not understand. What, that he charges me the Service of the toilsome War declining, and to have join'd late the Toil begun? And does he not perceive, that he in this the brave Achilles does defame? If then to have dissembled, this he call a Crime, we both dissembled: If Delay stand for a Fault, I earlier was than he. Me a fond Wife detain'd, Achilles a fond Mother: To them were the first Times, to you the rest assign'd. I'm under no Concern, if now I cannot ward that Charge, common to me with him, a Man so great: Yet he was by Ulysses's Wit found out; Ulysses not by Ajax's. And, that we may objects to you Shame-worthy Things. Is it base for me with a false Crime to have charged Palamedes, honourable for you to have condemn'd him? But neither could Palamedes, Nauplius' Son, so great, so evident, a Crime defend: Nor did you hear, but see the Crimes in him; and by the Bribe the Charge was manifest. Neither have I deserved to bear the Guilt, that the Vulcanian Lemnos holds Philoctetes, Pœan's Son: Greeks, your own Act defend; for you consented: Nor that I advised, shall I deny, him to withdraw from the Toil, and of the War, and Voyage, and try to assuage by Rest his cruel Pains. He obey'd, and liveth still. This Advice not only faithful was, but fortunate also; though it sufficeth to be faithful. Whom since our Prophets, Pergamus to raze, demand, charge not me therewith. The Son of Telamon will better go, and soften by his Eloquence the Hero, mad with Distemper and Resentment; or shrewdly by some Wile will draw him thence: Sooner will Simois backward flow, and Ida stand without its Leaves, and Greece to Troy Assistance promise, than, my Breast ceasing for your Interest, the Wit of stupid Ajax can the Greeks avail. Tho' thou, dire Philoctetes, be incens'd against the Allies, and King, and me; tho' thou curse and devote my Head incessant, and desire I might in thy Anguish chance to meet thee, and to draw my Blood: And as I might have thee in my Power, so thou have me in thine; yet I'll attempt thee, and endeavour to bring thee back with me.

And so, Fortune favour, be Master of thy Arrows, as of the Trojan Prophet, whom I took; and as the Answers of the Gods discover'd, and the Fate of Troy, and as I carried off the secret Statue of the Phrygian Pallas from amidst the Foe. And does Ajax then himself compare with me? The Fates, it seems, forbid the taking Troy without it: Where is the valiant Ajax? Where are the mighty Man's big Words? Why art thou here afraid? Why dares Ulysses venture thro' the Guards, and trust himself to Night? and thro' fell Swords to enter Trojan Walls not only, but even their highest Citadel, and snatch the Goddess from her Shrine, and, snatch'd, convey her off amidst the Foe? Which had not I perform'd, in vain, on his Left Arm, had Ajax bore the Hides of seven Bulls. That Night Troy's Conquest was my Purchase: I Pergamus then conquer'd, when I forc'd it to be conquerable. Cease by thy Looks and Muttering to shew me Tydeus's Son. He has his Share of Glory. Nor wast thou alone, when for the allied Fleet thou heldest out the Shield; thou hadst a Multitude, I but one alone; who, did he not well know a fighting Man less valuable than the wise, nor such Reward due to bare Force untam'd, would himself sue for them too; the more moderate Ajax would, and fierce Eurypilus, and fam'd Andremon's Son: Nor less, Idomeneus, and Merion, from the same Country sprung; the Brother of the elder Atrides would too put in his Claim. they to my Wisdom yielded. A Hand thou hast of Use in War, but Head that wanteth our Direction: Brawn without Brain thou hast; mine the Care is of Futurity. Thou can'st fight, 'tis true; but with me the Son of Atreus the Times of fighting chuses. Thou only dost avail in Body; I in Mind: And by how much the Man who steers the Ship excels the Rower's Part, and by how much the General is greater than the common Soldier, so much I thee excel: There also in my Body lodges a Soul, better far than Hands; in it is all my Vigor. But now, you Chiefs, reward your trusty Watchman; and, for the Care of Years so many, which I have anxious spent, grant now this Honour, ballanc'd by our Deserts. Our Toil is now in it's Close: I have the withstanding Fates remov'd, and taken lofty Troy, by being made liable to Conquest. Now by our common Hopes and falling Walls of Troy, and by the Gods, I lately from the Enemy took; by what, if any thing remains by Wisdom to be done, if any thing adventurous still and hazardous; if you can think of any thing still wanting to the Fates of Troy, I ask, remember me; or, if to me the Arms you give not, give them at least to this; and shews Minerva's fatal Statue.

The Chiefs were moved all to a Man; and then in Fact appear'd, what Eloquence could do; and thus the Eloquent the Arms of the Brave did win. And he, who not his own Wrath alone sustain ; and Grief o'ercomes the unconquerable Man.

His Sword he snatches : And sure this is mine ! or will Ulysses claim this also for himself ? This I must on myself employ ; and what has often moistened been with Blood of Phrygians, shall now be moistened with it's Owner's Blood ; that none, but Ajax's Self, may Ajax conquer. He spoke ; and plung'd the fatal Sword into his Breast, then for the first Time wounded, where it lay open to the Sword : nor could his Hands pull back the Sword infix'd : The Blood itself did push it out.
And now the Earth, made red with Blood, produc'd from the green Turf a purple Iespont runs narrowing, Troy was all on Flames; nor had the Flames yet ceas'd.

 And now Jove's Altar had drank up the little Blood still left in aged Priam's Veins.
 Apollo's Priestess, dragg'd by the Hair, stretch'd her unavailing Hands to Heaven.
 The victor Greeks do drag along Dardanian Matrons, their invidious Prey, embracing, whilst they can, the Statues of their Country Gods, and keeping in the Temples, tho' on Fire. Down from those Towers Aftyanax is thrown, whence he was often wont to see his Father, by his Mother shewn, fighting for himself, and bravely defending his paternal Kingdom. Now Boreas calls to Sea, and Sails, wav'd with a prosperous Gale, resound; the Sailor bids them use the Wind.
 Dear Troy, adieu! the Trojan Women cry; we now are hurried off: Then they kiss the Earth, and quit the smoking Houses of their Country: Last goes aboard the Fleet, a melancholy Sight! Hecuba, found amidst her Children's Sepulchres, Palace was of Polymnestor, to whom thy Father, Polydorus, committed thee to be in Privacy brought up, and far remov'd from Phrygian Arms: A wise Precaution this! had he not too great Riches added; the Prize of Wickedness, the Incentive of a covetous Mind. As Phrygian Fortune fell, the wicked King of Thracians takes the Sword, and plunges in his Foster's Throat; and as if Crimes could with the Body be removed, he threw it lifeless from a Rock into the subject Waters. On Thracian Shore Atrides moor'd his Fleet, 'till Seas were calm, 'till Winds more friendly prov'd. Here, on a sudden, Achilles, great as when alive, bursts forth from the wide-broken Ground; and, like one threatening, reviv'd the Sternness of that Time, in which he wildly Agamemnon did with his lawless Sword attack. And, Greeks, said he, do you depart unmindful thus of me? and is the grateful Memory of my Virtue buried with myself? Do not so. And, that my Sepulchre may not without it's Honour be, let Polyxena slain appease Achilles' Ghost. He said; and his confederate Friends his savage Ghost obeying, the gallant and unhappy Maid, and more than Woman, snatch'd from her Mother's Bosom, whom she, now almost forlorn, did cherish, is led to the Tomb, and made a Sacrifice at his dire Bust. Who, mindful of herself, after being brought to the

As if or I, Polyxena, could bear being Slave to any, or any Deity shall be by such a Sacrifice appeas'd. I could only wish my Death might escape the Notice of my Mother: 'Tis my Mother does impede, and 'tis she lessens, the Joys of my Death; tho' not my Death, but her own Life, should be lamented by her. Only stand you aloof, that I may to the Stygian Ghosts go free: If I demand what's just, restrain the Hands of Man from Virgin Touch; more acceptable to him, whoe'er he is, whom you design to appease by killing me, will free Blood be. Yet, if any one the last Vows of our Lips do move, (the Daughter of King Priam, not a Captive, fues) return the Corse unransom'd to my Mother; nor let her with Gold, but Tears, redeem the melancholy Privilege of a Grave: Then, when she could, she did with Gold redeem. She spoke: But the Tears, from which herself refrain'd, the Crowd did not: The Priest himself, too weeping, and unwilling, burst her offer'd Breast by plunging in his Steel. She, sinking on the Earth, her Hams now failing her, bore to the very last a Countenance undaunted: Then too her Care was, Parts to be veil'd to veil, when she should fall; and to keep up the Grace of her Pergamus for me alone remains; my Sorrow still is in it's Course: I, but lately the greatest Woman, powerful in so many Sons-in-Law, and Sons and Daughters, and a Husband, am now an Exile dragg'd, forlorn, and forc'd from the Tombs of all my Friends, a Present for Penelope: Who shewing me, my given Task performing, to Dames of Ithaca, shall say, This is that famous Mother of Hector, this Priam's Consort. And now thou, who, so many Children lost, did'st alone relieve thy Mother's Sorrows, hast sooth'd this hostile Ghost: I Offerings for the Enemy bore. For what do hardy I remain? or why Delay? Pernicious Age, for what reservest thou me? Why, ye cruel Gods, unless new Funerals to see, do you reprieve a long-liv'd aged Wretch? Who could have thought that Priam happy might be call'd after Troy's Fall? Happy in his Death; nor sees thee now, my Daughter, slain; at once his Kingdom and his Life he quit. But (I imagine) thou, a royal Maid, will with a Funeral be grac'd, and thy Body buried in the Monument of thy Ancestors: But this is not the Fortune of our Family; Tears of a Mother, her last Gifts, thou alone shalt have, and Draughts of foreign Sand. We all have lost: There now alone survives, why I should bear to live a little longer Time, Polydorus, his Mother's dearest Child, the youngest formerly formerly of my Male Issue, sent to these Coasts to the Ismarian King. Why do I delay the while to wash her cruel Wounds with Water, and her Face besmear'd with dismal Blood? She said; and to the Shore with aged Steps proceeds; her snowy Locks torn and dishevell'd. Give me, the Wretch had said, ye Trojan Dames, an Urn, therein to draw the liquid Water: She sees the Body of Polydorus thrown out upon the Shore, and the big Wounds made by the Thracian Weapons. The Trojan Dames cry out aloud; she with Grief was quite struck dumb, and very Grief stops up at once her Voice and inward rising Tears; and, likest a hard Rock, is numb'd: And now her Eyes she fixes on the adverse Ground, sometimes throws up her stern Looks to the Sky; now views the Visage, now the Wounds of her Son as he lay, his Wounds especially; and arms and furnishes herself with Passion; with which how soon she is inflam'd, as if she still a Queen remain'd, resolves to be reveng'd; and wholly is employ'd in devising a fit Punishment: And rages like a Lioness bereaved of her sucking Whelp; and, having found the Tracks, pursues the Foe she does not see. Thus Hecuba, after mixing Rage with Grief, not forgetting her great Spirit, but her Years forgetting, to Polymnestor goes, the Author of this direful Murder, and desires with him a Conference; for that she wanted some latent Gold to shew, left for him to give her Son. Her the Odryfian did when, crafty, with a soothing Mouth, he said, Hecuba, away with all Delays, and give the Present to thy Son : All that thou giv'st, and what already thou hast given, I by the Gods do swear, shall be his alone. Stern, she views him, speaking, and swearing false, and boils with heaving Rage ; and thus flies at him, seiz'd by a Company of captive Matrons, and thrusts her Fingers in his perfidious Eyes, and of their Eyes the Cheeks she spoils, (Passion makes her strong) and plunges her Hands into the Sockets ; and with his guilty Blood distain'd, tears out, not the Eyes, for none there were, but the Places of the Eyes. The Race of Thracians, provok'd at the Calamity of their Tyrant, began with throwing Darts and Stones to attack the Trojan Queen : But she the Stone sent at her does pursue with a hoarse Grumbling and with Bitings ; and, attempting to speak out, her Jaws just ready for the Words, she bark'd. The Place does still remain, and from the Thing, it's Name it hath : And she, long mindful of her former Ills, then too she, mournful, howled thro' the Sithonian Plains. Her Fortune had the Trojans mov'd, and her Foes, the Greeks, and all the Gods also : So much all, that even Jove's Wife and Sister Self denied Hecuba had those Fates she had deserved.

III. Yet Aurora, tho' she had favour'd the self-same Arms, has now not Leisure to be mov'd at Troy, and Hecuba's Calamities and Fall. A nearer Care, the domestic Grief of her lost Memnon, afflicts the Goddess; whom the rosy Mother saw perishing by Achilles' Point upon the Phrygian Plains. She saw; and that Colour with which the Morning Times turn ruddy, had changed pale, and in Clouds lay hid the Æther. But the Mother could not bear to see his Limbs laid on the Pile's last Flames; but with loose Hair, just as she was, disdain'd not to fall down at great Jove's Knees, and these Words add to her Tears: Inferior to all, whom golden Æther does sustain, (for throughout all the World, my Temples are the fewest) yet I, a Goddess, come; not that thou would'st give Temples, and Festivals, and Altars with Fire to heat: Yet, should'st thou reflect how much I, a Woman, may for you, then when I keep the Bounds of Night with the new-rising Light, thou may'st think Rewards ought to be given: But that is not my Care, nor that Aurora's State now to ask deserved Honours. I come, bereav'd of my Memnon, who brave Arms in vain bore for his Uncle, and in his Prime of Years (so you would have it) fell by the brave Achilles. Give him, I crave, great Rector of the Gods, some Honour, Solace in Death; and ease a Mother's Wounds. Jove had nodded; when Memnon's lofty Pile down tumbles with the towering Fire, and Volumes of black Smoke distain'd the Day: As when the Streams exhale their rising Fogs, nor is the Sun below admitted. The black Embers fly, and, roll'd into a Body, thicken, and take a Form; and from the Fire assume and Heat and Life. Their Lightness gave them Wings; and first, like to a Bird, then soon a real Bird, sound with their Wings; At once innumerable Sisters sounded, of the same natal Origin. Thrice round the Pile they move, and thrice their Consort Clang break out into the Sky: In their fourth Flight they separate their Camp. Then two fierce People from diverse Sides make War; and with their Beaks and crooked Claws exert their Rage, and tire their Wings and adverse Breasts: And down fall a Sacrifice their kindred Bodies to the buried Ashes, and remember they were form'd from that brave Man. Their Author makes a Name for these his sudden Birds, from him being call'd Memnonides. Whene'er the Sun has finish'd the twelve Signs, they war again, to perish in this parental Fight. To others therefore it seem'd lamentable, that Dymas' Daughter bark'd: Aurora was engag'd in Grievs her own; and now too sheds her pious Tears, and sprinkles them all o'er the World in Dew.

VI. Yet neither do the Fates allow the Hope of Troy too to be ruin'd with it's Walls. The Cytherean Hero on his Shoulders bears the sacred Things; and his own Father, the other sacred Thing, a venerable Load. He, pious, chose from so much Wealth that Prize, and his own Ascanius; and from Antandros thro' the Seas

Him Anius, who King and Priest, (Men and Apollo have their due Regard) receiv'd into his Temple and his House ; and shews the City, and the vow'd Temples, and the two Shrubs once by Latona in her Labour held. Incense being given to the Flames, and Wine pour'd on the Incense, and burnt the Entrails of Oxen duly slain, they sought the royal Palace ; and, plac'd upon high Beds, they take along with liquid Wine the Gifts of Ceres. Then thus the pious Anchises : O chosen Priest of Phœbus, am I deceiv'd ; had'st thou not and a Son, when I first saw this City, and twice two Daughters, as I remember? To him Anius, shaking his Temples wreath'd with snowy Fillets, and sad, replies : You, O greatest Hero, are by no means deceiv'd : You saw me Father of five Children ; whom now (so great Inconstancy of Things affects Mankind) thou seest almost bereft of all : For what Assistance is my absent Son to me? whom Andros, a Land call'd from his Name, possesses ; for his Father now that Place and Kingdom holding. The Delian God gave him the Skill of

When Atreus' Son, the Ruiner of Troy, this understood, (that you may not imagine we did not, in some Measure, feel your Storm) using Force of Arms, drags them unwilling from their Father's Bosom; and them commands to feed with their cœlestial Presents the Argolic Fleet: Each, as they can, escape. Eubœa was by two, and by as many their Brother's Island, Andros, sought. The Soldier comes, and threatens War, unless deliver'd up. Piety, o'ercome by Fear, gave up to Punishment these kindred Breasts; and, that you may forgive a timorous Brother, here no Æneas was, no Hector, Andros to defend; by whom you to the tenth Year held it out. Now Chains were for their captive Arms provided; lifting up to Heaven their Arms, still free, they said; Father Bacchus, aid: And the Author of their Gift did bring them Aid, if the destroying them in a surprising Manner be call'd the bringing Aid: Nor by what Means they lost their Figure could I learn, nor now can tell: The whole of their Calamity is known. Wings they assum'd, and chang'd to thy Consort's Birds, the snowy Doves.

V. With this, and other such, Discourse, after filling up the Time of Feasting, the Table being remov'd, they went to sleep; and rise with the Day, and go to Phœbus' Oracle; who bids them seek their ancient Mother and their kindred Shores. The King attends and gives them Gifts at parting; a Sceptre to Anchises; a Vest and Quiver to his Grandson; a Bowl to Æneas, which formerly Therses, his Ismenian Guest, had sent him from the Aonian Coasts. This Therses to him had sent; Alcon, the Mylean, made, and carv'd thereon this ample Argument. A Town there was, and you might it's seven Gates have shewn; these were instead of Name, and taught what City it was: Before the City was a Funeral, and Tombs, and Fires, and Piles, and Matrons with dishevell'd Hair and bar'd Breasts do shew their Grief. The Nymphs too seem to weep, and mourn their Springs dried up: without Leaves the naked Tree is stiff; The Goats do gnaw the bare dry Stones. Lo! he exhibits Orion's Daughters in the Middle of Thebes; this to give her Breast more than Woman's, with her bar'd Throat; that plunging a Sword thro' gallant Wounds, to fall for her own People, and be carried out in pompous Funeral thro' the City, and burnt in a conspicuous Part thereof: Then from the Virgin Embers, least the Race should fail, Twin-Youths

VI. VII. Thus far the Figures, shining in ancient Brass; the topmost Bowl was rough with guilt Acanthus. Nor did the Trojans Gifts return meaner than those given them: And to the Priest they give a Censer to hold Frankincense; they give a Bowl, and Crown, brilliant with Gold and Jewels. Then, recollecting that the Trojans their Origin derive from Teucer's Blood, they Crete did make, and long could not endure the Air of that Place; and, leaving then it's hundred Cities, wish to reach Ausonian Harbours. A Storm does rage, and tosses the Men about; and wing'd Aello frights them, receiv'd into the faithless Harbours of the Strophades. And now they passed were Dulichian Havens, and Ithaca, and Same, and Neritian Houses, the Kingdom of the fly Ulysses; Ambracia, contended for in a Dispute of Gods. And now they see a Stone under the Image of a changed Judge, which now for Actian Phœbus is renown'd; and the Dodonian Land, vocal by it's Oaks; and the Chaonian Bays, where King Molossus' Sons escap'd the empty Flames with subject Wings.

738. Dum pectendos præbat Galatea capillos.] The History of the Cyclops is embellished with innumerable Fictions : Polypheus was the most celebrated among them, and lived in the Time of Ulysses. Ovid here, and Theocritus before him, describe at length an Adventure of his, which is not so much as mentioned by Homer, who otherwise enlarges much upon his His- tory. Our Poet tells us, that he was deeply enamoured of the Nymph Galatea, and had Acis for his Rival ; that this hideous Giant buried that young Prince under a Rock which he pluckt up by the Root ; and that the Gods transform'd him into a River, or rather into a River-God.

Sisters, could not, but by the Waves, escape the Cyclops' Love; and Tears here choak'd her Voice thus speaking: Which when the Virgin with her marble Finger wip'd, and comforted the Goddess, O Dearest, said she, come tell me, nor from me conceal (for I am to thee faithful) this Cause of thy Grief. Upon Cratæis' Daughter thus the Nereid replied: Acis, born of Faunus and the Nymph Symæthis, was indeed the great Delight and of his Father and his Mother; yet still the greater mine: For the charming Youth had join'd me to himself alone; and, having past twice eight Birth-days, had mark'd his tender Cheeks with doubtful Down. I him pursued, incessant me the Cyclops. Nor can I; should you ask, declare, whether the Cyclops' Hatred, or the Love of Acis was the stronger Passion; both equal were. Ah! gentle Venus, how great's the Power of thy Reign. Now, that Savage, and Terror of the Woods themselves, and who with Impunity is by no Stranger seen, the Despiser of the Gods and great Olympus, feels what Love is; and smit with Desire for me, he burns, forgetting his Cattle and his Caves. Now, Polypheme, thou regardest Dress and the Art of Pleasing: Now comb'st thy rigid Hair with Rakes; now with a Sickle thou art pleas'd to cut thy shaggy Beard, and in the Water view and compose thy grisly Looks. ceased; and Ships with Safety come now and go. Telemus, mean while, arriving at Sicilian Etna, Telemus Eurymus' Son, whom no Bird had e'er deceived, accosts the dreadful Polyphemon, and thus said; That single Eye thou bearest in thy middle Forehead, Ulysses shall from thee snatch. He smil'd and says, Vainest of Prophets, thou'rt mistaken: Another hath already snatcht it. Thus he flights him warning true in vain: And or stalking loads the Shore with mighty Strides, or weary does return to his dusky Cave. A wedge-like Hill runs out with a long point into the Sea; each Side the Water of the Main flows round. Thither the fierce Cyclops does ascend, and sat in the Middle down. His woolly Flocks without a Guide did follow. And after placing before his Feet the Pine, which did the business of a Staff, and fit to bear Sail-yards, and taking up his Pipe fram'd of a hundred Reeds; the Mountains all did feel the Whistling of the Shepherd; the how scarcely on their Legs they hold distended Dugs. Lambs, a smaller Breed, I in warm Folds do keep ; Kids also, an equal Age, in other Folds. I always stored am with snowy Milk : Part of it kept to drink ; part liquid Rennet har-Hares, and Goats, or a Pair of Pigeons, or Nest, taken from the Trees Top ; I on the Mountain Tops have found the twin Cubs of a shaggy Bear to play with you, so like each other, that you can scarce distinguish : Them I found, and said ; These we will for our Mistress keep. Do now but raise thy beauteous Head from laments (for I saw all) he rises ; and like an enraged Bull when his Heifer is taken from him, he cannot stand still, but wanders thro' the Woods and well known forests ; when the Savage Monster spies me and Acis, not dreaming of his Approach, nor apprehending any Danger ; and thus exclaims : I see you, and shall take Care that this be the last Agreement for your mutual Loves. He said, and with a Voice loud as that of an angry Cyclops. Ætna trembled at the Noise. I, struck with Amazement, plunge into the adjoining Sea. The Symethian Hero had turn'd his Back and fled, and said ; Help me, O Galatea, help me, ye her Parents, and receive me, in Danger of perishing, into your Realms. The Cyclops pursues, and tosses after him a Fragment torn from a Mountain ; and, though the extreme Angle of the Rock only reached him, yet it entirely crush'd Acis. What the Fates allowed, I gave, that he should assume his Grandfire's Strength. A purple Stream of Blood issued from the Stone ; but soon the Purple began to vanish, and a Colour succeeded, at first resembling that of a Torrent disturb'd by Rain, which in Time works itself clear. The Mass that had been thrown upon him opens, and through the Chinks a tall and shapely Reed springs up, and from the hollow Mouth of the Stone issues a sounding Stream. When, wondrous to behold ! the Youth suddenly rises from the middle of the Flood, having his Temples grac'd with new Horns, entwin'd with Wreaths of native Reed ; who but for his his Largeness of Stature, and azure Complexion, seem'd to be Acis himself; and indeed Acis it was, yet changed into a River, which still retains it's ancient Name.

IX. Here Galatea ceas'd; and the Company breaking up, they depart: The Sea-green Nereids skim along the Surface of the still Deep. Scylla, not daring to trust herself to the wide-spread Main, returns to the Shore, and either wanders naked along the thirsty Sand, or when tyr'd, searching for some winding Recess of the Flood, bathes her Limbs in the inclosed Waters. When lo Glaucus, a new Inhabitant of the Deep, lately transform'd at Anthedon a Town of Eubœa, comes cutting the Waves; and languishes with Desire after the Virgin he sees, and utters whatever Words he thinks may hinder her Flight, or remove her Fears. She still flies, and adding to her Speed, she reaches the Top of a Mountain situated nigh the Shore. Fronting the Sea is a huge Ridge, bare of Woods, and which bending a long Way over the Waves, terminates at last in a deep Summit. Here secur'd by the Place, she stopt; and uncertain whether he was a God, or a Monster, admires his Colour, and flowing Hair that covered his Shoulders and Back, and that below he ends with a Fish's wreathy Tail. He understood the Cause of her Surprise, and leaning on a Rock that stood hard by, says: Fear not, beauteous Maid, I am no Fish, nor savage Monster of the Main, but a watry God; nor does Proteus, or Triton, or Palæmon the Son of Athamas, reign more uncontroul'd over the Deep. Before indeed I was but a mortal, yet even then, fond of the watery Element, the Seas employed all my Hours and Care. For sometimes I drew in my Fish-ensnaring Nets, at other Times sitting on a Rock, I managed my Fishing-Line with the Rod. Adjacent to the Shore there lies a verdant Mead, enclosed half with Waters, and half with Grass ; where neither horned Heifers crop the rising Blade, nor harmless Sheep, or shaggy Goats browse. Hence no industrious Bees bear the collected Flowers, no festival Garlands thence adorn the Head, nor Mower's Hand cuts down the tender Grass. On this grassy Plot I sure the first of Mortals sat, till I should dry my dropping Nets, and number in order my captive Prey. Here I exposed upon the Bank such as either Chance had driven into my Nets, or who through a too easy Credulity had trusted to the crooked Hook. What I relate has the Air of a Fiction, (but what does it avail me to lie ?) My Captives on touching the Grass began to move, and shift from side to side, and skip along the Ground as in their native Main. And while I pause full of Wonder and Amazement, the whole Tribe fly towards the Sea, and leave their new Master and the Shore. I stood astonished, and long perplex'd with Doubt considering what the Cause, whether some God, or the Juice of some powerful Herb, had wrought the Miracle. Yet what Herb, said I within myself, can be thus potent ? Then with my Hand pulling up some Grass, I chewed it with my Throat. Scarce had my Throat drunk the unknown Juices, when sudden Convulsions shook my inward Breast, and I felt my Mind born away with a Set of new Passions and Inclinations. Farewel, I said, farewel Land, never to be revisited more, and strait plunged into the Deep. The Gods of the Sea welcome me, and invite me to share with them the Honour of Godhead, and beg of Tethys and Oceanus, to purge away whatever about me was earthy and mortal. By them I was purified; and a Charm that washes away every mortal Stain, being nine times repeated over me, I am commanded to bathe my Breast beneath a hundred Streams. Instantly Rivers issuing from various Springs, and whole Seas, are turn'd over my Head. Thus far I am able to relate the Particulars of this memorable Change. Thus far my Memory reaches; but here Consciousness forsook me. Which returning again, I perceived myself different both in Body and Mind, from what I had lately been. 'Twas then I first observed this Sea green Beard, these flowing Locks wherewith I sweep the Sea, my broad Shoulders, azure Arms, and Legs bent in form of a scaly Fish. But what does this Form avail me? What Joy can it give to have pleased the Doities of the Sea, nay that I am become a God myself, if these things affect not you? Thus far the God, and was about to, have added more, when Scylla flew from his Presence. He is fill'd with Rage and provok'd at the Repulse, repairs to the marvellous Court of Titanian Circe.

I. MEAN time one is sought after, able to sustain so weighty a Charge, and worthy to fill the Throne after so great a King. Fame, the Harbinger of Truth, destines illustrious Numa to the Command.
 He thinks it not enough to know the Rites of the Sabine Nation; his capacious Mind aims higher, and searches into the Nature of Things. Urged by this Care, and leaving his native Country of Cures, he travelled to the City of the Entertainer of Hercules; and as he was inquisitive to know what Founder had raised these Grecian Walls upon the Italian Coast, one of the older Natives, no Stranger to the Transactions of past Ages, thus replies: It is said, that the Son of Jupiter, enriched with the Iberian Spoils, reached, by a prosperous Voyage, the Lacinian Shore; and, leaving his Herd to wander in the fertile Meads, entered

Post ea, somnusque, deusque pariter discedunt. Alemonides surgit, refertque recentia visa tacita mente: sententiaq; diu pugnat secum. Numen jubet abire; leges prohibent discedere; morsque est posita pœna volenti mutare patriam. himself the hospitable Dwelling of Croton, and there reposed after his long Fatigue. At his Departure, he said: On this Spot shall a City stand in succeeding Times; and his Words have been fulfill'd: For there was one Myscelos, the Son of Alemon, born at Argos, who was the most acceptable to the Gods of all the Men of that Age. Him the Club-armed Hero over-shadowed in a Dream, and thus addressed: Go, abandon your native Seats, and hasten to the stony paved Channel of distant Æsar; threatening many and terrible Calamities unless he obeyed. Soon after Sleep and the God at once forsake him. The Son of Alemon rises, and in his silent Mind reflects upon the late Vision; and his Thoughts for a long time waver. A God commands; the Laws forbid him to depart; and Death is the Punishment inflicted upon such as offer to abandon their Country. The bright Sun had hid his shining Head in the Ocean, and gloomy Night uprear'd her's, adorned with Stars; when the same God again appeared, and counselled him as before; and threatened still more cruel and heavy Calamities if he disobeyed. He was alarmed by these Menaces, and prepares to carry over his whole Family at once to these new Mansions. A Rumour of his Departure runs through the City, and he is indicted for Contempt of the Laws. When his Cause came to be try'd, and that the Crime appeared, without Witness, by his own Confession, the unhappy Sufferer, lifting his Hands and Eyes to Heaven, O Hercules, says he, whose twice six Labours advanced you to the heavenly Abodes, aid me in my present:

Distress; for 'twas you that urged me to this Crime. It was the Custom of old to decide in criminal Causes with black and white Stones. The first condemned the accused, the other declared him innocent. According to this Form was the heavy Sentence now passed, and only black Stones were thrown into the merciless Urn; which as soon as it poured them out, that their number might be recounted, the Colour of each was changed from black to white, and his Sentence, by the Favour of Hercules, turned into an Absolution, acquitted the Son of Alemon. He returns Thanks to the Parent God, and steers along the Ionian Sea with a favouring Gale; and passes Lacedemonian Tarentum, and Sybaris, and Salentinum, and Neæthus, and the Bay of Thurium, and Temese, and the Iapygian Plains, and, having with infinite Toil wandered from Coast to Coast, found at length the Mouth of the Æsar, destin'd by Fate for his Settlement. Hard by was a Tomb, under which were buried the sacred Bones of Croton. There he built his Walls upon the destin'd Spot, and transferred to the City the Name of him who lay buried there. It is certain, from unquestionable Tradition, that such was the Origin of the Place, and of the City built here on the Italian Coast.

II. Here liv'd a Man, by birth a Samian; but he had fled from Samos and the traced those hidden Mazes which lay without the Reach of human Ken. And when by a piercing Sagacity, and indefatigable Study, he had unfolded the Springs of Nature, he communicated his Discoveries to his Followers; and taught his silent and admiring Hearers, the Origin of this mighty World, the Causes of Things, and the Course of Nature. He explain'd also the Perfections of Deity; whence Snow, and Thunder's tremendous Sound: whether Jupiter, or the Winds, thundered upon the bursting of a Cloud: What shook the solid Earth; by what Laws the Planets wandered round the Sun; and all the Mysteries of Nature, hid from vulgar Eyes. He first forbid Animal Food to be served up at the Tables of Men; he first opened his Mouth, learned indeed, but not duly regarded, in such Words as these: Forbear, Mortals, to taint your Bodies with Food profane: We have Corn; the Boughs bend under a Load of Fruit, and our Vines abound in swelling Grapes. Our Fields are covered with wholesome Herbs; and those of a cruder Kind may be softened and mellowed by Fire. Nor is Milk denied us, or Honey smelling of fragrant Thyme. Earth is lavish of her Riches and kindly Store, and, without Slaughter or Bloodshed, provides for Luxury. The savage Kind indeed allay their Hunger with Flesh, and yet not all; for the Horse, and Flocks, and Herds, feed upon Grass: They only of a fierce and ravenous Nature, Bears, Wolves, Armenian Tygers, and the angry Brood of Lions, delight in Food reeking with the purple Tide of Life. Bowels in Bowels ; to fatten a craving Body by cramming it with the Fat of it's Fellow, and maintain the Life of one Creature, by the Death and Murder of another. Is it possible then, amidst the Abundance which Earth, the best of Parents, so bounteously supplies, that nothing can delight, but with inhuman Teeth to champ cruel Wounds, and renew the barbarous Cyclopean Feasts ? Can you not allay the Cravings of a ravenous and ungodly Maw, but by destroying the Life of another ? But the Times of old, which we justly term the Golden Age, were happy in the Fruit of Trees, and the Herbs which the Earth produces ; nor stain'd their Mouths with Blood.

III. Then might the Birds in Safety wing their Flight thro' the Air, and the Hare undaunted wander over the Heaths and Fields ; nor had the Fish, by their easy Credulity, swallowed the guileful Hook. Snares and Deceit were as yet unknown ; no Dread of Fraud alarm'd the Mind, but all Things flourished in Peace ; 'till some impious Contriver of another Institution (whoever he was) first envied us this simple Food ; and, by gorging his craving Paunch with animal Food, opened a Door for Cruelty. I am apt to believe, that the blood-polluted Sword was first stain'd by the Slaughter of the ravenous Kind, and that had been enough ; for, to destroy what seeks to deprive us of Life, may be justify'd by the Law of Nature ; but they were not to be made our Food, as well as destroyed. From these Beginnings Impiety soon spread ; and the Sow is believed, by a deserved Death, to have fallen the first Sacrifice, because with her broad Snout she roots up the incruusted Seed, and intercepts the Hope of the Year. The Goat too, who who had cropt the shooting Vines, is led to be butchered at the Altar of avenging Bacchus. These two suffered for the Mischief they did; but what did the Sheep deserve? a harmless inoffensive Race, born for the Support of Men; whose Fleeces cloath them, whose Milk supplies them with Food, and who avail us more by their Life, than Death. What has the Ox deserved? A Creature without Fraud or Guile, innocent, simple, and made for Toil. He is unmindful of past Services indeed, and unworthy of the Gifts of Ceres, who could harden himself to butcher his labouring Hind, whom he had just eased of the Load of the crooked Plow; and smite with an Ax that Neck, worn with Toil, which had so often renewed his else ungrateful Fields, and yielded so many fertile Crops. Nor do we rest satisfied in committing Crimes; we ascribe these impious Acts to the Gods themselves, and pretend, that the Heavenly Powers must be appeased with the Blood of the laborious Steer. A Victim, without Blemish, and of surpassing Beauty, (for to excel proves it's Ruin) adorned with Fillets, and his Horns tipped with Gold, is plac'd before the Altar: He hears the Prayer of the Priest, not knowing what it means; and sees the Corn, he helped to produce, laid between his Horns upon his Forehead; and, struck with an Ax, stains with his Blood the Knives, which he had before perhaps beheld in the transparent Waters. Strait they inspect the Entrails, torn from his panting Breast; and search to know the Mind of the Gods from them. Whence have Men this Thirst after forbidden Food?

Food? Dare you then to eat it, O ye of mortal Race? Be prevail'd on to abstain, and listen with Attention to my Precepts; and, when you sit down to feast on the well-deserving Steer, think and reflect, that you devour the Labourer of your Fields. And, since a God inspires me, I will yield to the Impulse of the inspiring God; unfold Mysteries, open the Skies, and unveil the dark Oracles of the august Mind. I will sing of mighty Truths, long concealed from human Eyes; which the Wits of former Ages have not been able to explore. How am I pleased to travel along the Sphere of Stars! and, leaving Earth and this lifeless Habitation of Mortals, to mount upon a Cloud, and scale the Height of towering Atlas: thence, at Distance, to survey the wandering Souls of mistaken Mortals; to encourage them, anxious and fearful for the State of future Things, and lay open the whole Series of Fate.

IV. O! feeble Race! why thus alarmed by the vain Fear of Death? Whence this Dread of Styx, and Darkness, and empty Names, the Fictions of Poets, and Dreams of an imaginary World? Whether the Body is consumed by the Flame of the funeral Pile, or crumbles into Dust, the Prey of Time, think not that in this you can suffer any real Harm. Our Souls are not subject to Death; but, leaving their former Seats, are received into different Habitations, and renew Life in other Forms. Even I, (for I remember it well) who declare these Truths, was, in the Time of the Trojan War, Euphorbus, the Son of Panthous; and bore in my opposed Breast the heavy Spear of the younger Son of Atreus. I lately recollected the Buckler, which I wore upon my left Arm, as I saw it hanging in the Temple of Juno at Argos, where Abas formerly reigned. All things are thus but altered; nothing dies. The Soul wanders from Place to Place, and seizes any Body in it's Way. The Souls of Beasts pass often into human Bodies, while ours actuate the Limbs of Beasts; and, without perishing, change only their Forms: And as the pliant Wax receives new Figures, changes it's Form, nor retains the wonted Impression, and yet is itself still the same; in like Manner, know, that the Soul continues unchanged, and only assumes a Variety of different Shapes. That Piety therefore may not be sacrificed to Appetite, forbear by impious Murder to expel kindred Souls; nor nourish Life by destroying the Life of another. And, since I am borne along in an ample Sea, and have given my Sails without Reserve to the Winds, know, that nothing in Nature continues in the same State; all things are in perpetual Flux, and every Form is fleeting and decays. Time itself runs on in a continued Flood; like a River rolling from it's Fountain. For neither can a River, or the flying Hours, stop; but, as Wave is impell'd by Wave, and that before is urged by that behind, and urges at the same Time it's predecessor Wave, thus the Minutes fly; and thus pursue in successive Course, still changing, ever renewed. For those that were vanish'd, new ones succeed; and the fleeting Moments are ever on the Wing. We see, that Darkness, by a kind of natural Impulse, Impulse, emerges into Light, and that the shining Rays of Phœbus take Place of the sable Shade of Night: Nor is the Face of Heaven the same, when wearied Animals slumber in midnight Ease; and the Morning Star rises bright on his shining Steed: And again, a different Face succeeds, when Aurora, Daughter of Pallas, ushering in the Morn, spreads over the Firmament the Splendor of Day. Even the Orb of Phœbus, when first he rises from the Ocean, or downward bends his Chariot to the Earth, is covered with red; but, high in his meridian Course, he shines serene, as there the Firmament is of Ætherial Make, and far removed from the Infection of the World below. Nor is the Appearance of Nocturnal Diana ever alike or the same: For her Face To day, if she advances to her Full, is less than that of the succeeding Night; but greater when she contracts her Orb. Do you not behold the Year revolve in four successive Seasons, and act a Resemblance of human Life? For the beginning Spring, helpless, infirm, and fed with milky Juice, copies the tender Age of Infancy. Then the Stem is shining and green, but weak, and void of Strength; swells, and glads the Husbandman with Hopes. Then all things flourish, and the bounteous Fields look gay in the Attire of their Flowers; but still the Leaves are unsolid, nor have drank in substantial Nourishment. The Year, advancing from the Spring, gathers Strength; and, ripening into Summer, flourishes in all the Bloom and Vigour of Youth; for than this is not any Season more robust, more prolific, or more replete with Heat and Moisture. The Fire of Youth overpast, Autumn succeeds, mature, mild, and of a middle Temperature, between the Heat of Youth, and the Chillness of Age; having his Temples strewn with grey Hairs. Last of all, tardy Winter creeps along with tottering Pace, quite stript, or but thinly covered with silver Locks. Our Bodies too are themselves in a perpetual Course of Change, without Interruption; nor To-morrow shall we be the same that we have been, or are now. There was a Time, when, confined to our Mother's Womb, we were but the seminal Principles, and growing Hopes of Manhood. Nature lent her ripening Hands; nor would suffer our Bodies, lodged in the Bowels of our distended Mother, to be longer confin'd in that narrow Prison, but pushed us from our scanty Habitation into the freer Regions of Air. The Infant, thus brought to Light, lay motionless, and without Strength; soon he creeps upon Four, and moves his Limbs in Imitation of the brute Kind. By degrees he stands upright, yet tottering and with unsteady Hams, supporting his Nerves by some convenient Prop. Thence he becomes fleet and strong, and passes the Stage of Youth; and, having measured also the mid Years of Life, glides thro' the downward Path of sinking old Age. This last weakens and undermines the Strength of the past Term of Life; and Milo, when old, laments to see those Arms, which once in well-strung Nerves, and brawny Muscles, rival'd those of Hercules, now feeble, and without Strength. The Daughter of Tyndarus too laments, when in her faithful Glass she beholds the Wrinkles of old Age; and wonders with herself how she came to be twice carried ried away. Devouring Time and envious Age make all things their Prey; and, exercising their Rage against them, with sharpened Teeth, consume them by slow Degrees. Even the Elements themselves abide not in the same State: Attend, and I will teach you, what Vicissitudes they undergoe. This unperishing World contains four Bodies, elemental, and productive of the rest. Of these, two, Earth and Water, are heavy; and, by their proper Weight, tend downwards to the Center. The other two, Air, and Fire, still purer than Air, as they are void of Weight, and press'd down by no incumbent Force, mount aloft into the upper Skies. Which tho' separated, and distant from each other in Place, yet all things are compounded of these, and are all resolved into these again. Thus Earth, dissolved, rarifies into Water; and Water, expanded, changes to Air; the Air, subtil, and purged of it's Weight, refines into the pure Element of Flame. Thence they return in a contrary Course, and untwist, with restless Toil, the curious Web. For Fire, condensed, changes to gross Air; Air to Water; and Water warps and rolls itself into a Mass of Earth. Thus nothing abides in it's proper Form; but Nature, shifting continually, raises up one Shape after another. Nor does any thing, in this mighty World, perish or fall to nothing, but only alters and changes it's Appearance. To be born, is to begin to be what formerly we were not, and to die, is to cease to appear what we seem'd heretofore; when perhaps the same Elements are but variously united and combin'd; and, in other Respects, continue what they were: Nothing, I am apt to believe, continues long under the same Form. Thus have the various Ages of the World declin'd from Gold to Iron; thus has the Fortune of Places so often been changed. I have seen what once was solid Earth, transform'd to Sea, and the Ocean, in it's Turn, become solid Land: Shells of Fishes often lye far distant from the Sea, and rusty Anchors are found on the Tops of Mountains. What was formerly a Plain, has been changed by a Current of Waters into a Valley; and Mountains, by a Flood, have been levelled to a Plain. Marshes are often changed to dry Sand, Desarts; parched Heaths sometimes stagnate with standing Waters. Here Nature has opened new Fountains, there shuts them up; and Rivers, rouz'd by Earthquakes, break out, or vanish and subside. So Lycus, swallowed up by a Chasm in the Earth, rises again at a great Distance, and flows a new River, in another Region of the World: Thus the great Erasinus dives; and, pouring along with his latent Stream, digs a second Channel for himself in the Plains of Argos. They tell us too, that Mysus, disdaining his former Spring and winding Bank, flows in a different Bed, and takes the Name of Caicus. Amenanus too, rolling in his Stream

NOTES.

261. Sic toties versa es, fortuna locorum.] The second Part of the Pythagoric Philosophy consists in unravelling and explaining the Causes of the Changes that happen in the Universe; and indeed, many of the Facts, which the Poet here relates, are in themselves true, but others are founded on Mistakes or false Representations. Such is the Fable of the River in Thrace, whose Waters petrify those that drink them; of Fountains that kindle Wood, or change the Hair to a golden Colour, and such like. Of this Nature too are those Fictions, which a more reasonable Philosophy, and repeated Observations have since discovered to be without Foundation. As that Bees spring from the batter'd Bowels of a Bull, that Serpents arise from human Marrow, and that the Phoenix is produced from her own Ashes.

Sicilian Sand, sometimes flows; sometimes, his Springs being dried up, appears no more. Anigros was once swallowed up; but now (if any Faith is due to the Relations of the Poets) pours out Waters, poisonous to the Touch, ever since the Centaurs washed, in his Current, the Wounds made by the Arrows of the invincible Club-Bearer. And are not the once so-sweet Waters of Hypanis, who rises in the Mountains of Scythia, now vitiated with bitter Salts? Antissa, Pharos, and Phœnician Tyre were formerly surrounded with Waves; but now no Footsteps of their Islands remain. The ancient Inhabitants till'd Leucas, annexed to the Continent; now Seas circle round it. Sicily is also said to have been join'd to Italy, till the Sea destroyed the ancient Boundaries, and pushed away the Earth by its intervening Waves. If you look for Helice and Buris, heretofore Cities of Achaia, you will find them buried under Water; and Mariners are still wont to shew where these Cities, swallowed up with their Walls, lye whelmed in the Deep. There is, near Pitthean Trœzen, a Hill, tall, and bare of Trees; formerly a level Plot of Ground, but now a Mount. Here a violent Effort of Vapours, confined in the dark Caverns below, and struggling in vain for Vent, (that they might enjoy a freer Air; as in the whole scanty Prison there was no Chink, to render it pervious to their Blast) heaved up, strange to relate, the enlarged Concave; as the Breath of one's Mouth is wont to distend a Bladder, or Skin, stript from a two-horned Goat. The Swelling continued, and has the Appearance of a tall Mountain; and, in time, hardened into a solid Mass of Earth. Tho' many things thus occur to my Mind, both of my own Knowledge, and that I have heard from others, yet I will mention only a few. What? Are not Springs endued with various Qualities: Do they not give and take new Appearances? Thy Waters, horned Ammon, are, at Noon cold, at Morn and Evening warm. Athamanis, 'tis said, will kindle Wood, if his Waters are sprinkled upon it, when the waning Moon shrinks into her least Orb. The Ciconians have a River, whose Water, if drank, convert the Bowels into Stone, and spread a Crust of Marble o'er whatever they touch. Crathis and Sybaris, adjoining to it in our own Country, change the Hair to the Colour of Gold, or Amber: And, what is still more surprizing, there are Streams capable, not only of transforming the Body, but also the Mind. Who has not heard of Salmacis, whose obscene Waters soften Men into Women? or the Æthiopian Lakes, which, if drank, either turn the Brain, or confine in the Chains of heavy Sleep? Whoever allays his Thirst from the Clitorian Spring, avoids Wine; and, abstemious, delights in pure Water alone. Whether the Qualities of this Fountain are opposite to those of Wine, or that (as the Natives give out) Melampus, the Son of Amithaon, when by Herbs and Spells he cured the Daughters of Proetus of their Madness, threw his purifying Simple into this sober Spring, which thence derived it's Repugnance to Wine.

 The River Lyncestius has a contrary Effect; for whoever drinks immoderately of this Stream, reels and totters as if intoxicated with Wine. There is a Place in Arcadia, call'd of old Pheneos, remarkable for it's Waters of ambiguous Quality: Dread them by Night; by Night they are dangerous, but may be drank by Day without Harm. Thus Rivers and Lakes have some one Quality, some another. There was a Time, when Ortygia floated on the Waves; now 'tis fixed into a stable Island. The Ship of the Argonauts dreaded the Symplegades, tossed about by the Assaults of the invading Waves; now they stand immoveable, and sustain unshaken the Attacks of the fiercest Winds. Nor will Ætna, who boils in his sulphurous Caverns, always vomit up Flame; nor indeed has he always done it. For whether Earth be an Animal, that lives, and repairs her Lungs by fresh Supplies of Air, discharging her tainted fiery Vapours by many Pores and Outlets, she may change her Passages of Respiration; and, shaken by convulsive Assaults, shut up the old, and open new Caverns: Or, if the fleeting Winds, bent up in hollow Caves, toss Flints against Flints, and other Bodies that hide the Seeds of Flame, they by a mutual Collision take Fire. When the Fewel is spent, and the fierce Winds abate, the Caves will be left cold. Or, if we suppose, that nitrous Particles take Fire, and that livid Sulphur, kindled by the issuing Vapour, feeds the Flame; yet, when Earth shall no longer supply this unc-tuous Fewel, and the Aliments that feed her Fires, her Strength, by length of Time, being wasted, and Nourishment shall be wanting to the devouring Conflagration, famished for Want of Fewel, her Flames must expire. We are told, that in Hyperborean Pallene are Men, who, after nine times bathing in the Tritonian Lake, are wont to have their Bodies fenced with a Covering of Feathers. 'Tis pretended too, (incredible as it may appear) that the Women of Scythia, smearing their Bodies with a magick Oil, can take on the same Appearance, and wing their Flight thro' the Air. Yet if we are to credit Facts, and undoubted Experiments, is it not known that Bodies, dissolved by Time and a fermenting Heat, are changed into little Insects? Go, butcher some chosen Steer, and cover him up; the Thing is known from manifold Trials: Swarms of active Bees spring from his putrid Bowels, who, like their Parents, haunt the Fields, delight in Toil, and labour in Hope of enjoying the hoarded Store. The warlike Steed, buried in the Ground, gives Birth to Wasps and Hornets. If from a Crab, found on the Sea Shore, you take it's bending Claws, and cover the rest under Ground, from the Part buried, a Scorpion will glide, and threaten with it's circling Tail. And rural Moths that stretch their filmy Threads on the Leaves, (an Observation common in the Country) change their Shape to that of a venomous Butterfly. In Mud lies concealed the latent Seed of Frogs, which it produces at first, short of their Feet: But soon, it furnishes them with Legs for swimming; and, that they may be fit also for long Leaps, Leaps, they are form'd with a remarkable Length of Feet behind. The Bear's Cub, at the Time of it's Birth, is a mere Lump of but ill animated Flesh: The Mother licks it into Shape, and gives it, at last, the Form which she herself received. Are not the Offspring of the Honey-creating Tribe, while yet confin'd to their Hexangular waxen Cells, meer Bodies without Limbs; and that they are late of being provided with waving Feet and Wings. Were it not a thing universally known, who would believe, that Juno's Bird, whose Tail sparkles with Gems and Stars, Jupiter's Armour-Bearer, and the snow-white Pigeons of the Queen of Love, nay the feather'd Race, have their Origin from the middle Parts of an Egg. There are some who think, that when the Spine rots in the hollow Tomb, it's included Marrow is changed to a Snake: Yet these all have their Birth from other Things. But there is one Bird self-born, and self begotten; the Assyrians call it the Phœnix. He sustains not Life by Grain or Herbs, but the Tears of Frankincense, and the Juice of Amomum. When he has compleated the five Centuries of his Life, with his Claws and crooked Bill he builds for himself a Nest, upon the Boughs of an Oak, or Top of a trembling Palm; where having strewed Casia, and the aromatic Stalks of Spikenard, with broken Cinnamon, and yellow Myrrh, he lays himself upon it, and expires in his Bed of Perfumes. Hence, as we are told, an infant Phœnix is again produced from his Father's Body, appointed to renew the same Lease of Life. When Age supplies him with Strength, and fits him for the intended Burden, he lightens the Boughs of the tall Tree of the Load of the Nest, and piously carries his own Cradle and Father's Sepulchre; and, winging his Way thro' the light Air, 'till he reaches the City of Hyperion, he lays down his Load in the Temple of the Sun, before the sacred Porch. But, if there appears any thing wonderful in all this, let us wonder still more, that the Hyæna alternately changes it's Sex; and one Year a Male begets, the next a Female bears: And that the Camelion, nourished by the Winds and Air, changes to the Colour of whatever he touches. Conquered India furnished Bacchus, the God of the Vine, with Lynxes; whose Urine, they tell us, as discharged from the Bladder, congeals in Air, and hardens into Gems. Thus too Coral hardens as soon as it feels the Air, tho' under Water it was a soft Plant. Day would sooner fail, and Phœbus plunge his panting Steeds in the Sea, than I be able to recite the many Objects in Nature, subject to new Changes. Even Nations and Empires undergo their Vicissitudes. Some we see to flourish and gather Strength; others to sink and decay. Thus was Troy once potent in Wealth and numerous Armies, and for ten long Years able to bear so great an Expence of Blood: Now, humble, she can only boast of her ancient Ruins; nor possesses any other Riches, than the memorable Tombs of her Heroes. in the Mouth of ancient Fame. Sparta is now a deſpicable Spot: Lofty Mycenæ are fallen: Thebes and Oedipus live now only in Fable; and nothing of ancient Athens remain but the Name. Rome too, if the Voice of Fame be true, is, at this very Time, riſing out of the Ruins of Troy; and lays the Foundation of a mighty Empire on the Banks of the Tiber, who rolls his Waters from the Summit of the Appennines. She therefore changes by a continual Encrease of Power, and will, in time, become the Miſtreſs of the World; for ſo the Prophets of old, and the Fate-predicting Oracles, declare. This too, if I remember right, Helenus, the Son of Priam, foretold to Æneas, perplexed, and doubtful of his future Fate, when Ilium was ſinking in Ruins. O Goddeſs-born, if you truly comprehend the Preſages of my Mind, Troy can never be entirely loſt while you ſurvive; a Way ſhall be opened for you through Fire and Sword. You ſhall eſcape, and carry Troy and her Gods along with you, 'till a foreign Land receives you, more favourable both to Troy and yourſelf, than your native Soil. Even now I ſee, that the Phrygian Race owe the World a City; ſuch as neither is, nor ever ſhall be, nor was known in any former Age. Her a Succeſſion of different Heroes ſhall render powerful for many Ages, 'till a Prince, ſprung from the Blood of Iulus, raiſe her to be the Miſtreſs of the World. He, after a long and happy Reign, ſhall aſcend late into Heaven, and take his Place among the Gods. I remember well, that theſe were the Predictions of Helenus to Æneas, when he bore away from the Greeks, the guardian Gods of his Country; and I rejoice to ſee my kindred dred Walls flourish, and the Phrygians so much Gainers by the Conquest of the Greeks. But, that I may not expatiate too far, forgetting to wheel my Horses towards the Goal, Heaven, and all that it's Canopy enfolds, Earth, and whatever is contain'd therein; all things, I say, are subject to Changes. And let us too, who are Parts of this Universe, (as being not meer Bodies alone, but also fleeting Souls, that may take up an Abode in wild Beasts, or be lodged in the Breasts of Cattle) suffer Bodies to remain secure and unviolated, that are animated perhaps by a Parent, a Brother, or some near Relation, for certain by one of our own Species; and let us not load our Bowels with Thyestean Meals. What an impious Habit does he acquire, what advances does he make towards the shedding of human Blood, who can harden himself to cut the Throat of a Calf, and, unmoved, hear it's mournful Complaints; who can slaughter a Kid, in vain uttering Moans like those of Children; or eat the Birds which, with his own Hands, he has fed. How little is here wanting to the Perfection of Wickedness! What Impiety does it not threaten? Suffer the Ox to plow; and impute his Death to Age, or a Decay of Nature. with dreaded Plumes; nor hide the crooked Hook under fallacious Bait. Kill noxious Creatures, and them only. Let us abstain from the Blood of Animals, and nourish Life with vegetable Food. Numa, we are told, returned into his native Country with a Mind furnished with these, and such like, Instructions; nor accepted the Latin Scepter but with much Importunity. Who, happy in a Goddess for his Spouse, and the Muses for his Guides, taught the Rites of Religion and Sacrifice; and brought over to the soft Arts of Peace, a Nation fond of War, and inured to the Exercise of Arms. Whom, when advanced in Years he concluded his Life and Reign, the Matrons, People, and Senators, all jointly bewailed his Loss; for his Wife, abandoning the City, lies hid in the thick Groves of the Valley of Aricia; and, by her Groans and Lamentation, disturbs the sacred Rites of the Orestean Cynthia. How oft did the Nymphs of the Grove and Lake check her Grief, and address her in comforting Strains! How oft did the Son of Theseus counsel her to set Bounds to her Sorrow! For not your Fate alone, says he, is to be bewailed: Consider that the like Calamities have befallen others, and you will bear your Sufferings with greater Moderation. Would that my Woes were not so lively an Example to assuage your Grief; yet even mine may be sufificent. I make no doubt, but you have heard of one Hippolytus, who fell a Sacrifice to the Cruelty of his Father; and the Treachery of a wicked Step-Mother.

You will wonder, I know; nay, scarce shall I be able to convince you of it; yet I am he. For, in former Times, the Daughter of Pasiphae, having, in vain, solicited me to defile my Father's Bed, whether thro' Dread of a Discovery, or resenting the Affront, turned the Charge; and accused me of her own base Desires. My Father banished me, innocent as I was, from the City; and pours heavy Imprecations on my guiltless Head. I was driving towards Pitthean Træzen in my flying Chariot, and had now reached the Strand, that borders on Corinth, when the Sea swelled; and an enormous Mass of Waters, heaving, from the level Surface of the Deep, rose to a Mountain's Height, and bellowing, burst.
A horned Bull starts up from the parted Waves; and, rearing his ample Chest in Air, expires from his Nostrils and wide Mouth the briny Waves. My Attendants are seized with Horror: I alone remained undaunted, full as I was of the Thoughts of my Banishment; when my mettled Coursers, directing their Looks towards the Sea, prick up their Ears, and, scar'd by the Sight of the dreadful Monster, hurry the Chariot over steep Rocks. I, in vain, struggle to curb the Reins bedewed with frothy Foam; and, bending backwards, pull with all my Strength the pliant Bridle. Doubtless, I should at length have check'd their headstrong tangled by the Harness, you might have seen my reeking Bowels torn in Pieces; my Nerves wound round the Stump; my Limbs partly dragg'd away, and partly sticking behind; 'till, amidst my breaking Bones and crackling Joints, I breathed out my wearied Soul. No Part of my Body could be known; it was all over one continued Wound. Say then, disconsolate Nymph, can you, or dare you in Justice compare your Disaster with mine? I saw too the dark Realms of Pluto, and bath'd my mangled Body in the Waters of Phlegethon. Nor had Life been restored, but by the powerful Medicines of the Son of Apollo; which, after I had again recovered, even in Spight of Pluto, by potent Herbs, and the Pæonian Art, Cynthia, that I might not by my Presence encrease the Envy of so uncommon a Gift, threw a misty Cloud around; and, to prevent the Hazard and Danger that threatened me from being seen or known, she stamped upon me the Wrinkles of Age, and gave me a new Set of Features; and was long in doubt, whether she should send me to dwell in Crete or Delos. At length, quitting the Thoughts both of Delos and Crete, she placed me here; and commanded me, at

NOTES.

524. Excutor curru, lorisq; tenentibus artus.] The Story of Hippolytus, as it is here related by Ovid, is extremely moving. The true Account of the Matter probably is, that this Prince, in his great Distress and Agony of Mind, not giving Heed to the Management of his Horses, was unhappily overturned in his Chariot. The Træzenians however, who afterwards worshipped this young Prince, as a God, did not allow, that the Death of Hippolytus was owing to his being dragg'd along by his Horses; on the contrary, they would have it believ'd, that the Gods had carried him up into Heaven among the Constellations, where he forms that which is named the Charioteer.

From that time I frequent this Grove; and being now one of the inferior Race of Gods, am screened by the Power of my Patroness, and accounted one of her Train. Yet no Misfortunes of others can avail to alleviate the Grief of Egeria; but throwing herself down at the Foot of a Mountain, she dissolves in incessant Tears; 'till the Sister of Phœbus, moved at the Piety of this inconsolable Nymph, changed her Body into a cold Spring, and thaw'd her Limbs to Streams that ever flow. But the Nymphs, and Virbius, the Son of the Amazon, are fill'd with Wonder at the new Miracle, as when the Tyrrhenean Swain beheld, in the Middle of the Field, the Turf pregnant with Fate, untouched, to swell and move of itself; and, losing the Appearance of Earth, to assume a human Form, and open it's sudden Mouth to disclose the future Fates. The Natives call'd him Tages; he first taught the Tuscan Race the Art of foretelling Things to come. As when of old, Romulus saw his Lance, fixed in the Palatine Hill, suddenly to shoot out green Leaves; and which, standing now no longer by it's Point, but a new Root, no longer a Dart, but a Tree of limber Boughs, afforded to the admiring Spectators an unlook'd for

He said; and raises a grassy Altar of green Turf, burning upon it rich Perfumes, and offering Libations of Wine. He then consults the panting Entrails of slaughtered Sheep, to learn from them the Will of the Gods. These soon as the Tuscan Augur had inspected, he beheld in them the mighty Beginnings of great Attempts, yet not plain. But when he rais'd the piercing Eye from the boding Fibres to the horny Honours of Cibus, Hail Monarch, says he, for to thee, Cibus; to thee, and these thy Horns, shall this Realm and the Latian Towers be subject. Banish therefore Delay; haste to enter the Gates wide open to your Approach; so the Fates command. For, as soon as you are received into the City, you shall be made King; and enjoy, to the End of 565.] Cum vidit Cibus in unda cornua.] The next Adventure is that celebrated one of Genucius Cibus, the Roman Prætor, on whose Forehead Horns appeared, upon his Return from a Conquest, or at his going out of Rome, according to Valerius Maximus; upon which Occasion, the Soothsayers and Augurs, whom he consulted, unanimously predicted, that, if he enter'd Rome, he would be declared King thereof; and, as he knew the Aversion the Romans had to bear the Name King, he chose rather to go into voluntary Exile. The Romans, charm'd with so generous a Behaviour, set up a Head in Bronze, with Horns, upon the Gate thro' which he had passed, and it was called Raudusculana.

your Life, an unmolested Scepter. He started back; and, turning his stern Countenance from the Walls of the City, Far hence, far hence, says he, may the Gods banish all such threatening Calamities! Better that I pass my Life in Exile hated, than that the Capitol should behold me it's Lord. He said; and immediately convenes an Assembly of the People, and aged Senators: But first veils his Horns with the peaceful Laurel, and stands upon a Mount raised by his brave Soldiers. Then, having addressed the Gods, according to ancient Usage, Lo! says he, there is one among you, whom unless you expel the City, he will rise to be King: I name him not, but learn who he is by this Sign; that his Temples are crown'd with Horns. The Prophet foretels, that if he once enter the City, as a Sovereign, he will prescribe Laws to his enslaved Subjects. He might indeed have rush'd in at your open Gates, but this Arm with-held him: tho' none is more strictly united to him by Ties of Blood, than I. Do you, Romans, forbid him your City; or, if he appears worthy of it, load him with heavy Chains: or put an End to all your Fears at once, by the Death of this Tyrant, destin'd you by Fate. Such as are the Murmurs of the blustering East Wind, when he howls among the tufted Pines; or those of the beating Billows, when, from afar, they are heard to lash the sounding Shore; alike was the Uproar of the Multitude. And yet, amidst the confused Tumult of the enraged Populace, one Cry was distinctly heard; Who is he? And they examine one another's Foreheads, and look for the Horns they had been told of. Again Cipus: Here behold the Wretch you want; and, taking

The People all cast their Eyes upon the Ground; and, sad in Thought, (who can believe it?) beheld with Reluctance that renowned Head, so illustrious for it's Merits; nor did they long suffer it to remain without it's Honours, but bind it again with the festival Garland. But the Nobles, because you are forbid to enter the Walls, gave thee, Cipus, by way of Honour, as much Land as, with a Plow drawn by two yok'd Steers, thou could'st enclose from the Rising to the Setting of the Sun; and they grave upon the brazen Posts Horns representing thy wonderful Form, to continue from Age to Age. What you ask here, Romans, you might have asked in a Place less remote from your own City; and ask it still in this Place less remote. Nor is it to Apollo that you must apply for Relief from your Misery, but to the Son of Apollo: Go with happy Auspices, and conduct my Son into your City. When the prudent Senate understood the Commands of the God, they explore in what City the Phœbeian Youth resided, and appoint Deputies to sail for Epidaurus, with the first favourable Wind: Who, soon as they reached the Place in their crooked Bark, waited on the Senate and Grecian Elders, and begg'd they would let them have the healing God, who, by his Presence, might put an End to the Mortality, that reign'd in the Ausonian State; for so the unerring Oracles of Fate had directed. They are divided, and vary in their Opinions: Some plead, that the appointed Aid ought not to be denied them; many oppose this, and are against delivering up the God, the Guardian Protector of their City. While the Time is thus spent in Deliberation, Night succeeds to the fading Light of Day, and the Shadow of the Earth had spread an universal Darkness over the Face of Nature; when, in Sleep, the healing God seem'd to stand before the Bed of the Roman Deputy; but such as he is usually seen in his Temple, holding in his Left Hand a rustick Club, and with his Right smoothing the Hair of his long Beard. Fears; I will come, and leave the Shrine and Temple of this City. Observe only this Serpent, who twines himself in Folds round my Club; and mark him well, that you may be able to know him again. Into his Figure will I change myself; but of Size enlarged, and great as ought the Form of celestial Bodies, when changed, to be. With these Words the God, and with the God and his Words, Sleep departed; and chearing Light succeeded the Flight of Sleep: Returning Aurora had extinguished the lesser Lights of Heaven. The Chiefs perplexed, and full of doubtful Care, repair to the sumptuous Temple of the God; and implore him to express, by celestial Signs, in what Land he chuses to reside. Scarce were their Prayers ended, when the bright God, in Form of a Serpent, adorned with Scales of Gold; and rearing high his lofty Crest, by forerunning Hissings, gave Notice of his Approach; and shook the Statue, the Altars, the Doors, the Marble Pavement, and gilded Roofs, and rais'd himself breast-high, in the Middle of the Temple; and roll'd around his Eyes, that darted Flames of Fire. The Crowd was struck with Terror and Amazement. The Priest, having his sacred Locks adorned with white Fillets, knew the God. The God, lo! the God, he cries; adore him in Silence all that are present. Be seen, O divine Power, for our Good, and, propitious hear the Prayers of thy Votaries. All that are present adore the God, as commanded, all repeat the Words of the Priest; and the Descendants of Æneas too join in this holy Worship with silent Awe, and Purity of Mind. The God consents:

He then glides along the smooth Steps; and, bending back his Head, looks with kind Concern upon his ancient Altars; and, departing, salutes his wonted Habitation, and the Temple where he had so long resided. Thence he sweeps his Bulk along the Ground, strewed with Flowers; bends in Folds, and marches thro' the Middle of the City, to the Port, fenced by a winding Mole. Here he stood; and, seeming with a gracious Aspect to dismiss his Train, and the pious Zeal of the Crowd that followed him, he ascended the Latian Ship. It felt the Weight of the God; and the Romans rejoice to see the Vessel bending under the precious Load. They sacrifice a Bull on the Strand, and loose the twisted Cables, of the Ship, adorned with Garlands: A gentle Gale pushed her on. The God, raised high, and leaning with his Neck on the crooked Stern, surveys from above the azure Deep; and, wafted o'er the smooth Ionian Sea by gentle Zephyrs, reaches the Coast of Italy on the sixth Morn. He passes Lacinia, ennobled by a Temple of the Goddess Juno, and the Scylacean Shore. He next leaves Iapygia, and, steering along, keeps the dangerous Amphissian Rocks at distance on his Left. Then, doubling the Ceraunian Promontory on his Right, coasts along Romechium, Caulon, and Narycia; and passes the narrow Straights of Sicilian Pelorus, and the Isles where Æolus, the Son of Hippotas, reigned, and the Mines of Thence he reaches Capreæ, and the Promontory of Minerva, and the Hill fam'd for the Surrentine Grape, and the City of Hercules, and Stabiæ, and Parthenope formed for a Life of Ease and Retirement, and the Temple of the Cumæan Sibyl. Hence the tepid Bath of Baiæ, and the green Retreats of Linternum offer to their Sight; and Vulturnus, rolling in his Current great Quantities of Sand, and Sinuessæ, abounding in white Snakes, and the marshy Fens of Minturnæ, and where Æneas buried his Nurse, and the Habitation of Antiphates, and Trachas beset with Fens, and the Plains of Circe, and rocky Coast of Antium. As here the Mariners anchored the Vessel, (for the Sea was now rough and stormy) the God unfolds his Spires; and, gliding along in large and numerous Rings, enters the Temple of his Father, that stood upon the yellow Strand. Sea being now calm, the Epidaurian God leaves his Father's Altars; and, quitting the hospitable Temple of Apollo, furrows the Sands along the Coast with his rattling Scales; and, leaning on the Helm, placed his Head on the lofty Stern, 'till he reached Castrum, and the sacred Plains of Lavinium, by the Mouth of the Tiber. Here the People from all Parts, in mingled Crowds, run out to meet him; Fathers, Mothers, and the Virgins appointed to guard Vesta's Flame; and with joyful Cries salute the God. And now Rome, the Mistress of the World, had received him; when, rising up, and waving his Neck, which rested on the Top of the Mast, he looks round for some proper Habitation. The flowing Stream is divided into two Parts by a Piece of Land; which, seated in the Middle between the Arms of the River, that stretch themselves on each Side, is called the Island. Hither the Serpent, Son of Phœbus, gliding from the Latian Pine, repaired; and, re-suming his celestial Shape, put a Period to their Woes, and came a Restorer of Health to the City.

But he was admitted a Stranger into our Temples; Cæsar is adored as a God in his own City: Whom, tho' alike renowned both in Arms and Arts, not Wars ended by Triumphs, his prudent Administration at Home, or the rapid Glory of his Conquests, contributed more to fix among the Stars, than his own

746. Cæsar in urbe sua deus est.] Ovid then, we see, has been as good as his Word. He has conducted this painful Work from the Beginning of the World, to the Age in which he wrote; nor could it indeed have been more happily terminated. The Apotheosis of Julius Cæsar gave him a fine Opportunity of making his Court to Augustus; and that Prince, who had prevailed to have his Predecessor enrolled among the Gods, might hope one Day to receive himself the same Honour, as Ovid here promises. But, as if to sojourn upon Earth were preferable to his being received into Heaven, he promises it not 'till after a long Life. But the divine Honours, paid to Augustus, were not delay'd 'till his Death; they were paid him even during his Life, and Altars were raised to him. He was but Eight and Twenty, according to Appian, when he was rank'd in the Number of the Tutelar Gods, in all the Cities of the Empire. The Romans, who referr'd their Original to Æneas, were pleased to have it believed, that Venus interested herself in the Fate of one of the Descendants of her own Son; and to her was referred the whole Honour of the Apotheosis, the History whereof is thus. Cæsar having been assassinated in the Middle of the Senate, Augustus some Time after established solemn Games to his Honour. As about this Time, according to Suetonius, a new Star, or rather Comet, appeared; it was given out to be the Soul of this great Man, which had taken it's Place among the Stars; and it was added, that Venus herself had Progeny. For of all Cæsar's Acts, none redounds more to his Honour, than that he is the Father of Augustus. Is it a greater Glory to have subdued the Britons environed by the Sea, and urged your victorious Fleet along the seven Channels of the Nile ; to have added the rebellious Numidians, Cinyphian Juba, and Pontus, proud of the Name of Mithridates, to the Empire of Quirinus ; to have merited many, and celebrated some Triumphs, than to have been the Father of so great a Man ; by decreeing to whom the sovereign Rule, Heaven has lavished her Bounty on the human Race. That this Prince therefore might not be a Descendant of meer Mortals, his Father must reach the Skies. Which when the beauteous Mother of Æneas foresaw, and foresaw too the bloody Death that was preparing for the High-Priest, and the combined Arms of the Conspirators, she turned pale ; and said to every God she met, Behold what a Weight of Treachery is prepared against me; with what deep and subtle Arts they assault the only remaining Branch of Dardanian Iulus. Shall I alone be ever harrassed with endless Cares; now wounded by the Calydonian Spear of Tydeus' Son; now mourning the hard Fate of Troy's ill-defended Walls? I have seen my Son, wandering an Exile from Coast to Coast, tossed by stormy Seas, and traversing the gloomy Regions of the Dead. I have seen him engaged in War with Turnus, or rather, to speak without Reserve, with implacable Juno. But why do I now revolve the ancient Calamities of my Race, since present Fear defaces the Memory of past Ills! See you not the impious Swords, sharpened against me? Forbid, Gods! repel the direful Blow! nor extinguish Vesta's sacred Fire, by the Blood of the High-Priest.

In vain does Venus, full of Anxiety, disclose the Complaints all over Heaven, and invoke the Aid of the Gods; who, tho' they can't break thro' the Iron Decrees of the fatal Sisters, give yet no obscure Hints of the approaching Disaster. They tell us, that Arms, rattling amidst a dark Host of Clouds, the Clarion's dreadful Sound, and the Alarm of the Trumpet, heard in the Sky, gave Warning of the hideous Crime. The troubled Image of Phœbus too gave but a faint Light, and Torches were seen to blaze amidst the Stars. Drops of Blood fell from Heaven in Showers, and the Morning-Star, was o'er-spread with a dusky Hue: The Chariot of the Moon was also dyed with Blood. In every Place the

No Victims can allay the Anger of the Gods ; the Fibres foretel, that great Commotions are at hand ; and a wounded Head was found in the Entrails. In the Forum, and round the Domes of the Gods, Night-howling Dogs alarm ; the wandering Ghosts forsake their Seats, and the City is shaken with Earthquakes. Yet these Premonitions of the Gods cannot avert the Treachery, or prevent Cæsar's approaching Doom. The Swords of the Conspirators are drawn in the Temple ; for no Place in the City pleases so much, for perpetrating the Crime and horrid Murder, as the Senate-House. 'Twas now that the Cytherean Goddess, in Anguish, smote her Breast ; and try'd to hide her Hero in the Æthereal Cloud, that had before screened Paris from the Vengeance of Menelaus, and rescued Æneas from the pursuing Sword of Diomed. When thus her Sire : Do you alone, Daughter, hope to controul the unconquer'd Sway of Fate ? Enter yourself the Habitation of the Three Sisters. are now so anxious, has compleated his Term of Life, and passed thro' the Years he ow'd to Earth. To you 'tis granted, that he be received as a God in Heaven, and have Homage paid to him in Temples; and that his Son, who, as the Heir of his Name and Greatness, shall sustain the whole Weight of the public Administration, undertaking a noble Revenge of his Father's Murder, find us, the Gods, propitious to him in his Wars. The Walls of Mutina, invested under his Conduct, shall, vanquished, sue for Peace; Pharsalia shall know him, and Philippi again be drench'd in Gore. A mighty Name shall be subdued in Sicilia's Flood; and the Ægyptian Spouse of a Roman Leader, trusting to the unavailing nuptial Tie, shall fall; and, in vain, flatter herself with subjecting the Capitol to her Canopus. Why name I Africa, or the Nations lying on both Sides the Ocean? Whatever the habitable Earth sustains shall be his: Even the Sea shall submit to his Sway. Having establish'd Peace, he shall turn his Mind to civil Cares; and enact just and equitable Laws, and regulate the Manners of his Subjects by his own Example: And, regarding Ages to come, and the Happiness of his future Race, will appoint a Son, born of his chaste Spouse, to succeed, as Heir of his Name and Rule: Nor, 'till advanced in Years, he reaches the Experience of the Pylian Sage, shall he enter the Æthærial Habitations, or be placed among his kindred Stars. Mean time, snatch the Hero's Spirit from his wounded Body, and change

Searce had he done speaking, when beauteous Venus stood invisible in the Middle of the Senate House; and, snatching the fleeting Soul of her Cæsar from his mangled Limbs, suffered it not to dissolve in Air, but plac'd it among the Stars of Heaven. And, as she bore it, she perceiv'd it to give Light, and glow with new-born Fires. Upwards it sprung from her Bosom; and mounting above the Lunar Sphere, shot behind it a long Trail of Light. Now he shines a Star; and, beholding the glorious Deeds of his Son, owns them to surpass his own; and joys to be thus out-done. And, tho' the Prince himself allows not of this Preference given to his Acts, yet Fame, uncontroll'd, and subject to no Restraint, compels him reluctant, to receive the Homage due; and, in this Instance only, thwarts his Desires. So Atreus yields to the mighty Fame of Agamemnon; thus Theseus surpass'd his Father Ægeus: and Achilles eclips'd the Renown of Peleus. In fine, to make Use of Examples suited to the Names concerned, thus does Saturn himself fall short of the Fame of Jove. Jupiter rules the Realms above, and sways the triple Scepter of the Universe: The Earth is subject to Augustus. Each is a Father and Governor. Grant, ye Gods, Attendants of Æneas, to whom Fire and Sword, submissive, gave Way; and ye native Gods of Italy, and Father Quirinus, and Mars, the common Father of the City and Quirinus; and you, Vesta, held sacred among the Household Gods of Cæsar; and you, domestic Phœbus, to whom a like Homage is paid; and thou, mighty Jupiter, who, high enthron'd, presides over the Tarpeian Towers; and whatever other Gods it may be lawful for a Poet to invoke; slowly may the Day advance, and later than the Term of my Life; when this august Prince, abandoning the World, which he rul'd so well, shall be enroll'd among the Gods; and, propitious, hear the Prayers of his disconsolate Subjects.

And now I have finish'd a Work, which neither the Anger of Jove, nor Fire, nor Steel, nor the consuming Teeth of Time, shall be able to destroy. Come, when it will, the Day, which has no Power but over my Body, and let it finish the doubtful Term of Life: Yet, in my better Part, immortal, I shall soar above the lofty Mansions of the Stars; nor shall my Name ever cease to be in Honour. Wherever Rome shall spread her Dominion over the conquer'd World, my Works will be read by the Nations; and (if the Presages of Poets have aught of Truth) I shall live in Fame thro' all succeeding Ages.
